YANKS CLOSE ON NAZI LIFELINE IN BELGIAN BULGE

Gain in New Drive Below Stavelot.

HOW DIVISIONS FOUGHT.
Correspondents tell how various American divisions fought the Nazi drive; troops at the front view the question of who is responsible for the German breakthru. Stories on pages 3 and 4.

(Maps on pages 5 and 6.)

PARIS, Jan. 7 [Sunday]—(AP).—American troops of Field Marshal Montgomery's allied offensive against the northern flank of the Germans' Belgian bulge yesterday captured Fraiture, less than one-half mile from an important enemy supply route. Other United States units advanced almost one mile and a half in a new attack launched south of Stavelot.

British forces pressed their main drive between Marche and Hotten at the western end of the northern flank altho enemy tanks, at the risk of disaster, pushed them back nearly a mile at Bure, 10 miles southwest of Marche.

In the Bastogne area, the United States 3d army broke up an attempted German counter-attack by artillery fire. The 3d earlier made a two mile gain in north Luxemburg east of Bastogne.

Contain Rhine Spearhead.

To the southeast, field reports said the German spearhead north of Strasbourg not only was contained but had been reduced by United States 7th army attacks. The Germans who had crossed the Rhine north of the Alsatian capital were being hemmed back into a narrow shelf along the west bank of the river.

Doughboys of the 7th compressed the Nazis into the town of Gambsheim, nine miles north of Strasbourg. In blunting the drive, the 7th cleared the Germans from Rohrwiller and Herrlisheim in the interior as well as from Offendorf and Strattmatten along the Rhine bank.

Northwest of this area, the 7th army sheared off and trapped the tip of a German spearhead driven 15 miles into France from the north.

82d Paces New Drive.

The American 1st army, in the new drive on the northern flank, was paced by the 82d air borne division, which jumped off this morning and drove down the west bank of the Salm river southwest of Stavelot. The 30th infantry pushed south on the 82d's west flank against slight opposition. A few miles west heavy fighting raged inside Lierneux, two miles from one of the Germans' two lateral supply routes.

While Von Rundstedt was driving the British from Bure, five miles south of Rochefort, and counter-attacking the 1st army, the United States 3d armored division—one of the authors of the St. Lo breakthru—pounded up to Fraiture.

Eight miles west of Fraiture, another St. Lo veteran outfit, the United States 2d armored division, mopped up Devantave, four miles north of the enemy road center of Laroche. Here the Germans threw in strong armored forces.

Five miles west of Lierneux, the doughboys captured Odiegne.

Nazies' Moves Puzzle Allies.

Von Rundstedt's decision to commit his armor in the deepest portion of the bulge at a time when the allies were drawing the lines tighter at the 12 mile wide waist was a puzzle and a high army officer declared it was "both unmilitary and unlike Von Runstedt."

However, the skilled German marshal was known to have reserves as yet uncommitted altho 30 divisions have been identified.

The United States 3d army, stalled in an attempt to close the pincers north of Bastogne, lashed out both east and west of that town after repelling six more counter-blows yesterday.

Thirteen miles east of Bastogne the 80th division crossed the Sure river and in a two mile advance captured Goesdorf and pressed on into Dahl, two miles south of the northern Luxemburg strongpoint of Wiltz.

Thirteen miles west of Bastogne, other 3d army troops cut a lateral

No Generals to Be Sacked for Nazi Drive

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Jan. 6 (AP).—Correspondents were told today that there would be no sacking of any allied army generals as an aftermath of the German break-thru in the Ardennes.

On the contrary, it was made known that Gen. Eisenhower himself regards the commanders involved in stemming the first impetus of the German onrush and the commanders now cracking down on Field Marshal von Rundstedt's salient as having turned in a remarkable military job.

Admittedly, somewhere the allied command guessed wrong. Correspondents were told a counter-attack was expected, but not a counter-offensive. It had not been thought by army officers, considering the forces at Von Rundstedt's disposal, that he would take as great a gamble as that.

Postpone Placing of Blame.

Instead of trying to put a finger on where the fault might be in that wrong guess, the allied supreme command was represented as much more inclined to wait a few weeks and see whether Von Rundstedt may have made an even more costly guess.

It was Lt. Gen. Hodges' veteran 1st army that was hit by the counter-offensive thru its long, thin right flank while its left flank was beating toward the Roer river. Some rumors had been heard that there might be a change in his command.

But these reports were met at headquarters with a flat and authoritative denial and correspondents were told that Hodges was regarded as having worked wonders in the difficult switch from offensive to defensive.

Bradley and Montgomery Praised.

The two army group commanders to whom Eisenhower gave the job of stopping Von Rundstedt and wresting back the impetus of the attack were given high praise which clearly originated with the supreme commander himself.

Field Marshal Montgomery was declared to have started moving his reserves around to new positions so quickly that his realignment was shaping up neatly at the end of the first 12 hours after the German attack assumed counter-offensive proportions.

Lt. Gen. Bradley was given credit for spot decisions which afterward proved crucial in having halted Von Rundstedt — throwing reserves into Bastogne in time and sending Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army swiftly to the counter-attack.

Inefficient Bill Collector Can't Even Find Himself

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 6 (AP).—An executive asked the 4th regional war labor board to permit him to pay a new bill collector more than had been received by the employe's predecessor. The previous collector had been discharged because his work was unsatisfactory, the business man reported, adding: "On one occasion he was given a bad debt to run down. After spending several days attempting to locate the man, he discovered it was himself he was looking for."

Parisians Fell Park Trees for Fuel

BY ANNE BRUYERE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan 6.—Paris is shivering. The temperature is approaching zero, lakes and canals are frozen. Yet no coal is available for distribution to the population due to lack of transportation. Patrolmen guarding the public parks were tripled today because Parisians got up at night and chopped down the trees for fuel.

The only heated places in town are subway stations and postoffices. As soon as they are open, thin, howling babies, lame old men, noisy children, and mothers with baskets of darning or sacks of vegetables to peel crowd in. Many stay huddled in corners all day. Some read or play cards. Peddlers sell hot water bottles, buns, and sandwiches at black market prices.

Buy Anything of Wood.

Another crowded place is the Hotel Drouout, where old furniture and odds and ends are auctioned. People buy anything that is made of wood. Leather chairs, legless tables, and broken down beds fetch sums that would have furnished apartments before the war.

Old furniture thus bought is destined to be burned in the huge clumsy stoves set up in sumptuous salons.

Schools, Hospitals Unheated.

Even schools and hospitals are not heated. Trees on school property were chopped down long ago. Children as well as teachers arrive for classes in ski suits, bundled in scarves and blankets. The curriculum is reduced so students who attend school in the morning do not return in the afternoon.

In the hospitals, doctors postpone major operations because their fingers are numb. Surgeries are so cold the open wounds of patients steam.

At Pasteur institute, apes and guinea pigs used for experiments die of the cold.

Mannequins shiver as they model backless evening gowns, artists' models refuse to pose nude, and chorus girls' chattering teeth click the rhythm as they dance.

INCH OF SNOW TODAY; MERCURY IS EXPECTED TO DROP TO 10 ABOVE

None of the extremes of precipitation and temperature which hit other sections of the nation appeared likely to be recorded in the Chicago area today. Last night Forecaster G. L. Canaday predicted there would be some snow, possibly an inch or more, and it would be followed by flurries and a drop of the thermometer to about 10 degrees above zero. So far this year there has been some snow each day.

Other sections of the midwest got freezing rain, snow, or both, and a variety of temperatures. There were rising temperatures in the northern lake regions, where the mercury had hit a minimum of 29 below at Land O' Lakes, Wis. The nation's maximum was 77 at Brownsville, Tex.

O. T. Lay, meteorologist in charge of the Chicago weather bureau office, computed the winter's total snowfall since Nov. 23 at 20.8 inches. All precipitation since then has been snow or sleet. In the last four weeks the average temperature has been 17 degrees.

Women's Elastic Panties Adorn Many London Men

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Lots of London men are wearing women's panties. The manager of a men's shop in the Strand revealed he had snapped up a quantity of stepins because they have elastic in the tops, which appeals to slim waisted men who have difficulty keeping up their droopy utility drawers which come only in standard sizes.

Big Volcano Erupts on Kamchatka Peninsula

MOSCOW, Jan. 6 (AP).—Kluchevskaya, huge volcano on the Kamchatka peninsula in eastern Siberia, has been in eruption since Dec. 11, it was learned today. It had erupted in April, 1937, when the flow of lava reached 10 miles.

Ice Challenges New Breaker on Ship Lanes

BY CHARLES BALLENGER.

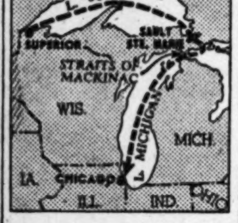
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 6.—The powerful new ice breaker Mackinaw, upon which the navy and coast guard are relying to bring three new cargo ships from Superior, Wis., to Chicago, was in the Sault harbor today, awaiting a crucial test that may answer the ancient hope of lake mariners—midwinter passage thru the ice-locked bottle neck between Lakes Superior and Michigan.



Route of cargo ships.

The Mackinaw, of 5,090 tons and 10,000 horsepower, battered its way thru 12 inches of blue ice in lower St. Mary's river and the Sault harbor two days ago on its maiden ice breaking voyage from Cheboygan, Mich. It is likewise expected to smash a path for the cargo ships to Lake Michigan after they have reached the Soo locks.

Press Thru Thin Ice.

The cargo ships Pemiscot, Hidalgo and William Nelson, led by the ice breaker Woodrush, are expected to reach Whitefish Bay, 75 miles above the upper St. Mary's river, about 10 a. m. tomorrow. They left Superior, where they were built, at 9 a. m. today but were not expected to encounter much difficulty with the light film ice on the main body of Lake Superior.

The ships will find from 6 to 8 inches of ice in Whitefish bay but two coast guard cutters, the Sundew and the Chaparral, are smashing back and forth in the bay and upper river to keep open a path for the cargo vessels. Windrows of drifting ice have piled up more than 5 feet in some places and the task has been made no easier by a 15 to 20 degree below zero temperature.

When the cargo ships, which eventually will be floated down the Mississippi river to New Orleans, La., reach the Soo locks, they will be picked up by the Mackinaw for the treacherous trip thru the lower St. Mary's river and straits of Mackinac to Lake Michigan.

Most Powerful Breaker.

Coast guard officials say the Mackinaw, with power far exceeding any other breaker ever built, will encounter solid ice 6 to 10 inches thick on its return trip and will be forced to shoulder its way thru windrows reaching seven feet in some areas.

Built at a cost of 10 million dollars in Toledo, O., and commissioned last Dec. 20, the Mackinaw is equipped with the most modern ice breaking machinery known. The ship is about three times as big as a modern destroyer and almost as large as a light cruiser.

It has two stern propellers and one bow propeller, which is used to chop the ice and wash loose ice ahead of it. Thus, instead of breaking the ice into large floes, which would be dangerous to the thin shelled cargo ships, the Mackinaw will chop the ice into cubes.

The cargo ships cost about 2 million dollars each. If they reach Chicago, they will be floated high on special pontoons for the Mississippi river trip.

CARGO AIRPLANE SETS RECORD FOR NON-STOP FLIGHT TO NEW YORK

Capt. McIlwraith.

A new record for nonstop commercial flight between Chicago and New York was set on Friday when a Transcontinental and Western Air cargo plane made the journey in 2 hours and 48 minutes, C. E. McCollum, general manager here, said yesterday.

The cargo flight, known as the Sky Express, broke the previous record set Dec. 20 when a TWA plane flew the trip in 2 hours and 57 minutes.

The plane was piloted by Capt. Andrew McIlwraith of Western Springs, with W. J. Rollins of Hinsdale as co-pilot. The plane averaged 275 miles an hour.

ORDER APPLIES TO 5 MILLION IN DEFERRED LIST

Physical Standards Lowered by Army.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—National selective service tonight ordered the induction of occupationally deferred men, including those below general army physical standards, who quit their essential jobs without draft board approval.

Local boards will be directed henceforth to call up for induction not only specified numbers of registrants for general service, but at the same time "specified numbers of men who do not meet the physical standards for general service but who are acceptable for military service under the lower standards because they left the jobs for which they were deferred without local board permission."

It does not apply to registrants who left their employment prior to Dec. 12, 1944.

Follows F. D. R. Request.

The action followed swiftly on President Roosevelt's message to congress recommending new job controls. He urged national service legislation, action to make more effective use of 4-Fs, and a draft of nurses for the military forces.

Designed to halt "job skipping" once a deferment has been obtained, the order makes 5 million men, aged 18 thru 37 subject to military duty under what selective service calls "drastically lower" physical standards.

Special Draft Quotas.

The army will fix special draft quotas for this group, and such inductees will be assigned to other than regular army duties. The army did not divulge the lower standards or the proposed size of the special draft calls.

It was understood that draft boards would not be required to fill these special quotas if "job skippers" were not available. In other words, if the action produces the desired effect, few men will be inducted under it.

The new tightening of the government's grip on man power covers all men deferred for occupational reasons, except those in agriculture, whose deferment is protected by the Tydings amendment.

Men who left the jobs for which they were deferred and took less essential work were ordered reclassified recently, but the new action plugs a loophole by covering registrants whose physical impairment gave the government no hold over them.

Covers Six Classes.

The action covers men classed as 2-A, 2-B, 2-AL, 2-BL, 2-AF, and 2-BF. Those who leave their jobs without draft board approval are to be classified 1-A, 1-AO, or 4-E.

Class 2-A designates a man necessary in essential civilian activity; 2-B a man necessary to the war production program; 2-AL a man in 2-A who has been found fit only for limited military service; 2-BL a man in 2-B who has been found fit only for limited military service; 2-AF a man in 2-A who has been found unfit for any military service; 2-BF a man in 2-B who has been found unfit for

Packer's Wife Gagged, Tied on Bed, Beaten

Mrs. Ruth Randall Mayer, 34, of 2247 Orrington av., Evanston, wife of Carl G. Mayer, vice president of Oscar Mayer & Co., packers, was severely beaten in an upstairs bedroom of her home yesterday by a man who entered the house by posing as a radio repairman.

After following her to the kitchen after asking for a drink of water, Mrs. Mayer told police, he threatened her with a knife and forced her to accompany him to the bedroom. In the bedroom, she said, he compelled her to lie face down on the bed, bound her hands with electric light cord, and gagged her with a pair of gloves and a towel. Then, she said, he beat and kicked her until she rolled off the bed.

Mrs. Mayer's three children, Catherine, 5, Barbara, 4, and Carlyn, 1, were on the first floor of the home.

Threatens Her Children.

While the man was beating and kicking her, Mrs. Mayer said, he threatened to kill the three children if she made any outcry. After he left, Mrs. Mayer called police, who removed her to Evanston hospital. Dr. D. E. Hansen said she apparently did not suffer a skull fracture, altho an X-ray examination will be made. He added that she is suffering from bruises and shock, and there is considerable swelling about her head. Both her eyes are swollen shut. Dr. Hansen declared she had not been raped.

Mrs. Mayer said the man, who was short and wore an overcoat but no hat, rang the bell and said he was from an Evanston radio shop, and had come to inspect the radio. The Mayer radio recently was returned from a repair shop, and Mrs. Mayer said she assumed the stranger was from the same shop.

The man asked her for a screw driver and she brought him one, she said.

Follows Her to Kitchen.

Then, while tinkering with the radio, he asked her for a glass of water. When Mrs. Mayer went to the kitchen to get him one, she told police, he followed her and threatened her with a paring knife which he picked up from the kitchen table.

"Don't scream," he told her. "I want some money."

Mrs. Mayer said she told him he could have all the money she had in the house, but that he then asked where her bedroom was, and when she replied, "Upstairs," forced her to accompany him there.

Refers to Shop Error.

Her husband told police that when the Mayer radio was repaired recently at the Evanston Radio and Gift shop, 1711 Sherman av., the wrong radio was returned thru an error. The error was rectified the next day. The man who rang the doorbell yesterday referred to the error.

Lt. Anton Schultz and Sgt. Hubert Kelsh of the Evanston police were investigating recent employes of an Evanston transfer company which makes all pickups and deliveries for the radio shop.

John Dragomier, proprietor of the shop, told police that no one answering the description of Mrs. Mayer's assailant ever has been employed in his shop.

Big Distilleries to Renew Production in Scotland

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—The big Campbeltown whisky distilleries in Scotland, idle since 1942, will resume production soon. The barley quota is expected to be sufficient for three or four months of distilling.

Chicago Exceeds War Bond Quotas

Chicago, only major city in the United States to meet its quota in last summer's fifth war loan drive, has done it again by oversubscribing even higher quotas in the sixth war loan, Francis M. Knight, drive chairman, disclosed last night. Similarly, Illinois has exceeded its quota in the sixth war loan.

Particularly significant in the recent drive is the city's achievement in exceeding its quota of E bond sales, the type sold to small purchasers.

E Sales of 120 Millions.

The figures: Total sales in Chicago and Cook county, $1,224,732,000 or $388,572,000 above the quota of $836,160,000 or 146.4 per cent. E bond sales totaled $120,241,000 or 112.7 per cent of the $106,666,000 quota. This also sets a new record in percentage of quota sold in this category anywhere.

Purchases by individuals in city and county totaled $272,532,000 or 115.7 per cent of the $235,596,000 quota in this division.

State-wide sales totaled $1,532,232,000 or 148 per cent of the 1 billion, 34 million dollar quota, said Renslow P. Sherer, state war finance committee head.

State E Sales Over Top.

This was well above the previous record of $1,470,944,000. State-wide E bond sales also set a record, totalling $193,749,000, or 111.3 per cent of the quota. State-wide sales to individuals hit 114 per cent of quota with a total of $399,705,000. Corporation purchases were $1,132,527,000, or 166 per cent of the quota.

The achievements of Chicago and Illinois were the more remarkable because higher quotas had been set for the sixth war loan drive, compared with other major cities, because Chicago had gone over the top in every category in the fifth war loan, while other cities had not.

WORK OR FIGHT! EVERYTHING IS AT STAKE: F.D.R.

Forced Labor, New Sacrifices Asked.

TEXT OF ADDRESS.
The text of President Roosevelt's message to congress will be found on pages 12 and 13.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Calling on the American people for greater exertion and sacrifice, including compulsory service for war work, and pouring oil on the troubled waters of relations with Great Britain and Russia, President Roosevelt today sent to congress a 10,000 word message of hope for a Happy New Year.

The year 1945, he said, can record the greatest achievement in history. It can record the end of the war in Europe with the destruction of the Nazi-Fascist power and bring the end of the Pacific war in sight with the Japs beaten back to their home islands. Most important of all, said Mr. Roosevelt, 1945 can and must bring an international organization to preserve world peace.

Perfectionism, the President thought, like isolation, or imperialism, or power politics, might obstruct international peace. Because we thought the Versailles peace imperfect we refused to join the league of nations, thereby, said Mr. Roosevelt, preferring "international anarchy to international coöperation with nations" that did not see eye to eye with us. If we do that again, he prophesied, a third world war will be inevitable.

Calls for Labor Draft.

The President's proposals of legislation follow:

1. The drafting immediately of men and women for work in war factories.

2. Pending such legislation, authority to employ men in the 4-F draft class in whatever capacity is needed for the prosecution of the war.

3. Universal military training after the war.

4. Measures to assure 60 million jobs after the war by full employment in private industry, but with the government stimulating purchasing power and increasing export trade.

5. Government aid to small enterprises and financing of "productive business expansion" for which private financing is unavailable.

6. Stimulation of enterprise thru the development of numerous great river basins along the lines of the Tennessee river valley authority.

7. Construction of thousands of airports and overhaul of the whole national highway system.

Housing Plan Given.

8. A housing program to provide a "decent home for every family," extensive rebuilding of cities, and rehabilitation of farms.

9. Expansion of the social security system together with "adequate health and education programs."

10. A program to maintain a national income high enough to provide for an "orderly retirement" of the public debt.

11. Tax modification at the end of the war in Europe to encourage investment in private enterprise, including the reduction or elimination of too burdensome consumption taxes.

12. Drafting of nurses, of whom 20,000 are required to meet the shortage at the battle fronts.

Admits Arms Shortage.

The message, in which Mr. Roosevelt outlined his hopes and ideals, confessed the shortages of army equipment, which were concealed before the election.

It was read before a joint session of congress in the house chamber. The reading by the house reading clerk, George J. Maurer, consumed more than an hour. About 400 of the 531 senators and representatives were present. They heard the message without any applause or other demonstration, except for brief handclapping at its conclusion.

Changes Radio Greeting.

The president read a condensed version of his message on the radio tonight. Departing from his customary salutation, "My friends," or "My fellow Americans," he opened his radio address with the greeting, "ladies and gentlemen."

In his radio address, Mr. Roosevelt included a statement of the American need of the friendship of our allies and read this excerpt from an editorial in the Stars and Stripes, the army newspaper in Europe:

"For the holy love of God let's listen to the dead. Let's learn from the living. Let's join ranks against the foe. The bugles of battle are heard again above the bickering."

"That," said Mr. Roosevelt, "is the demand of our fighting men. We cannot fail to heed it."

The message to the joint session was the usual report on the state of the union required by the constitution. The session had been called primarily for the canvass of the electoral vote and the official pronouncement that Franklin D. Roosevelt had been chosen President and Harry S. Truman Vice President for the four years beginning Jan. 20.

The President reviewed the thrilling record of our victories over the axis in 1944 ending in "a setback for our arms" in Belgium, from which, however, he said the allied armies have recovered as a result of Gen. Eisenhower's capacity for command. He expressed complete confidence in Eisenhower.

Critical Phase Beginning

An important military announcement was the President's disclosure that "large new French forces" are now being equipped by the United States for combat duties.

The "most critical phase of the war" is now beginning, said Mr. Roosevelt, asserting that, with everything we are and everything we have at stake, everything will be given to win the ultimate victory, whatever the cost, albeit our losses will be heavy.

In the realm of foreign policy the President reaffirmed faith in the Atlantic Charter as a statement of aims, condemned power politics, ignored Stalin's appropriation of Polish territory, but inveighed against interference with eventual self-determination of the form of government of small countries. He bespoke tolerance of existing sources of allied friction, asserting that the most important consideration is the creation of a world peace organization that will correct injustices now at issue.

Compulsory Labor Sought.

Mr. Roosevelt reminded congress that it failed to enact the compulsory war labor legislation he recommended last year. This time, faced by munitions shortages and increased war production demands, he urged more earnestly than he did last year a war labor draft that the big labor organizations oppose.

He contended it is not too late in the war for such an innovation because the closer we come to the end of the war the more pressing becomes the need of sustained war production to deliver the final blow to the enemy.

He submitted three arguments for compulsory war service — that it would provide workers where and when needed; that it would demonstrate to men who are fighting that we are giving our total effort, and that it would convince the Germans and Japs that we are not getting half-hearted and ready to make a negotiated peace.

British Policy Cited.

The President said the powers under such legislation would be invoked only to the extent "absolutely required" by military necessity, remarking that Britain had found it necessary to resort to compulsion in rare instances only.

Mr. Roosevelt sought to prepare the country for a grueling war yet to come, commenting that the Germans will not be beaten till the last one surrenders. He warned against divisive enemy propaganda "made in Germany," asserting that "we shall resume the attack" and despite temporary setbacks will fight until Germany is completely defeated.

Reviewing the first phase of the war devoted to defensive operations and deployment of our forces overseas, the President found satisfaction in the strategy adopted and the rejection of urgings to "throw Britain and Russia to the Nazi wolves and concentrate against the Japanese."

He had unstinted praise for the fighting ability of our men and for their leadership in battle. Team work between the army and navy, he said, was demonstrated by the 24 hour switch in war plans by Adm. Nimitz and Gen. MacArthur whereby advantage was taken of the opportunity to invade Leyte.

New Tank Developed.

As if in answer to the criticism that German tanks are superior to American, the President said a new American tank has been developed with a "gun more powerful than any yet mounted on a fast moving vehicle." He did not say whether they are yet being turned out, asserting, however, that the army will need many thousands of them this year. He emphasized that unless we keep ahead of our enemies in developing new weapons we shall suffer in increased casualties.

To meet the demand for production of such weapons, Mr. Roosevelt implored men and women not already employed in essential war work to get war jobs. This is no time to quit war jobs, he said.

The critical shortages he enumerated are in artillery, ammunition, cotton duck, bombs, tires, tanks, heavy trucks, and B-29 bombing planes. Labor shortages have delayed navy production of bombardment ammunition, a huge program for production of rockets, construction of cruisers, carriers, and aircraft.

Scraping Bottom of Barrel.

The navy direly needs also, said Mr. Roosevelt, repair workers and repair parts. And on top of all these is the shortage looming in replacements for the armed forces. The bottom of the barrel of fighting man power under 26 is being scraped. Increased replacements will take men now deferred for work in war industry, he said.

The President visualized a peace not of governments but of peoples which will be difficult to attain and toward which the unconditional surrender of the enemy will be a first step only.

For our own security, contended Mr. Roosevelt, we must exercise our power and influence in support of the principles of the Atlantic Charter. This declaration, he cautioned, does not provide rules easy of application to "every one of this war torn world's tangled situations" but it is useful and essential to have principles "toward which we can aim."

Mistakes Inevitable.

As the President viewed the matter, there are bound to be mistakes and disappointments in the making of peace, but more important is an international order that will maintain peace and realize eventually "more perfect justice between nations." To attain this end we should not exploit or exaggerate differences with our allies over the liberated territories which would embarrass a better settlement or the establishment of international machinery which could rectify any mistakes that might be made.

The situations in Greece and Poland Mr. Roosevelt pronounced difficult for the United States which has obligations to the exiled governments, the underground leaders, and to Britain and Russia, which came closer than did America to annihilation by the axis. Taking no notice of the territorial dispute, the President concentrated on the question of Stalin's efforts to impose a Russian controled government on Poland.

While Britain and Russia have joined the United States in pledging the right of all peoples to choose their form of government, the President said that what with the internal dissension and the absence of many Poles as war prisoners or enforced laborers in Germany, it is difficult to guess what form of government they want.

Then adding what appeared to be an admonition to Russia, he said we and our allies should use our influence to the end that provisional authorities [presumably the Russian sponsored Lublin government] should not block eventual self-determination of the form of government.

DRAFT OF MEN WHO QUIT WAR JOBS ORDERED

any military service; 1-A available for military service; 1-AO a conscientious objector available for noncombat military service, and 4-E a conscientious objector available for work of national importance but nonmilitary.

Selective service estimated there were about 4,256,000 registrants in 2-A and 2-B and about 847,000 in classes 2-AL, 2-BL, 2-AF, and 2-BF.

Veterans Exempt.

The provisions were not made binding upon veterans honorably discharged from the army or navy, and provision was made for other registrants whose job transfers could be justified for special reasons.

Local boards were instructed that they could accept a United States employment service referral card as evidence that a job switch would be in the interest of the war effort.

It was disclosed unofficially that the army would not take men with defects that obviously disqualify them for any form of military service.

There was talk on Capitol hill of depriving such inductees of the right to normal veterans' benefits, but the order was silent on that point.

New Work Bill.

Chairman May [D., Ky.] introduced for the house military committee a "work or fight" measure aimed at all men between 18 and 45.

His bill would require every male between those ages to work at some job listed as necessary by selective service officials or face the draft. It followed the recommendations made to the committee by Col. Francis V. Keesling Jr. of selective service headquarters.

To meet previous objections over nonmilitary use of the men, the legislation provides that they shall not be used outside the army or navy "except upon certification by the director of war mobilization and reconversion after consultation with his labor and management advisory committee."

While doing military or naval work, the men would receive standard service pay. If assigned to industrial jobs where there was an acute need for them, presumably they would receive prevailing wage rates but the government would retain the excess over the amount of service compensation.

Senate Bill Introduced.

In the senate Sen. Bailey [D., N. C.] reintroduced for himself and Sen. Brewster [R., Me.] an amendment to the selective service act, which would make any registrant between 18 and 45 who left a farm or war plant without permission of his local board subject to immediate induction into the armed forces.

The measure would give War Mobilizer Byrnes authority to certify areas of man power shortage. The selective service would maintain an inventory of deferred persons, matching the man power requirements against the selective service inventory.

Registrants who were inducted under terms of the senate proposal would be assigned to labor battalions or other military work in this country or abroad.

REPORTS $900 ROBBERY.

John F. Stratton, 55, of New York, reported to police yesterday that he had been robbed of $900 and a $150 watch by a man wearing a soldier's uniform whom he met on a train. Stratton said he fell asleep after the two drank together in the Del Prado hotel and when he awoke the soldier and his valuables were missing.

FARM WORKERS TO TAKE DRAFT EXAMS JAN. 15

Physical examinations of Illinois' deferred agricultural workers in the 18 thru 25 years bracket will begin at the induction station in Chicago on Jan. 15 in accordance with directives from national draft headquarters.

Paul G. Armstrong, state director, ordered all Illinois local boards to review classifications of such registrants with physical examinations as a first step.

All class 2-C registrants in the given age bracket will get the pre-induction physical examinations. The local board will determine whether a registrant, if found acceptable, will be reclassified as available for military service or whether the farm deferment will be continued, Armstrong said.

Armstrong said all registrants will have opportunity to appeal local board rulings. He said the number of men to be affected in Illinois could not be estimated because each case is considered on individual merits and classification statistics are restricted. He declined to estimate the length of time required to examine all 2-C registrants.

Strikers to Return After Ban on Nazi Prisoners

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 6 (AP).—Some 150 employes of the American Box Board Co., who walked out four days ago in protest against working with German prisoners of war, agreed to return to work Monday after it was announced the prisoners had been withdrawn. The workers promised they would work extra hours and redouble their efforts to meet production schedules. They charged the prisoners were "insolent, inefficient, and goldbrickers," and had whitewashed swastikas on the walls.

HOW YANK UNITS HASTILY THROWN IN HELD UP NAZIS

Surrounded Troops Defy German Armor.

BY EDWARD D. BALL.

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, Jan. 6 (AP).—Troops of the 83d infantry division helped to blunt the tip of the German thrust into Belgium and now are biting back into the enemy bulge on the 1st army front.

Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macon's doughboys played their part in the town of Rochefort out of a confused situation in which the Germans were more confused than the Americans.

The 83d went into action around Rochefort the night of Dec. 28, after a truck borne dash from the Roer river front thru the German, Netherlands and Belgian countryside.

Company Gets 'Lost.'

During the night, company B, 329th regiment, commanded by Lt. Maurice L. Hill of Booneville, Miss., knifed into the town, while other division units crowded to the river outside Rochefort. For the next two days the Germans laid down massive artillery, tank and infantry fire from their part of the town. Company B took to the cellars.

The division lost radio contact with the company and sent a six man patrol to investigate. The patrol did not return. The division laid down a white phosphorous screen to cover the company's withdrawal on the off chance it still existed. And not only did the company come out—it had sustained only three casualties.

Germans Also Pull Out.

The Germans took the phosphorous to mean a major attack was coming. They, too, withdrew during the night. The doughboys walked in the next morning.

Pvt. Wilbert Janke of Sheboygan, Wis., answered a Germans' shouted demand for surrender with a burst from his automatic rifle.

"There was plenty of shooting and killing," said Janke. "But the Germans, not us, were on the receiving end."

'OLD GRAVEL VOICE' HAPPY

BY HAL BOYLE.

WITH THE U. S. 2D ARMORED DIVISION, Jan. 6 (AP).—"Old Gravel Voice" is happy again. His "hell on wheels" tankmen are belting back the Germans—after an heroic action that saved the American armies from being cut in two.

Maj. Gen. Ernest Harmon, who has directed the killing and capture of more Nazi troops than any other division commander, is spearheading the American drive across the enemy salient to Bastogne with his 2d armored division. His men have taken several hundred prisoners and reliberated a half dozen Belgian villages in weather that would bother a polar bear.

They are back in combat after only three days rest. The "hell on wheels" division, after a spectacular hundred mile night march to the battle scene, halted the great Nazi drive only three miles from the river goal.

Knock Out 69 Tanks.

Here is a box score of the four day battle:

Enemy losses—69 tanks, 33 artillery pieces taken intact, 211 armored cars and truck, more than 1,200 dead, and 1,213 prisoners.

Second armored division losses—four Sherman tanks and light casualties.

"And a good number of these were from respiratory diseases rather than battle wounds," said Capt. Harry Volk.

COOKS AND BAKERS FIGHT

BY WILLIAM BONI.

WITH U. S. THIRD ARMORED DIVISION, Jan. 6 (AP). — The 3d armored division, which was the first to cross the German border and the first to make a German town, is out in front again in the new offensive.

The commander is Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose of Denver, Cal. Side by side with the 2d armored division, Gen. Rose's tanks and armored infantrymen are snaking forward over icy roads. They fought yesterday into the outskirts of Liei Neux.

Clean Up Chutists.

One of the third's combat commands under Brig. Gen. Doyle O. Hickey, Camden, Ark., helped clean up enemy parachutists dropped south of Monschau, while the other combat command under Brig. Gen. Trumane Boudinot of Beverly Hills, Cal., operated with the 30th infantry division. This combination accounted for the wholesale bag of German tanks and other material in the Laggieze pocket west of Stavelot.

From there the bulk of the division's strength was shifted to the Hotton sector, where valuable work in halting the Nazi advance was done. Hotton was defended against a series of Nazi armored attacks by an impromptu task force, including cooks, bakers, mechanics, signalmen, engineers, MPs and headquarters personnel.

PENNSYLVANIANS TOUGH

BY LEWIS HAWKINS.

WITH U. S. 3D ARMY, Jan. 6 (AP).—When the Germans see troops wearing the red keystone insignia from now on they had better be prepared for the roughest kind of going. That red insignia, which the Germans call the "bloody bucket," marks the 28th infantry division, a former Pennsylvania national guard unit.

Temporarily the 28th was shattered as a fighting force, but it won precious time for the rest of the allied forces. It suffered losses in personnel and equipment, but it was no annihilation.

Now as a new and honored member of Lt. Gen. Patton's fighting team, it is going back into battle. The wearers of the "bloody bucket" have many memories. Among them are:

The voice of a young captain speaking over the radio: "Down to our last grenades. We've blown everything there is to blow except this radio. It goes next. I don't mind dying. I don't mind taking a beating. But we will never give in to these bastards."

Then his sender clicked off for the last time.

Artillery in Foxholes.

The order that went down to another surrounded unit to quit fighting and try to slip as many men as possible thru the enemy lines, and the answer that came back by radio, "We can't get out, but we'll make 'em pay."

Men like Corp. Ben Bertram of Chicago, who actually had the experience of a German company bivouacing around him while he slept, but who slipped out and finally got back to fight again after four days of foodless wandering.

HATCHET MEN STICK IT OUT

BY TOM YARBROUGH.

WITH THE 1ST ARMY, Jan. 6 (AP).—The 84th [Rail Splitter] division, consisting mostly of men from southern states, got its third crack at the Germans in the American counter-offensive.

The 84th cut its battle teeth with the capture of Geilenkirchen in November. It was hacking against the Siegfried line when the German breakthru in Belgium demanded its services farther south.

Brig. Gen. Alexander R. Bolling, division commander, led the way, blandly motoring thru a little town he did not know was held by the Germans.

"Orphans in a Storm."

The Rail Splitters went into action in the defense of Marche and Rochefort. The Germans have nicknamed the soldiers the "hatchet men," after seeing their divisional insignia—an ax stuck in a rail—and seeing how they sliced thru pillboxes.

In defensive fighting around Marche and Rochefort the men of the 84th were like orphans in a storm, with nobody on the left, nobody on the right, and the Germans on a rampage. But they stuck and Von Rundstedt failed to get thru to road centers.

YANKS CAPTURE U. S. GUN

WITH THE 1ST ARMY, ARBREFONTAINE, Belgium, Jan. 5 [Delayed]. — (AP). — The doughboys and their officers fighting from house to house in Arbrefontaine today suffered some of the heaviest casualties in the history of this outfit. The Germans are not giving up a foot of ground they don't fight for.

Lt. Col. Edward Krause of Green Bay, Wis., is the executive officer of one regiment.

Maj. George H. MacCauley of Houston, Tex., said American troops had captured an American anti-tank gun with which the Germans knocked out two of our Sherman tanks before their position was overrun. He said one enemy gunner was found to be wearing an American armored force hooded jacket and coveralls.

LONDONER SEES V-2'S TRAIL AS IT BEGINS TRIP

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—An air raid warden in southeast London said today he saw the trail of a German 10 ton V-2 rocket as it left its launching site in enemy held territory.

"The sun was just rising," said the warden, C. B. Pritchett, "when to the northeast I saw a zig-zag vapor trail lit up as if it were reflecting the sun's rays. It seemed to rise and merge itself into a bank of clouds. It was visible for almost two minutes."

The German's war bulletin for the first time in weeks omitted reference today to fire by V-2s.

WHO LET NAZIS THRU? HERE ARE VIEWS OF YANKS

Can't Put the Blame on Any One Man.

BY WES GALLAGHER.

WITH U. S. FORCES IN BELGIUM, Jan. 6 (AP).—Who, if anyone, has been responsible for the allied western front reverses?

Why have the Germans, estimated to have fewer than a third as many men, one-fourth as many guns, and an airforce one-sixth as large, not only been able to halt the allied attack but also to snatch the initiative?

Opinions of fighting men at the front may help the reader to draw his own conclusions.

One fact is that some American commander accepted the responsibility for keeping the Ardennes front lightly manned in hope that the Germans would not attack. Another is that allied intelligence of German intentions failed completely.

Pass Responsibility Along.

The first responsibility rested with the corps commander of the Ardennes area. It was up to him to tell his army commander that he considered his forces insufficient to do the job and demand more. Perhaps he did that; if so, the fact has not come to light.

If he did, Lt. Gen. Hodges, commander of the 1st army, accepted the responsibility. He could shift troops from other parts of his front without consulting any one else. This was not done. Or he could have requested the army group commander to furnish him more troops and pass on the responsibility. In this case, it would be up to Lt. Gen. Bradley to accept the responsibility. Bradley, in turn, could pass it on to the supreme command.

However, it is unlikely that the matter went beyond the army commander, altho certainly Eisenhower and Bradley both knew of the situation.

Intelligence a Failure.

The error in intelligence cannot be laid to any one man. Both the Americans and British had been consistent in underrating the Germans. The allies have many sources of information such as prisoners, spies, air reconnaisance, and deserters, all working independently. All apparently failed to detect Von Rundstedt's buildup for the offensive.

Allied military chiefs expected the Germans to collapse in this area. On this basis commitments were made to other theaters of war.

When the Germans did not collapse and western front requirements went up instead of down, this resulted in considerable dislocation of supplies and a gradual upset in the mental attitude of every one from privates to generals.

Lacks Coördinated Punch.

Despite this, the allies have tremendous superiority in every type of arm. Present estimate of the number of German troops from Switzerland to Holland is so small as to shock any one knowing the power opposing them. However, even if these estimates were doubled the allies still would have great superiority.

Why then, have the allies failed to smash German defenses?

Von Rundstedt proved that weather was not the major factor by launching his attack in the worst weather.

Certainly since the Germans regrouped and held along the west wall, allied strategy had lacked imagination and coördinated punch.

Win Limited Success.

Attacks have been made on the west wall, but they have been head-on smashes, depending on overwhelming power. Punches have been made here and there along the whole line, first by the 1st army, which failed to get thru to the Rhine, then by the 3rd army, which overcame Metz; then by the 6th army group, which cleared a large part of the Alsace pocket; then by the 1st and 9th armies' smash to the Roer river. All have been rule-book attacks.

There has been a feeling by privates and officers that these attacks were foredoomed to meet limited success and that they were not the great blows to finish Germany. They had been accepted as dirty tasks which must be done this winter as preludes to larger operations.

Germans Not Surprised.

There has been none of that feeling which characterized the offensive out of the Normandy pocket, when every man was confident he was going to smash the Germans in France and send them fleeing toward Germany.

This spirit of limited success has been largely promoted by the feeling of officers and men that the Germans are not going to be caught by surprise with a sudden thrust.

In no case is there evidence that recent American offensives surprised the Germans. In every case they were ready with the best troops in the right places, and progress was slow and costly until we had to be halted for regrouping.

Germans Given Time.

These head-on blows allowed the Germans to regain the initiative without the allies realizing it. Von Rundstedt was holding off these head-on smashes with one hand while secretly gathering forces together for an attack of his own.

The lack of coördinated all-out effort, which would have engaged the attention of all Germans and committed all Nazi troops, allowed the German high command men and time to strike back.

That is the situation as seen by many weeks of personal observation and talks with hundreds of officers and men. It is only fair to add that these men have what is known as "the little picture" of the European war. They don't know what is in the "big picture" of the supreme command, which may or may not contain many potential surprises.

NAZIS LAY MASS DUTCH KILLING TO ALLIED GUNS

LONDON, Jan. 6 [Reuters].—Berlin issued an official statement today on allied reports that the Germans herded 135 men, women, and children into the town's hall at Heusden, Holland, on Nov. 5, and blew it up, burying all the victims.

The statement as quoted by the D. N. B. news agency attributed the disaster to allied shelling. It said a large part of the population had been sheltered in the cellars of the hall, which collapsed under the allied bombardment.

"German sappers immediately reopened the entrance and helped the population to leave, while a medical orderly aided the injured," the statement said.

YANKS CLOSE ON NAZI LIFELINE IN BELGIAN BULGE

New 1st Army Drive Gains Below Stavelot.

road and reached a point only two miles east of St. Hubert, at the southwestern corner of Von Rundstedt's Belgian positions.

The situation in northeastern France, critical yesterday, turned better today as front dispatches said the rallying 7th army had cut off the tip of the German push at Wingen, nine and a half miles south of the Maginot line stronghold of Bitche.

There, where the Germans had punched to within 12 miles of the vital Saverne gap, 500 of the enemy were trapped in a ring of steel, Associated Press Correspondent Robert Wilson said.

[German broadcasts, on the contrary, claimed a maximum penetration of 12½ miles south of Bitche, which would put them only eight and a half miles from Saverne.]

Supreme headquarters in its bulletin said this force had been "virtually disposed of."

Battle in Gambsheim.

Fighting still raged in Gambsheim, eight miles north of Strasbourg. At Offendorf, two miles farther north, the Germans had crossed the Rhine in battalion strength.

A force of 400 Germans was being hemmed in and mopped up only five miles north of Strasbourg.

The 7th, lashing against the flanks of the Bitche breakthru, captured Philippsbourg, eight miles southeast of Bitche. Eastward to the Rhine only small enemy patrol action was reported.

In the Saar, the 95th division announced the capture of 300 prisoners yesterday in a limited drive from its Saarlautern bridgehead.

In Holland, the Canadian 1st army sent patrols across the river near Hausden, and the Germans probed the allied line across the Maas [Meuse] in eastern Holland.

Supreme headquarters announced that the Germans had lost at least 100,000 soldiers killed, wounded, or captured since they launched their offensive Dec. 16, and said that allied losses—mostly Americans—were nowhere near as heavy.

At least 685 of the 900 tanks with which the Germans drove into Belgium and Luxembourg have been knocked out and 22,000 prisoners have been captured, headquarters said.

IDENTIFY 7 U. S. DIVISIONS IN 1ST ARMY DRIVE

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Jan. 6 (AP).—Consorship was lifted today on the following American divisions in the United States 1st army's current assault against the north flank of the German's Belgian salient:

The 82d air borne, the 2d and 3d armored, the 30th, 83d, 84th, and part of 75th infantry.

The 82d's parachute and glider troops are operating under command of the 18th air borne corps, which is headed by Maj. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway. Ridgeway was commander of the 82d from Aug. 15, 1942, until he took over the corps command Aug. 10, 1944. The 7th corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, and the 5th corps also are in action.

Yugoslavs Put In Bid for Trieste and Fiume

LONDON, Jan. 6.—There is no way of "insuring lasting peace between Yugoslavia and Italy other than for Trieste and Fiume, which constitute a single geographic and economic unit in which the Slavs are a majority, to be joined to Yugoslavia, with a full guarantee of linguistic rights to the Italian minority," Dr. Josip Smodlaka, commissioner of foreign affairs of the Yugoslav national liberation committee, declared tonight

U. S. Army Attacks Bite Into German Salient

WAR LOST, HIDE ASSETS, NAZIS TELL INDUSTRY

ON THE WEST FRONT, Jan. 6 [Reuters].—The Nazi party already has informed German industrialists that the was "is practically lost." German industry has been told that it must create a strong industrial empire abroad to carry out plans for the next war after defeat, while the Nazi party takes to the mountains.

This post-war theme was presented to German industrialists at two meetings held recently in an Alsatian city, according to reports received thru what are considered reliable sources. Examples of penetration which German industry must make in conformity with Nazi post-war plans according to representatives of the Speer ministry [the German ministry of supply] were similar to those of the past:

German concerns had held joint patents with concerns outside Germany and were thus particularly successful in protecting German interests abroad. German capital is to be placed abroad; important channels being used are neutral banks. Under this proposal, the long existent coalition between the Nazi party and German big business—a coalition which is considered by competent observers as a sine qua non factor in a Germany going to war—will continue to exist during the "temporary defeat" while new weapons are planned for the next war.

One Killed in Sicilian Rioting Over Draft Call

ROME, Italy, Jan. 6 (AP).—One man was killed yesterday in a rioting in Sicily over the calling up of Italians for military service, army dispatches said today. The demonstration occurred at Ragusa.

TOWN IN RUINS, BASTOGNE FIGHT STILL IS RAGING

Nazis Are Trying to Take Road Hub.

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH AN AMERICAN 3D ARMY FORCE, Bastogne, Jan. 5 [Delayed].—The struggle for final possession of this crucial road center continues by day and by night with Nazi infantry and armor trying to push forward from the north, east and west in an effort either to enter the town or cut the three main highways into it from the south.

Both sides have been hampered in the last few days by extremely cold weather, heavy snows, and intermittent periods of low hanging fog. The Germans also have been aided by the fact that bad weather has greatly crippled allied air activity. As a result, altho forced back in some areas, they have also gained ground in some sections.

Shelled by Nazi Guns.

Battered Bastogne itself, which is within easy range of the German guns, was heavily shelled this noon and underwent a second bombardment in mid-afternoon. It has been the frequent target of nocturnal air raids by the temporarily rejuvenated luftwaffe.

The city is so beaten by this time it certainly will be weeks or months after the war moves on before anything remotely resembling normal life can be resumed.

Rain and snow fall thru shattered roofs or sift thru broken windows, adding their bit to the damage caused by bomb and shell. Each day brings more piles of rubble, more heaps of broken glass to those already scattered about. Yet either because it is only human to cling to what's familiar, even at the risk of one's life, or because it is difficult for civilians to get from one place to another except by walking, many Bastogne houses—houses without windows and with gaping holes in walls or roof—have, scrawled in chalk on the front door, the words "Civils live here." Presumably this is to save trouble for soldiers hunting an unoccupied place where they might sleep.

City Like a Symbol.

By now there's really nothing worth having in Bastogne except that it is a place where all those roads merge, but the fighting is as furious as ever. It is almost as tho Bastogne had become a symbol of Nazi defeat and American courage which the Germans would like, somehow, to eradicate.

REVEAL FEW U. S. SUPPLIES FELL INTO NAZI HANDS

Tell How Ordnance Men Salvaged Stores.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, Jan. 6.—Despite the rapid initial advance of Field Marshal von Rundstedt's offensive thru the Ardennes sector, surprisingly little booty fell into the hands of the enemy, and the United States 1st army managed to save all but a small quantity of tank tracks and 2,000 tons of ammunition. The story of how a large part of the huge stores of ammunition, tanks, guns, and truck in the territory overrun by the enemy was salvaged in the midst of battle was revealed today.

When the attack was launched and a German break-thru threatened, Col. J. B. Medaris of Cincinnati, O., 1st army ordance officer, issued orders to the 15,000 troops under his command: "Evacuate but stay in business." They moved nearly every piece of equipment stored in ordnance depots from the path of the advancing Germans, and even launched counter-attacks in territories already in the enemy's hands so supplies could be withdrawn.

Work Day and Night.

Working day and night without sleep, ordnance men hauled thousands of heavy guns and vehicles and other thousands of shells and cases of ammunition. As they worked, some set up and manned road blocks and fought with bazookas, rifles, and machine guns to hold the invaders off until the stores were moved.

And even while they were moving these stores and setting up shop in new areas, they continued to repair and recover damaged vehicles under fire and issue ammunition and guns as requisitioned by regular fighting forces.

More than 7,000 tons of supplies and a huge part of the replacement tanks, artillery, trucks, and other vehicles were in danger when the Nazi Tiger tanks, coming within 11 miles, threatened to cut off the 1st army ordnance depot.

Fight Off Advancing Foe.

Under Maj. Lyman O. Heidtke of St. Paul, Minn., and Col. Nelson Lynde, Denver, Colo., 1st army maintenance ordnance officer, 2,000 men of the 310th ordnance battalion, aided by 150 Belgian infantrymen, fought off the advancing force for a day and a half with guns, tanks, and half-tracks until reënforcements arrived.

The entire depot was moved to another location 50 miles away, losing only a few tanks.

Eight 240 millimeter howitzers, abandoned when their positions were overrun, were recovered Christmas day by two officers of the 310th ordnance battalion and a crew of mechanics, riggers, and wrecker operators as the infantry counter-attacked and drove the Germans back long enough for this operation.

Negro Troops on Job.

Three thousand, five hundred Negro troops of the 71st ordnance group evacuated three ammunition supply points under fire, at the same time issuing 3,000 tons of ammunition daily to fighting troops.

The 590th ordnance battalion completed more than 4,000 repair jobs while moving 100 miles. Under Lt. Col. George H. Wells of Waukesha, Wis., battalion commander, 88 tanks, 69 pieces of artillery, 614 general purpose vehicles, 275 instruments, and 3,337 small arms were repaired.

Report Nazi Troopship, Munitions Vessel Collide

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan 6 (AP).—A German troopship believed loaded with 3,000 men collided with a munitions ship today in Kalundborg Fjord off northern Sjaeland, the Free Danish press service said, quoting a reliable source.

Blunt Spearhead Thrust Across Rhine

AMERICANS HALT NAZIS WHO GOT ACROSS RHINE

Confine Bridgeheads Above Strasbourg.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY NEAR THE RHINE, Jan. 6.—Yanks on the west bank of the Rhine above Strasbourg today had halted the threat of expansion of German bridgeheads, hurling the enemy out of several locations occupied yesterday, and pouring in a heavy fire on Gambsheim, which the Nazis still hold.

One estimate was that the Germans had shoved 800 men—the equivalent of an American battalion—across the river yesterday. They may have gotten some more over in patrols last night, but there was as yet no indication of a big buildup in the amphibious attack, and no certainty of whether the first landings heralded an attempted crossing in force of the river or were diversionary in nature for the enemy thrusts thru the Hardt forest west of the Alsatian plane.

Attack Enemy Units.

Meanwhile, American infantry, artillery, and armor were dealing with those Germans already on the French side of the Rhine. There was severe shelling of enemy positions on the landing strip and also of a bridge southeast of Gambsheim. The Germans had been trying to put a pontoon span across the demolished part of that structure.

The enemy did get anti-tank guns and mortars across the river on his first embarkations, and with these and big guns from behind the Siegfried line, he fought today to retain the villages he had taken. In one of those localities he had captured a company of G. I.s, but others of our forces broke thru, relieved their comrades, and took more than 50 Germans prisoner.

Find Swastika Displayed.

Lt. Col. James P. Davis of Batavia, Ill., commander of an American battalion, told how his men entered another village and found the citizens displaying the swastika. The Germans yesterday had forced those citizens to pull down French and American flags and put up the Nazi emblem. The swastika went down again and the other flags were raised as soon as the Americans chased out the Germans.

Fighting to get into Gambsheim, Americans came under anti-tank fire, and three of our Gen. Shermans were knocked out.

Many Heed Red Cross Plea for Workers; Need More

Mrs. Darrow B. Fulton, vice chairman of the Red Cross volunteer special service, reported yesterday that five switchboard operators at service headquarters were kept busy yesterday morning answering telephone calls as a result of newspaper appeals for volunteer clerical and stenographic workers. Mrs. Fulton expressed a wish that there would be additional volunteers for day time office work.

2D U. S. BORN WOMAN WILL QUIT COMMONS

LONDON, Jan. 6 [Reuters].—The house of commons is to lose its second American-born member. Mrs. Beatrice Wright, who entered parliament in 1941 as Mrs. J. R. Rathbone, has informed the Southeast Cornwall Conservative association that she will not contest the next election.

Mrs. Nancy Astor, the other American-born M. P., announced a short time ago she planned to retire. Mrs. Wright was returned unopposed to the vacancy caused by the death of her first husband, Flying Officer Rathbone, who was killed in service.

[Mrs. Wright was born in 1910 at New Haven, Conn. Her father was F. Roland Clough.]

ILLINOIS MEN GIVE NAZIS ODDS; WIN TANK FIGHT

Help Bag Five in Battle for Belgian Town.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH U. S. FORCES IN GERMANY, Jan. 6.—Three Chicagoland tank men played leading roles in routing a superior force of German tanks and infantry in a fight for a village near Rochefort, Belgium. The Germans lost five Mark V. Panthers and several half-tracks before they fled.

An American force of 10 Sherman tanks reached the village, a cluster of houses on a knoll overlooking a rolling, snow covered valley, as 10 Panthers and 20 half-tracks loaded with German soldiers came into sight from the opposite direction. Capt. Henry H. Chatfield, Cincinnati, O., led his task force thru the village and took cover at the foot of rising ground.

Nazis Do the Expected.

The German tank commander refused to try to force his way in by a frontal attack on the town, apparently having seen the Americans. Insteady, he sent the tanks around one side of the hill and the half-tracks around the other, just as Chatfield had expected. Chatfield withheld fire as long as possible to draw the Nazis into the trap. Panthers ordinarily are pretty tough customers to attack head-on but from their side, which are not so well armored, it is a different story.

When the German tanks poked their noses around the hollow where the Shermans were hiding, they found themselves with flanks exposed to American fire at a range of about 200 yards.

Tanks commanded by Sgt. Thomas K. Rutledge, Lake City, Ill., and Sgt. Louis Kuch, Melrose Park, Ill., knocked off Panthers, and one commanded by Sgt. Lilburn C. Irwin, Jamestown, Ky., got two more before the Nazis could withdraw.

Sergeant Thinks Like a Nazi.

A moment later Irwin and his crew raised their score to three. They had seen a Panther streaking for the shelter of a frame barn. When the other tanks had been dealt with, Irwin looked over the barn, decided where he would park if he were hiding, and fired blindly thru the walls. An explosion and a pillar of smoke told him he had been right.

Lt. Albert J. Gubel, 1117 N. Dearborn st., Chicago, and other tankmen, disposed of half-tracks attempting to get behind the hill to scale the height and attack the Americans from the rear. The first two vehicles to come in sight were knocked out by shells from Gubel's tank while the other Shermans fired on the remainder of the column.

CANADIANS SPLIT NAZIS BY SURPRISE BLOW SOUTH OF PO

ROME, Italy, Jan. 6 (AP).—Canadian tanks and infantry have split German forces by a surprise blow near Italy's east coast and are chasing the enemy along the southern shores of a huge lagoon 31 miles south of the Po river, the allied command announced today.

The left flank of the dominion troops, who overran Sant' Alberto in a thrust eight miles north of Ravenna, was secured by a victory of British and Canadian forces over German armor east of Alfonsine. Alfonsine is six miles southwest of Sant' Alberto.

Ten miles southwest of Alfonsine the last German was routed from a Senio river bridgehead near Cotignola. Thus the British 8th army won almost undisputed control over the east bank of the stream from the Apennine foothills 31 miles northeast to the lagoon, the Valli di Comacchio.

NAZIS SAY THEY HOLD INITIATIVE IN VOSGES AREA

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—The German high command declared tonight Nazi troops were holding the initiative in the new winter offensive in the lower Vosges area of France and said that crossings of the Rhine between Strasbourg and Haguenau had placed allied forces in a precarious position.

A DNB military commentator, Max Krull, said the battle of the bulge to the north was still undecided. He added that "operations here and on the Saar front are closely connected insofar as they create a precarious situation for the Americans, who must withdraw troops from one in favor of the other and vice versa."

The Berlin radio acknowledged Nazi reverses in the bulge battle where combined allied forces have driven two armored wedges into German lines, but claimed that Lt. Gen. Patton's men were knocked back in an area above Bastogne.

Nazi military commentator Ludwig Sertorious said the allies "have now engaged two-thirds of their forces in the area between the Meuse and Moselle rivers."

R. A. F. HAMMERS HANAU; YANKS BLAST BRIDGES

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—A fleet of R. A. F. bombers, following up the United States 8th air force's 14th daylight raid on German transport and communications, poured explosives tonight on Hanau, an important rail and industrial center 10 miles east of Frankfurt.

The American sky armada today dumped 3,000 tons of explosives on three Rhine river bridges and other transport bottlenecks. More than 120 German supply arteries along the western front have been attacked by United States flyers carrying out the daytime phase of the current around the clock assault. Ten heavy bombers and four fighters are missing from yesterday's attacks.

Continent based fighters and medium bombers of the tactical air forces which yesterday flew 2,000 sorties in direct support of the allied counter-attack in Belgium, were grounded today by poor weather.

YANKS OCCUPY FAIS ISLAND IN CAROLINE GROUP

Fleet Again Bombards Iwo and Chichi.

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Jan. 6 (AP).—A ships' bombardment of Iwo Island in the Volcano Islands, an army invasion of a tiny island in the western Carolines, and a more detailed account of the heavy destruction wrought by carrier planes at Formosa and Okinawa were disclosed today in two navy bulletins.

The Carolines have long since been by-passed in the westward surge of American forces and the invasion, merely mentioned in today's bulletin, was a mopping up operation. Fais Island, a mile and a half long, is 35 to 55 miles east of American held Ulithi atoll.

The bulletin said the invasion by infantry on Jan. 2 met slight resistance. Eight Japanese were killed and six captured. Three Americans were killed and six wounded.

Much Damage on Formosa.

The landing on Fais constituted a third encroachment on the area of Yap, 170 miles to the west, an island which has served the enemy as a weather station.

Today's second bulletin expanded the picture of destruction wrought last week at Formosa, Japan's reënforcement base for menaced garrisons in the Philippines. On Formosa, ground installations were hard hit. The marine and navy flyers destroyed 11 locomotives, four tank cars, several trucks and freight cars, wiped out a railway bridge over the Tamsui river, erased the railroad station at Okayama, and blew up buildings, warehouses, fuel and ammunition dumps all over the island.

In the two days of attack at Formosa and Okinawa, a large cargo ship, a medium cargo ship, a small cargo ship, a patrol craft, 10 small coastal cargoers and 11 small craft were sunk, a total of 25. Among 58 damaged were a destroyer, four destroyer-escorts and two large cargo ships. One hundred eleven enemy planes were destroyed and 200 damaged at a cost of 17 American planes.

Planes, Ships Pound Iwo.

On Jan. 4, United States warships turned their guns on Iwo, shelling airstrip installations and coastal defenses. Army Liberator bombers gave Iwo its 29th straight day of aerial fireworks.

Jan. 5, warships ranged even closer to Tokyo to pound Chichi and Haha in the Bonin Islands. Chichi is 615 miles from Tokyo. The naval bombardment was concentrated on harbor facilities. An enemy cargo ship was sunk.

Continue to Bomb Luzon.

MacARTHUR'S HDQ., Philippines, Jan. 7 [Sunday]—(AP). — Mitchell bombers and fighter-bombers continued their strikes against southern Luzon Jan. 4 and 5, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

A locomotive and 100 freight cars were destroyed and three railroad bridges torn down or damaged. Liberators blasted the airdrome on Palawan Island, southwest of the American held Mindoro Island, with 93 tons of bombs.

The bombing of Luzon has continued with little letup since the Americans landed on Mindoro, 150 miles from Manila, Dec. 15.

Today's bulletin, however, gave no hint as to plans for American landings on Luzon, altho the Japanese radio a few hours previously said the Yanks "may have landed" on that island.

Sight Three Landing Groups.

The Japanese Domei agency reported that three groups of American transports and carriers were in Philippine waters, one of about 100 landing craft in the vicinity of Lingayen gulf, north of Manila bay, "apparently with the intention of attempting landings."

The dispatch said the second "large group of United States vessels, together with about 10 converted aircraft carriers" was reported cruising west of Panay Island. The third convoy was "sighted speeding westward in waters south of Negros Island."

American forces are actually within 12 miles of Luzon, having established themselves on Marinduque Island, which with Mindoro guards the southern approaches to Luzon.

ALTON CAPTAIN KILLED IN ARMY BOMBER CRASH

Grand Island, Neb., Jan. 6 (AP).—Five men, two officers and three enlisted men, were killed, and one enlisted man injured in the crash at a Puerto Rican air field of a bomber from Grand Island, Col. William Miller, commanding officer of the Grand Island army air field, said today.

The dead included Capt. Barclay B. Beeby, 2400 Brown st., Alton, Ill., and Sgt. Jack Y. Steinmetz, 28 Webb st., Hammond, Ind.

The name of the injured man, reported recovering in a Puerto Rican hospital, was not disclosed.

B-29s BOMB JAP OMURA PLANTS FOR SIXTH TIME

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP)—Japan's aircraft industry at Omura, on the home island of Kyushu, has been hit for the sixth time by China-based Super Fortresses, the 20th airforce announced today.

In addition to striking at the plant where fighter planes are turned out, the B-29s bombed other industrial and military targets.

One Super Fortress failed to return, the announcement said, adding that one enemy fighter was destroyed, five were probably destroyed, and three damaged. Fighter and anti-aircraft opposition was moderate.

Bombing of the aircraft plant was by instrument and results could not be observed.

HEAR IBN SAUD WILL SUPPORT PAN-ARAB MOVE

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 6 (AP).—Ibn Saud, king of Saudi Arabia, has reversed his position and agreed to participate with other Moslem nations in an attempt to organize a pan-Arab federation, high Egyptian political quarters said today. The reason for his change was not explained. Ibn Saud has accepted the decisions made in October at a conference in Alexandria, Egypt, and will send a delegation to the next meeting, it was said. The pan-Arab movement seeks to formulate a common policy for all Moslem areas

THREE BRITISH COLUMNS RACE FOR MANDALAY

CALCUTTA, India, Jan. 6 (AP).—British troops were in a three way race for Mandalay tonight as the annual "little monsoon" broke in central Burma, with forward units only about 55 miles from the Irrawaddy river city.

Two of the three spearheads, moving southeast thru the Shwebo district, are finding no enemy troops in their path. The third column was meeting stiff Japanese rearguard resistance.

Fourteenth army troops, under command of Lt. Gen. William R. Slim, were consolidating their bridgehead in the Yeu and Kabo areas of the lower Chindwin district following successful air strikes on enemy positions, said a bulletin from Kandy, Ceylon.

Yanks Get Eggs Carried by Ponies Over Himalayas

JAPS RECAPTURE KEY BURMA ROAD WANTING BASE

CHUNGKING, China, Jan. 6 (AP).—Chinese forces which captured the Burma road town of Wanting Jan. 3 have lost it again, but are expected to retake it momentarily, then push on and open the new Ledo-Burma road supply line to China, an American staff officer said today.

The recapture of Wanting, site of a former Chinese customs station for clearing goods from Burma into China, has a direct bearing on opening the new overland route, said Brig. Gen. Mervin E. Cross.

Wanting and the nearby Burma village of Namhkam are the last two Japanese bastions which prevent the reopening of an overland channel and force American airmen to maintain the hazardous transport by air over "the hump" of all supplies going to China from India. However, Gross predicted the Ledo-Burma artery would be in operation within 30 to 35 days after the two towns are cleared.

ALLEGES 3 MEN TOOK 80 TIES.

Three men, who told clerks they were "just looking" were believed to have taken 80 ties valued at $120, and two dozen pairs of hose, valued at $12 from Winsberg's Brothers department store, at 5539 Belmont av. yesterday.

COUNTER-BLOWS NEAR BUDAPEST FAIL, SAY REDS

Nazis Claim Relief Drive Gains Ground.

LONDON, Jan. 7 [Sunday]—(AP).—The Red army repulsed gigantic German counter-attacks northwest and west of Budapest yesterday in violent fighting that often was hand to hand, the soviet bulletin announced, while another 173 square blocks of the Hungarian capital itself fell to the Russians.

Enemy accounts contended the German drive was gaining ground and had reached within 17 miles of embattled Budapest at two points.

While a soviet military commentator said these efforts to relieve the city had "failed," an early morning supplement to the regular nightly Moscow bulletin indicated the tremendous battle still was in progress after five days and said the enemy was in numerically superior force.

In one sector of the south bank of the Danube river northwest of Budapest, the Germans attacked early yesterday with an elite guard armored division, two infantry divisions, and parachutists, the supplement said. In a five hour battle, the enemy suffered tremendous losses and had to turn back, but renewed the battle later.

1,000 Slain in Attack.

As violent an engagement occurred west of Bicske, which is 17 miles west of Budapest, and there again the enemy was thrown back, leaving behind more than 1,000 of his dead, 40 cannon, five armored cars, and 11 armored troop carriers.

Soviet warplanes destroyed 11 German tanks and six armored cars, the supplemental bulletin said. On that battlefront Friday the enemy lost 60 tanks, the regular bulletin said, making a total of 240 knocked out since the German counter-offensive began on that front.

The enemy meanwhile claimed that the counter-attacks northwest of Budapest were gaining ground.

A Hungarian bulletin broadcast by the German controled Hungarian radio said German and Hungarian tanks "stand before Bicske and Darog. Bicske is 17 miles west of Budapest and Darog is 17 miles northwest.

Tell of Latvia Success.

Berlin also claimed a successful counter-offensive on the Courland peninsula in western Latvia and indicated the Germans had upset the soviet winter time table with blows elsewhere on the eastern front, notably in East Prussia, where, it said, Nazi tanks and infantry "overran Russian positions near a lake southwest of Filipow, near Suwalki, and destroyed 23 soviet tanks."

It said the Courland peninsula fighting was between Tukums and Frauenburg, that the Germans "overcame resistance by seven Russian infantry divisions" and that the German drive continued despite Russian reënforcements.

ARMY JOURNAL URGES RUSSIAN PUSH IN POLAND

Recalls Stalin's Cry for Second Front.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—The Army and Navy Journal, recalling Marshal Stalin's 1942 call for a second front in western Europe, asserted today "Now that we are struggling with a strong counter offensive it would be helpful for the Red armies to strike thru Poland."

The unofficial service publictation said:

"With general understanding of Russia's far flung operations, we are not pressing action at the point we desire in the manner Marshal Stalin and other Russian authorities did during 1942 in their effort to get us to establish the western front.

Recalls Stalin's Letter.

"It will be recalled that in a letter dated Oct. 3, 1942, to Henry C. Cassidy, correspondent of the Associated Press in Moscow, Marshal Stalin spoke of the paucity of aid given by the allies to the Soviet Union, and observed: 'In order to amplify and improve this aid, only one thing is required—the full and prompt fulfillment by the allies of their obligations.' In short, that leader wanted Anglo-American troops to land on the western coast of Europe to ease the pressure on the Red armies.

Delay Reich Invasion.

"Similarly, now that we are struggling with a strong counter-offensive, it would be helpful for the Red armies to strike thru Poland.

"If nothing be done until Budapest is occupied and safeguarded, Hitler will be free to reënforce Von Rundstedt and thus delay our invasion of the reich.

"Dispersion of troops in pursuit of special interests always has been disapproved by our government."

Zog Willing to Approve Regency for Albania

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—King Zog said last night he would approve creation of a regency for Albania if the proposal is made. The monarch has been living in Britain since 1940.

POLISH CULTURE INSTITUTE OPENS CHICAGO BRANCH

A branch of the Polish Institute of Arts and Science in America, an organization which aims to perpetuate Polish learning and culture and to air refugee scientists, was opened in Chicago yesterday at a meeting held in Lincoln Hall, Northwestern university's downtown campus.

Many members of the institute are scholars, scientists, and authors who escaped the Nazi surge into their homeland. It was organized in New York in 1942 and has a branch in Canada. Objectives of the midwest branch will be to establish collaboration between Polish and American scholars in the hope that a foundation for better understanding among all peoples may be laid, Felix W. Pawlowski, president, and Guggenheim professor of aeronautical engineering, University of Michigan, explained.

Trying to Destroy It.

"Invaders of Poland are trying to destroy 1,000 years of our culture and learning," Dr. Oscar Halecki, director of the institute and professor of history in Fordham university, said. "Our organization will bring to the attention of the world the truth as to Polish history, art, and culture, and thus truth and justice will triumph."

Dr. Kenneth Colegrove, professor of political science in Northwestern university, addressed the group. He spoke on constitutional reform for American participation in international government and advocated a parliamentary regime in place of our Presidential form of government.

Will Take Long Time.

"It will probably be a long period of time before Americans become convinced that such a regime lends itself more effectively to international coöperation than our present form of government, but the tendencies in American progress seem to point to the fact America will eventually find it necessary to adopt this system," he said.

He urged for restored Poland a constitution which would permit effective coöperation in an international organization.

R. A. F. Flyer Wins Turkey Loses It to Magistrate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A royal air force sergeant who won a turkey in the Isle of Man noncoms' mess raffle just before Christmas today had lost it to a magistrate who confiscated the bird after finding the winner guilty of attempting to export it without a license when he tried to take it home on leave. The sergeant also was fined $1 for failing to obtain an export license for the turkey which he was to have eaten on his first Christmas at home in seven years.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

SKIN DOCTOR ON LEYTE RUNS RIOT AMID THE FUNGI

Finds So Many Diseases He's Delighted.

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LEYTE, P. I., Jan. 6.—Capt. Peter Beal, former dermatologist for the University of Chicago clinics, which means he's an expert in skin diseases, is delighted.

"There are the most wonderful cases of skin diseases here you ever did see," he says. "Nearly everybody who has been here any time at all has something."

Scientist Beal runs riot among the hospitals hunting new varieties of fungi, which are the causes of most of the skin ailments. He finds quite a few, too.

Concocts Ointments.

His spare time he devotes to concocting new ointments and fluids and powders. Getting the right materials is hard. He was faced by a severe shortage of cold cream, soldiers not being issued such stuff and the new Philippine WACs hoarding their limited supplies. He discovered that a certain brand of brushless shaving cream is even better than cold cream.

His supplies he scrouges from a variety of sources. Today he was out on a hospital ship. The boat almost sailed with him aboard. He denies that the presence of 37 nurses aboard caused him to forget the sailing time. "I got interested in the laboratory," he says.

They Examine Everything.

Capt. Beal, whose home address is 1345 Rosedale av., Chicago, Ill., is assigned to the medical laboratory which was formed at Camp Ellis. They spent three months doing little in New Guinea before coming here. The laboratory examines water, blood, soil, and anything else anybody brings in in a test tube.

The laboratory has nine staff members, all experts. At first all were available for impromptu consultations by G. I.s and officers who know a good thing when they see it. But the laboratory commander, Lt. Col. J. W. Leichliter of Cincinnati, O., put a stop to that. He discovered some hard to please troops were consulting as many as five members of the staff.

The difficulty, Col. Leichliter says, is that some of the patients were getting treated for as many as five different ailments.

U. S. LEND-LEASE CURTAILS HEAVY TOOLS FOR REDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 [Special].—Russia has requested more than 2 billion dollars worth of goods from the United States, Britain, and Canada under the fourth lend-lease protocol, but the United States has refused to meet the request for certain heavy machine tools, presses, and other industrial equipment on the ground that these items would be more useful for Russia's post-war plans than in promoting her war program, it was learned today.

This decision has delayed the signing of the fourth protocol for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, but it has not delayed the shipment to Russia of those items which Russia requested and which the United States, Britain, and Canada agreed were necessary for the war.

It is understood that the administration made clear to Dictator Stalin that most heavy capital goods useful not only for the war but for the post-war period should be obtained either by cash payment or on credit. As a consequence it is known that the Russians already have placed orders in this country for certain heavy power plant equipment.

PREVENT DOUBLE TAXES.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 [AP].—The state department announced today a pact between the United States and France to prevent double taxation had gone into effect Jan. 1. The pact is similar to others already in effect with Britain, Canada, and other nations.

It's Sea Hotel

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 6 (AP).—The APL-47, one of the most unusual vessels ever constructed here, was launched today at the Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging company ways—a 260 foot floating barracks, hospital, hotel, and recreation center for submarine crews. The vessel has accommodations for 700 men and will be towed in a "train" which will include a machinery repair barge and a hull repair barge also built at the Seattle yard.

The barracks ship, in addition to a four bed isolation ward, a 10 bed sickbay, and a surgical operating room, has a dental office, a barber shop, a crew cafeteria, an officers' wardroom, recreation room, postoffice, ship service store, ice cream making facilities, and a motion picture theater.

NOT "MORE" BUT "BETTER"

Sheaffer war production maintains at a very high rate. Our Company is making for the Armed Forces intricate, extremely precise instruments of communication which are necessary components in very vital war programs.

Without any question, Sheaffer is producing by far the largest volume of direct war munitions of any firm in the fountain pen industry.

It has been possible, however, to improve our manufacturing technique on pens and pencils. To a great extent this is due to the precision "know-how" gained by our people in our all-out war effort. While the newly designed products can be offered to the public only in limited quantities as in the past, they will be strictly of the design we intend to sell in the years ahead.

We cannot say "more"—we can only say "better" until the demands of the Armed Services decline, not only for Sheaffer pens and pencils, but for the other munitions of war we are manufacturing. As this is written, such demands have not declined. Sheaffer dealers agree with us that winning the war comes first. They do not expect "more."

Our Company was the first to produce certain vital items in quantities and, in fact, for an extended period, were the only producers on certain items. For the first two months of 1945, all Sheaffer pen production will go to the Army and Navy, with the exception of minor sample shipments of the newly designed models to retailers. Currently, two-thirds of our production goes to the Government.

We are making this public statement because we intend to try to keep our name and the desirability of our product before the public. Judged by all pre-war standards, the Sheaffer merchandise that will be available to the public in limited quantities in the months to come will be finer, more beautiful, and functionally better than any handwriting instruments we have hitherto manufactured. They will give the purchaser the most for his money. This advertisement is for the purpose of explaining our position because we cannot tell the whole story in all of our advertising. We hope that the discriminating will keep this in mind when a Sheaffer dealer, for lack of Sheaffer merchandise, offers a place on his "reservation" list.

RAFT CARRIES YANK SAFELY BY CURSING JAPS

DownedGunnerGetsBack to Ship After Ordeal.

BY THOMAS MORROW.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE PACIFIC FLEET, Nov. 14 [By Mail].—Joe Tropp of Cheltenham, Pa., rear gunner on a navy dive bomber, saw his pilot sink into the ocean and die. And there was nothing Joe could do about it.

Then he sat on a life raft while Japanese warships steamed by on each side. Sailors shook their fists at him, cursed him in Japanese, and apparently argued over whether to waste the machine gun bullets to kill him.

Later, Tropp was rescued. He was led to safety thru Japanese lines by a guerrilla leader—an army colonel who refused to give up when the Philippines fell to the Japanese.

Tropp, 165 pound wrestling champion of Pennsylvania in 1940 and tackle for the Ursinus college team two years later, was back aboard today. He told simply his experience since he set out Oct. 25 on a smash at the Japanese fleet.

Last Plane in Dive.

"We were the last plane to dive on a cruiser," he said. "The flak [anti-aircraft fire] was very thick; I had an idea we'd get hit. We didn't pull out, and I saw our right wing was afire.

The pilot sideslipped over the cruiser and two destroyers to put the fire out. It went out for a while, then broke out again and we crashed.

"I got out of the rear seat. The pilot got out of the front. He was bleeding. He didn't say anything.

"I yelled at him to get in the water, turned around to get the life raft, and when I looked again he was floundering in the water. He must have been hurt in the crash.

"I slid down the wing to get him. He never said a word. He just went under and I never saw him again. The raft had floated clear and I got on it. I don't know how to explain it, but I threw the food away. I felt the pilot's death was my fault, that I didn't do the right thing. I didn't care what happened."

Shot Frightens Shark.

There was blood on the water, Tropp said, and a shark swam up to the raft. He fired his revolver, and the shark swam away.

"Then I saw the superstructure of ships coming over the horizon. At first I thought they were ours, then I saw they were Japanese. They came right at me.

"A sailor on a destroyer saw me and yelled. They poured out of the hatches, shook their fists at me, and yelled. I saw one go to a gun. I was sure he was going to strafe me, but by this time the destroyer was past."

He saw the next strike of planes go after the ships, Tropp said, and saw anti-aircraft and bombs bursting. Then, alone on the raft, he went to sleep.

"I came to about midnight," Tropp recalled. "There was a storm, and the waves looked like walls. I thought about my folks and snapped out of it. I'm an only child, and I wanted to live to see them. I never prayed much before, but I prayed thru this whole damn thing."

Catches Rain Water.

He caught rain water in his rubber poncho, drank as much as he could hold, and tied himself to the raft, Tropp said. After sleeping thru the night, he noted directions from the sun and made a sail from the poncho.

"I made good headway. The sun was strong, and I kept dousing myself with water.'

The next morning Tropp rowed until noon, then foundered on the reefs off an island. He made his way thru the undergrowth to a native hut.

"There I found guerrillas. I put my .38 down, held up both hands, and smiled. They called another native who spoke English. I gave away my knife, compass, mirror—anything I didn't need—as presents. They told me at Christmas time gifts meant much."

In turn, the guerrillas brought him gifts, including three eggs wrapped in leaves, and much tuba, a drink made from coconut sprouts.

Placed in the hands of the guerrilla leader, Tropp was taken in a boat, and they made the run to Leyte.

EXTENDED CONTROL OF REICH INDUSTRY SEEN BY HENDERSON

PARIS, Jan. 6 (AP).—Leon Henderson, surveying schemes for economic control of German heavy industry, said tonight that a comparatively long period of supervision was envisaged to prevent the Germans from building another war machine.

He declined to discuss his conclusions on what machinery would be necessary or how it should be used, but said he hoped to make a report to the foreign economic administration in Washington within the next 10 days.

He said he had learned at London that British plans for the control of Germany already were shaped.

F. D. R. DEMANDS DRAFT OF LABOR, SERVICE FOR 4-Fs

Declares U.S. Must Have Universal Training.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's message to congress follows:

"In considering the state of the union, the war and the peace that is to follow are naturally uppermost in the minds of all of us.

"This war must be waged—it is being waged—with the greatest and most persistent intensity. Everything we are and have is at stake. Everything we are and have will be given. American men, fighting far from home, have already won victories which the world will never forget.

Warns of Heavy Losses.

"We have no question of the ultimate victory. We have no question of the cost. Our losses will be heavy.

"We and our allies will go on fighting together to ultimate total victory.

"We have seen a year marked, on the whole, by substantial progress toward victory, even tho the year ended with a setback for our arms when the Germans launched a ferocious counter-attack into Luxembourg and Belgium with the obvious objective of cutting our line in the center.

"Our men have fought with indescribable and unforgettable gallantry under most difficult conditions, and our German enemies have sustained considerable losses while failing to obtain their objectives.

Allies Again "On Offensive."

"The high tide of this German effort was reached two days after Christmas. Since then we have reassumed the offensive, rescued the isolated garrison at Bastogne, and forced a German withdrawal along the whole line of the salient.

"The speed with which we recovered from this savage attack was largely possible because we have one supreme commander in complete control of all the allied armies in France.

"Gen. Eisenhower has faced this period of trial with admirable calm and resolution and with steadily increasing success. He has my complete confidence.

NEW NAZI DRIVE EXPECTED

President Also Warns Against Enemy Propaganda.

"Further desperate attempts may well be made to break our lines, to slow our progress. We must never make the mistake of assuming that the Germans are beaten until the last Nazi has surrendered.

"And I would express another most serious warning against the poisonous effects of enemy propaganda.

"The wedge that the Germans attempted to drive in western Europe was less dangerous in actual terms of winning the war than the wedges which they are continually attempting to drive between ourselves and our allies.

"Baseless" Rumors Cited.

"Every little rumor which is intended to weaken our faith in our allies is like an actual enemy agent in our midst—seeking to sabotage our war effort. There are, here and there, evil and baseless rumors against the Russians—rumors against the British—rumors against our own American commanders in the field.

"When you examine these rumors closely you will observe that every one of them bears the same trademark—'made in Germany.'

"We must resist this divisive propaganda—we must destroy it—with the same strength and the same determination that our fighting men are displaying as they resist and destroy the panzer divisions.

"In Europe we shall resume the attack, and—despite temporary setbacks here or there—we shall continue the attack relentlessly until Germany is completely defeated.

Basic Strategy Reviewed.

"It is appropriate at this time to review the basic strategy which has guided us thru three years of war and which will lead, eventually, to total victory.

"The tremendous effort of the first years of this war was directed toward the concentration of men and supplies in the various theaters of action at the points where they could hurt our enemies most.

"It was an effort—in the language of the military men—of deployment of our forces. Many battles—essential battles—were fought; many victories—vital victories—were won. But these battles and these victories were fought and won to hold back the attacking enemy and to put us in positions from which we and our allies could deliver the final, decisive blows.

"Prevention" First Step.

"In the beginning our most important military task was to prevent our enemies—the strongest and most violently aggressive powers that ever have threatened civilization—from winning decisive victories.

"But even while we were conducting defensive, delaying actions, we were looking forward to the time when we could wrest the initiative from our enemies and place our superior resources of men and materials into direct competition with them.

STRATEGY IN THE PACIFIC

Overwhelming Sea and Aerial Power Called First Requisite.

"It was plain then that the defeat of either enemy would require the massing of overwhelming forces—ground, sea, and air—in positions from which we and our allies could strike directly against the enemy homelands and destroy the Nazi and Japanese war machines.

"In the case of Japan, we had to await the completion of extensive preliminary operations—operations designed to establish secure supply lines thru the Japanese outer zone defenses. This called for overwhelming sea power and air power—supported by ground forces strategically employed against isolated outpost garrisons.

"Always—from the very day we were attacked—it was right militarily as well as morally to reject the arguments of those shortsighted people who would have had us throw Britain and Russia to the Nazi wolves and concentrate against the Japanese. Such people urged that we fight a purely defensive war against Japan while allowing the domination of all the rest of the world by nazism and fascism.

"In the European theater, the necessary bases for the massing of ground and air power against Germany were already available in Great Britain. In the Mediterranean area we could begin ground operations against major elements of the German army as rapidly as we could put troops in the field, first in North Africa and then in Italy.

Nazi "Digestion" One Factor.

"Therefore, our decision was made to concentrate the bulk of our ground and air forces against Germany until her utter defeat. That decision was based on all these factors; and it was also based on the realization that, of our two enemies, Germany would be more able to digest quickly her conquests, the more able quickly to convert the man power and resources of her conquered territory into a war potential.

"We had in Europe two active and indomitable allies—Britain and the soviet union—and there were also the heroic resistance movements in the occupied countries, constantly engaging and harassing the Germans.

"We cannot forget how Britain held the line, alone, in 1940 and 1941; and at the same time, despite ferocious bombardment from the air, built up a tremendous armaments industry which enabled her to take the offensive at El Alamein in 1942.

Russian Drives Recalled.

"We cannot forget the heroic defense of Moscow and Leningrad and Stalingrad, or the tremendous Russian offensives of 1943 and 1944 which destroyed formidable German armies.

"Nor can we forget how, for more than seven long years, the Chinese people have been sustaining the barbarous attacks of the Japanese and containing large enemy forces on the vast areas of the Asiatic mainland.

"In the future we must never forget the lesson that we have learned—that we must have friends who will work with us in peace as they have fought at our side in war.

Greece "Liberated," Says F. D. R.

"As a result of the combined effort of the allied forces, great military victories were achieved in 1944: The liberation of France, Belgium, Greece, and parts of the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Jugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia, the surrender of Romania and Bulgaria; the invasion of Germany itself and Hungary; the steady march thru the Pacific islands to the Philippines, Guam, and Saipan; and the beginnings of a mighty air offensive against the Japanese islands.

"Now, as this 79th congress meets, we have reached the most critical phase of the war.

"The greatest victory of the last year was, of course, the successful breach on June 6, 1944, of the German 'impregnable' sea wall of Europe and the victorious sweep of the allied forces thru France and Belgium and Luxembourg—almost to the Rhine itself.

INVASION "GREATEST" MOVE

Success Is Hailed as Tribute to All Fighting Men.

"The cross-channel invasion of the allied armies was the greatest amphibious operation in the history of the world. It overshadowed all other operations in this or any other war in its immensity.

"Its success is a tribute to the fighting courage of the soldiers who stormed the beaches—to the sailors and merchant seamen who put the soldiers ashore and kept them supplied—and to the military and naval leaders who achieved a real miracle of planning and execution. And it is also a tribute to the ability of two nations, Britain and America, to plan together and work together and fight together in perfect coöperation and perfect harmony.

"This cross-channel invasion was followed in August by a second great amphibious operation, landing troops in southern France. In this the same coöperation and the same harmony existed between the American, French, and other allied forces based in North Africa and Italy.

Secret Kept, Congress Told.

"The success of the two invasions is a tribute also to the ability of many men and women to maintain silence, when a few careless words would have imperiled the lives of hundreds of thousands and would have jeopardized the whole vast undertakings.

"These two great operations were made possible by success in the battle of the Atlantic.

"Without this success over German submarines we could not have built up our invasion forces or air forces in Great Britain, nor could we have kept a steady stream of supplies flowing to them after they had landed in France.

"The Nazis, however, may succeed in improving their submarines and their crews. They recently have increased their U-boat activity. The battle of the Atlantic—like all campaigns in this war—demands eternal vigilance. But the British, Canadian, and other allied navies, together with our own, are constantly on the alert.

Italian Front "Vital."

"The tremendous operations in western Europe have overshadowed in the public mind the less spectacular but vitally important Italian front. Its place in the strategic conduct of the war in Europe has been obscured—and, by some people, unfortunately—underrated.

"It is important that any misconception on that score be corrected—now.

"What the allied forces in Italy are doing is a well-considered part of our strategy in Europe, now aimed at only one objective—the total defeat of the Germans. These valiant forces in Italy are continuing to keep a substantial portion of the German army under constant pressure—including some 20 first line German divisions and the necessary supply and transport and replacement troops—all of which our enemies need so badly elsewhere.

BERLIN VIEWS F.D.R. MESSAGE AS THREAT TO BREAK ITS SPINE

LONDON, Jan. 6 (AP).—In the first German reaction to President Roosevelt's message to congress, the Berlin radio tonight said, "One thing is obvious: the allies are united in their aim to break Germany's spine and with it the spine of Europe."

The broadcast, quoting the German DNB agency, said, "Important problems of peace and reconstruction were not mentioned by the President. The main impression from the message is that he tries hard to minimize allied disunity about methods of warfare and war aims."

The broadcast asserted that exiled governments who put their hopes in the Atlantic Charter "will be disappointed."

Brazilian Unit Acclaimed.

"Over very difficult terrain and thru adverse weather conditions, our 5th army and the British 8th army—reënforced by units from other united nations, including a brave and well equipped unit of the Brazilian army—have, in the past year, pushed north thru bloody Cassino and the Anzio beachhead, and thru Rome until now they occupy heights overlooking the valley of the Po.

"The greatest tribute which can be paid to the courage and fighting ability of these splendid soldiers in Italy is to point out that altho their strength is about equal to that of the Germans they oppose, the allies have been continuously on the offensive.

"That pressure, that offensive, by our troops in Italy will continue.

"The American people—and every soldier now fighting in the Apennines—should remember that the Italian front has not lost any of the importance which it had in the days when it was the only allied front in Europe.

"In the Pacific during the last year we have conducted the fastest moving offensive in the history of modern warfare. We have driven the enemy back more than 3,000 miles across the Central Pacific.

"A year ago our conquest of Tarawa was a little more than a month old.

"A year ago we were preparing for our invasion of Kwajalein, the second of our great strides across the Central Pacific to the Philippines.

"A year ago Gen. MacArthur was still fighting in New Guinea, almost 1,500 miles from his present position in the Philippine Islands.

FIRMLY ESTABLISHED

Jap Forces Cut in Two; Hard Fighting Is Still Ahead

"We now have firmly established bases in the Mariana Islands from which our Super Fortresses bomb Tokyo itself—and will continue to blast Japan—in ever increasing numbers.

"Japanese forces in the Philippines have been cut in two. There is still hard fighting ahead—costly fighting. But the liberation of the Philippines will mean that Japan has been largely cut off from her conquest in the East Indies.

"The landing of our troops on Leyte was the largest amphibious operation thus far conducted in the Pacific.

"Moreover, these landings drew the Japanese fleet into the first great sea battle which Japan has risked in almost two years. Not since the night engagements around Guadalcanal in November-December, 1942, had our navy been able to come to grips with major units of the Japanese fleet.

Jap Fleet Driven Back.

"We had brushed against their fleet in the first battle of the Philippine sea in June, 1944, but not until last October were we able really to engage a major portion of the Japanese navy in actual combat. The naval engagement which raged for three days was the heaviest blow ever struck against Japanese sea power.

"As the result of that battle, much of what is left of the Japanese fleet has been driven behind the screen of islands that separates the Yellow sea, the China sea, and the Sea of Japan from the Pacific.

"Our navy looks forward to any opportunity which the lords of the Japanese navy will give us to fight them again.

"The people of this nation have a right to be proud of the courage and fighting ability of the men in the armed forces—on all fronts. They also have a right to be proud of American leadership which has guided their sons into battle.

F. D. R. Praises Generalship.

"The history of the generalship of this war has been a history of teamwork and coöperation, of skill and daring. Let me give you one example out of last year's operations in the Pacific.

"Last September Adm. Halsey led American naval task forces into Philippine waters and north to the East China sea and struck heavy blows at Japanese air and sea power.

"At that time it was our plan to approach the Philippines by further stages, taking islands which we may call A, C, and E. However, Adm. Halsey reported that a direct attack on Leyte appeared feasible. When Gen. MacArthur received the reports from Adm. Halsey's task forces he also concluded that it might be possible to attack the Japanese in the Philippines directly—by-passing Islands A, C, and E.

Discussions Speed Attack.

"Adm. Nimitz thereupon offered to make available to Gen. MacArthur several divisions which had been scheduled to take the intermediate objectives. These discussions, conducted at great distances, all took place in one day.

"Gen. MacArthur immediately informed the joint chiefs of staff here in Washington that he was prepared to initiate plans for an attack on Leyte in October. Approval of the change in plan was given on the same day.

"Thus, within the space of 24 hours a major change of plans was accomplished which involved army and navy forces from two different theaters of operations—a change which hastened the liberation of the Philippines and the final day of victory—a change which saved lives which would have been expended in the capture of islands which now are neutralized far behind our lines.

[A dispatch of Nov. 13 disclosed that an army corps was at sea headed for the Jap Island of Yap when last minute orders came changing the invasion fleet's destination to Leyte.]

Reports Increased Aid to China.

"Our over-all strategy has not neglected the important task of rendering all possible aid to China. Despite almost insuperable difficulties, we increased this aid during 1944. At present our aid to China must be accomplished by air transport—there is no other way. By the end of 1944 the air transport command was carrying into China a tonnage of supplies three times as great as that delivered a year ago, and much more, each month, than the Burma road ever delivered at its peak.

"Despite the loss of important bases in China, the tonnage delivered by air transport has enabled Gen. Chennault's 14th air force, which includes many Chinese flyers, to wage an effective and aggressive campaign against the Japanese. In 1944 aircraft of the 14th air force flew more than 35,000 sorties against the Japanese and sank enormous tonnage of enemy shipping, greatly diminishing the usefulness of the China sea lanes.

Gains in Burma Described.

"British, Dominion, and Chinese forces together with our own have not only held the line in Burma against determined Japanese attacks, but have gained bases of considerable importance to the supply line into China.

"The Burma campaigns have involved incredible hardship, and have demanded exceptional fortitude and determination. The officers and men who have served with so much devotion in these far distant jungles and mountains deserve high honor from their countrymen.

"FULL SUPPORT" DEMANDED

U. S. Production Goals Must Be Increased, Congress Told.

"In all of the far flung operations of our own armed forces—on land, and sea, and in the air—the final job, the toughest job, has been performed by the average, easy going, hard fighting young American who carries the weight of battle on his own shoulders.

"It is to him that we and all future generations of Americans must pay grateful tribute.

"But—it is of small satisfaction to him to know that monuments will be raised to him in the future. He wants, he needs, and he is entitled to insist upon, our full and active support—now.

"Altho unprecedented production figures have made possible our victories, we shall have to increase our goals even more in certain items.

"Peak deliveries of supplies were made to the war department in December, 1943. Due in part to cutbacks, we have not produced as much since then. Deliveries of army supplies were down by 15 per cent by July, 1944, before the upward trend was once more resumed.

Army's Needs Rise.

"Because of increased demands from overseas the army service forces in the month of October, 1944, had to increase its estimate of required production by 10 per cent. But in November, one month later, the requirements for 1945 had to be increased another 10 per cent, sending the production goal well above anything we have yet attained.

"Our armed forces in combat have steadily increased their expenditure of medium and heavy artillery ammunition. As we continue the decisive phases of this war the munitions that we expend will mount day by day.

"In October, 1944, while some were saying the war in Europe was over, the army was shipping more men to Europe than in any previous month of the war.

Nurses Called Urgent Need.

"One of the most urgent immediate requirements of the armed forces is more nurses. Last April the army requirement for nurses was set at 50,000. Actual strength in nurses was then 40,000. Since that time the army has tried to raise the additional 10,000. Active recruiting has been carried on, but the net gain in eight months has been only 2,000. There now are 42,000 nurses in the army.

"The present shortage of army nurses is reflected in undue strain on the existing force. More than 1,000 nurses are now hospitalized, and part of this is due to overwork. The shortage is also indicated by the fact that 11 army hospital units have been sent overseas without their complement of nurses.

"At army hospitals in the United States there is only one nurse to 26 beds, instead of the recommended one to 15 beds.

Overwork Termed Tragic.

"It is tragic that the gallant women who have volunteered for service as nurses should be so overworked. It is tragic that our wounded men should ever want for the best possible nursing care.

"The inability to get the needed nurses for the army is not due to any shortage of nurses. Two hundred and eighty thousand registered nurses are now practicing in this country.

"It has been estimated by the war man power commission that 27,000 additional nurses could be made available to the armed forces without interfering too seriously with the needs of the civilian population for nurses.

DRAFT OF NURSES ASKED

Volunteering Fails to Yield Adequate Staff, Says F. D. R.

"Since volunteering has not produced the number of nurses required, I urge that the selective service act be amended to provide for the induction of nurses into the armed forces. The need is too pressing to await the outcome of further efforts at recruiting.

"The care and treatment given to our wounded and sick soldiers have been the best known to medical science. Those standards must be maintained at all costs.

"We cannot tolerate a lowering of them by failure to provide adequate nursing for the brave men who stand desperately in need of it.

"In the continuing progress of this war we have constant need for new types of weapons. For we cannot afford to fight the war of today or tomorrow with the weapons of yesterday.

Constant Advance Asked.

"For example, the American army now has developed a new tank with a gun more powerful than any yet mounted on a fast moving vehicle. The army will need many thousands of these new tanks in 1945.

"Almost every month finds some new development in electronics which must be put into production in order to maintain our technical superiority—and in order to save lives. We have to work every day to keep ahead of the enemy in radar. On D-day, in France, with our superior new equipment, we located and then put out of operation every warning set which the Germans had along the French coast.

"If we do not keep constantly ahead of our enemies in the development of new weapons we pay for our backwardness with the life's blood of our sons.

Asks Workers to Stay on Jobs.

"The only way to meet these increased needs for new weapons and more of them is for every American engaged in war work to stay on his war job—for additional American civilians, men and women, not engaged in essential work, to go out and get a war job. Workers who are released because their production is cut back should get another job where production is being increased. This is no time to quit or change to less essential jobs.

"There is an old and true saying that the Lord hates a quitter. And this nation must pay for all those who leave their essential jobs—or all those who lay down on their essential jobs for nonessential reasons. And—again—that payment must be made with the life's blood of our sons.

"Many critical production programs with sharply rising needs are now seriously hampered by man power shortages. The most important army needs are artillery, ammunition, cotton duck, bombs, tires, tanks, heavy trucks, and even B-29s. In each of these vital programs present production is behind requirements.

Delay in Ships Charged.

"Navy production of bombardment ammunition is hampered by man power shortages; so is production for its huge rocket program. Labor shortages have also delayed its cruiser and carrier programs and production of certain types of aircraft.

"There is critical need for more repair workers and repair parts; this lack delays the return of damaged fighting ships to their places in the fleet, and prevents ships now in the fighting line from getting needed overhauling.

"The pool of young men under 26 classified as 1-A is almost depleted. Increased replacements for the armed forces will take men now deferred who are at work in war industry. The armed forces must have an assurance of a steady flow of young men for replacements. Meeting this paramount need will be difficult, and will also make it progressively more difficult to attain the 1945 production goals.

ASKS LABOR DRAFT—NOW!

It's Not Too Late to Mobilize "All Resources," Congress Told.

"Last year, after much consideration, I recommended that the congress adopt a national service act as the most efficient and democratic way of insuring full production for our war requirements. This recommendation was not adopted.

"I now again call upon the congress to enact this measure for the total mobilization of all our human resources for the prosecution of the war. I urge that this be done at the earliest possible moment. It is not too late in the war.

"In fact, bitter experience has shown that in this kind of mechanized warfare where new weapons are constantly being created by our enemies and by ourselves, the closer we come to the end of the war, the more pressing becomes the need for sustained war production with which to deliver the final blow to the enemy.

Three "Basic Arguments."

"There are three basic arguments for a national service law.

"First—It would assure that we have the right numbers of workers in the right places at the right times.

"Second—It would provide supreme proof of all our fighting men that we are giving them what they are entitled to, which is nothing less than our total effort.

"And, third—It would be the final, unequivocal answer to the hopes of the Nazis and the Japanese that we may become half-hearted about this war and that they can get from us a negotiated peace.

"National service legislation would make it possible to put ourselves in a position to assure certain and speedy action in meeting our man power needs.

Promises Only "War" Use.

"It would be used only to the extent absolutely required by military necessities. In fact, experience in Great Britain and in other nations at war indicates that use of the compulsory powers of national service is necessary only in rare instances.

"This proposed legislation would provide against loss of retirement and seniority rights and benefits. It would not mean reduction in wages.

"In adopting such legislation it is not necessary to discard the voluntary and coöperative processes which have prevailed up to this time. This coöperation has already produced great results. The contribution of our workers to the war effort has been beyond measure. We must build on the foundations that have already been laid and supplement the measures now in operation in order to guarantee the production that may be necessary in the critical period that lies ahead.

"At the present time we are using the inadequate tools at hand to do the best we can by such expedients as man power ceilings, and the use of priority and other powers, to induce men and women to shift from nonessential to essential war jobs.

"I am in receipt of a joint letter from the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, dated Jan. 3, 1945, which says:

"'With the experience of three years of war and after the most thoro consideration, we are convinced that it is now necessary to carry out the statement made by the congress in the joint resolutions declaring that a state of war existed with Japan and Germany: that "to bring the conflict to a successful conclusion, all of the resources of the country are hereby pledged by the congress of the United States."

"Needed," Say Secretaries.

"'In our considered judgment, which is supported by Gen. Marshall and Adm. King, this requires total mobilization of our man power by the passage of a national war service law. The armed forces need this legislation to hasten the day of final victory, and to keep to a minimum the cost of lives.

"'National war service, the recognition by law of the duty of every citizen to do his or her part in winning the war, will give complete assurance that the need for war equipment will be filled. In the coming year we must increase the output of many weapons and supplies on short notice.

"'Otherwise we shall not keep our production abreast of the swiftly changing needs of war.

"'At the same time it will be necessary to draw progressively many men now engaged in war production to serve with the armed forces, and their places in war production must be filled promptly. These developments will require the addition of hundreds of thousands to those already working in war industry. We do not believe that these needs can be met effectively under the present methods.

"'The record made by management and labor in war industry has been a notable testimony to the resourcefulness and power of America. The needs are so great, nevertheless, that in many instances we have been forced to recall soldiers and sailors from military duty to do work of a civilian character in war production, because of the urgency of the need for equipment and because of inability to recruit civilian labor.'

"Pending action by the congress on the broader aspects of national service, I recommend that the congress immediately enact legislation which will be effective in using the services of the 4 million men now classified as 4-F in whatever capacity is best for the war effort.

F. D. R.'s FOREIGN POLICY

He Asserts Nation Will "Stand Together" with Allies.

"In the field of foreign policy we propose to stand together with the united nations, not for the war alone but for the victory for which the war is fought.

"It is not only a common danger which unites us but a common hope. Ours is an association not of governments but of peoples—and the peoples' hope is peace.

"Here, as in England; in England, as in Russia; in Russia, as in China; in France, and thru the continent of Europe and thruout the world, wherever men love freedom, the hope and purpose of the peoples are for peace—a peace that is durable and secure.

Surrender Not Enough.

"It will not be easy to create this peoples' peace. We delude ourselves if we believe that the surrender of the armies of our enemies will make the peace we long for. The unconditional surrender of the armies of our enemies is the first and necessary step—but the first step only.

"We have seen already, in areas liberated from the Nazi and Fascist tyranny, what problems peace will bring. And we delude ourselves if we attempt to believe wishfully that all these problems can be solved overnight.

"The firm foundation can be built—and it will be built. But the continuance and assurance of a living peace must, in the long run, be the work of the people themselves.

Difficulties Up to People.

"We ourselves, like all peoples who have gone thru the difficult processes of liberation and adjustment, know of our own experience how great the difficulties can be. We know that they are not difficulties peculiar to any continent or any nation.

"Our own revolutionary war left behind it, in the words of one American historian, 'an eddy of lawlessness and disregard of human life.'

"There were separatist movements of one kind or another in Vermont, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Maine. There were insurrections, open or threatened, in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. These difficulties we worked out for ourselves as the peoples of the liberated areas of Europe, faced with complex problems of adjustment, will work out their difficulties for themselves.

Unity Termed Necessary.

"Peace can be made and kept only by the united determination of free and peace-loving peoples who are willing to work together—willing to help one another—willing to respect and tolerate and try to understand one another's opinions and feelings.

"The nearer we come to vanquishing our enemies the more we inevitably become conscious of differences among the victors.

"We must not let those differences divide us and blind us to our more important common and continuing interests in winning the war and building the peace.

"International coöperation on which enduring peace must be based is not a one way street.

Opposes "Power Politics."

"Nations like individuals do not always see alike or think alike, and international coöperation and progress are not helped by any nation assuming that it has a monopoly of wisdom or of virtue.

"In the future world, the misuse of power, as implied in the term 'power politics,' must not be a controlling factor in international relations. That is the heart of the principles to which we have subscribed.

"We cannot deny that power is a factor in world politics any more than we can deny its existence as a factor in national politics. But in a democratic world, as in a democratic nation, power must be linked with responsibility, and obliged to defend and justify itself within the framework of the general good.

"Perfectionism, no less than isolationism or imperialism or power politics, may obstruct the paths to international peace. Let us not forget that the retreat to isolationism a quarter of a century ago was started not by a direct attack against international coöperation, but against the alleged imperfections of the peace.

LABOR IS OPPOSED TO NATIONAL DRAFT PLAN, SAYS GREEN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Labor still is reluctant to support compulsory national service legislation, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said tonight.

Following President Roosevelt's request that congress pass a national service act, Green said in a statement:

"We doubt the need for such legislation. We fear it will create confusion, adversely affect morale, and hinder the smooth functioning of the war production program."

Such a law, he said, would not increase the supply of man power or promote the effective use of the available workers. "On the other hand," he cautioned, "it may result in decreased efficiency and lower individual production."

"In our disillusionment after the last war, we preferred international anarchy to international coöperation with nations which did not see and think exactly as we did. We gave up the hope of gradually achieving a better peace because we had not the courage to fulfill our responsibilities in an admittedly imperfect world.

"We must not let that happen again, or we shall follow the same tragic road again—the road to a third world war.

THE ATLANTIC CHARTER

"Principles" Don't Provide Easy Application, He Says.

"We can fulfill our responsibilities for maintaining the security of our own country only by exercising our power and our influence to achieve the principles in which we believe and for which we have fought.

"In August, 1941, Prime Minister Churchill and I agreed to the principles of the Atlantic Charter, these being later incorporated into the declaration by united nations of Jan. 1, 1942. At the time certain isolationists protested vigorously against our right to proclaim the principles—and against the very principles themselves. Today, many of the same people are protesting against the possibility of violation of the same principles.

"It is true that the statement of principles in the Atlantic Charter does not provide rules of easy application to each and every one of this war-torn world's tangled situations. But it is a good and a useful thing—it is an essential thing—to have principles toward which we can aim.

Use of Influence Vowed.

"And we shall not hesitate to use our influence—and to use it now—to secure, so far as is humanly possible, the fulfilment of the principles of the Atlantic Charter. We have not shrunk from the military responsibilities brought on by this war. We cannot and will not shrink from the political responsibilities which follow in the wake of battle.

"I do not wish to give the impression that all mistakes can be avoided and that many disappointments are not inevitable in the making of peace. But we must not this time lose the hope of establishing an international order which will be capable of maintaining peace and realizing thru the years more perfect justice between nations.

"To do this we must be on our guard not to exploit and exaggerate the differences between us and our allies, particularly with reference to the peoples who have been liberated from Fascist tyranny. That is not the way to secure a better settlement of those differences or to secure international machinery which can rectify mistakes which may be made.

"Concerned" About Greeks.

"I should not be frank if I did not admit concern about many situations—the Greek and Polish, for example. But those situations are not as easy or as simple to deal with as some spokesmen whose sincerity I do not question would have us believe. We have obligations, not necessarily legal, to the exiled governments, to the underground leaders, and to our major allies who came much nearer the shadows than we did.

"We and our allies have declared that it is our purpose to respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live and to see sovereign rights and self-government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them. But with internal dissension, with many citizens of liberated countries still prisoners of war or forced to labor in Germany, it is difficult to guess the kind of self-government the people really want.

"During the interim period, until conditions permit a genuine expression of the people's will, we and our allies have a duty, which we cannot ignore, to use our influence to the end that no temporary or provisional authorities in the liberated countries block the eventual exercise of the peoples' right freely to choose the government and institutions under which, as free men, they are to live.

Rationalization "Too Easy."

"It is only too easy for all of us to rationalize what we want to believe, and to consider those leaders we like responsible and those we dislike irresponsible. And our task is not helped by stubborn partisanship, however understandable, on the part of opposed internal factions.

"It is our purpose to help the peace loving peoples of Europe to live together as good neighbors, to recognize their common interests, and not to nurse their traditional grievances against one another.

"But we must not permit the many specific and immediate problems of adjustment connected with the liberation of Europe to delay the establishment of permanent machinery for the maintenance of peace. Under the threat of a common danger, the united nations joined together in war to preserve their independence and their freedom.

"They must now join together to make secure the independence and freedom of all peace-loving states, so that never again shall tyranny be able to divide and conquer.

"International peace and well-being, like national peace and well-being, require constant alertness, continuing coöperation, and organized effort.

"International peace and well-being, like national peace and well-being, can be secured only thru institutions capable of life and growth.

"Many of the problems of the peace are upon us even now while the conclusion of the war is still before us. The atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding and determination to find a common ground of common understanding, which surrounded the conversations at Dumbarton Oaks, gives us reason to hope that future discussions will succeed in developing the democratic and fully integrated world security system toward which these preparatory conversations were directed.

"We and the other united nations are going forward, with vigor and resolution, in our efforts to create such a system by providing for it strong and flexible institutions of joint and coöperative action.

"The aroused conscience of humanity will not permit failure in this supreme endeavor.

Seeks Common Advantage.

"We believe that the extraordinary advances in the means of intercommunication between peoples over the past generation offer a practical method of advancing the mutual understanding upon which peace and the institutions of peace must rest, and it is our policy and purpose to use these great technological achievements for the common advantage of the world.

"We support the greatest possible freedom of trade and commerce.

"We Americans have always believed in freedom of opportunity, and equality of opportunity remains one of the principal objectives of our national life. What we believe in for individuals we believe in also for nations. We are opposed to restrictions, whether by public act or private arrangement, which distort and impair commerce, transit, and trade.

Hopes for Freer Trade.

"We have housecleaning of our own to do in this regard. But it is our hope, not only in the interest of our own prosperity but in the interest of the prosperity of the world, that trade and commerce and access to materials and markets may be freer after this war than ever before in the history of the world.

"One of the most heartening events of the year in the international field has been the renaissance of the French people and the return of the French nation to the ranks of the united nations.

"Far from having been crushed by the terror of Nazi domination, the French people have emerged with stronger faith than ever in the destiny of their country and in the soundness of the democratic ideals to which the French nation has traditionally contributed so greatly.

Resistance Called Heroic.

"During her liberation France has given proof of her unceasing determination to fight the Germans, continuing the heroic efforts of the resistance groups under the occupation and of all those Frenchmen thruout the world who refused to surrender after the disaster of 1940.

"Today French armies are again on the German frontier and again are fighting shoulder to shoulder with our sons.

"Since our landings in Africa we have placed in French hands all the arms and material of war which our resources and the military situation permitted. And I am glad to say that we are now about to equip new French forces with the most modern weapons for combat duty.

France to Have "Great Influence."

"In addition to the contribution which France can make to our common victory, her liberation likewise means that her great influence will again be available in meeting the problems of peace.

"We fully recognize France's vital interest in a lasting solution of the German problem and the contribution which she can make in achieving international security.

"Her formal adherence to the declaration by united nations a few days ago and the proposal at the Dumbarton Oaks discussions, whereby France would receive one of the five permanent seats in the proposed security council, demonstrate the extent to which France has resumed her proper position of strength and leadership.

FAVORS POST-WAR SERVICE

President to Send Special Message to Congress.

"I am clear in my own mind that, as an essential factor in the maintenance of peace in the future, we must have universal military training after this war, and I shall send a special message to the congress on this subject.

"An enduring peace cannot be achieved without a strong America—strong in the social and economic sense as well as in the military sense.

"In the state of the union message last year, I set forth what I considered to be an American economic Bill of Rights.

"I said then, and I say now, that these economic truths represent a second Bill of Rights under which a new basis of security and prosperity can be established for all—regardless of station, race, or creed.

Recites "Economic Rights."

"Of these rights the most fundamental, and one on which the fulfilment of the others in a large degree depends, is the 'right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries or shops or farms or mines of the nation.' In turn, others of the economic rights of American citizenship such as the right to a decent home, to a good education, to good medical care, to social security, to reasonable farm income, will, if fulfilled, make major contributions to achieving adequate levels of employment.

"The federal government must see to it that these rights become realities—with the help of states, municipalities, business, labor, and agriculture.

"We have had full employment during the war. We have had it because the government has been ready to buy all the materials of war which the country could produce—and this has amounted to approximately half our present productive capacity.

Full Employment Termed Goal.

"After the war we must maintain full employment with government performing its peace time functions. This means that we must achieve a level of demand and purchasing power by private consumers—farmers, business men, workers, professional men, housewives—which is sufficiently high to replace war time government demands; and it means also that we must greatly increase our export trade above the pre-war level.

"Our policy is, of course, to rely as much as possible on private enterprise to provide jobs. But the American people will not accept mass unemployment or mere makeshift work. There will be need for the work of every one willing and able to work—and that means close to 60 million jobs.

"Full employment means not only jobs—but productive jobs. Americans do not regard jobs that pay substandard wages as productive jobs.

Wants Enterprise to Work, He Says.

"We must make sure that private enterprise works as it is supposed to work—on the basis of initiative and vigorous competition, without the stifling presence of monopolies and cartels.

"During the war we have guaranteed investment in enterprise essential to the war effort. We should also take appropriate measures in peace time to secure opportunities for new small enterprises and for productive business expansion for which finance would otherwise be unavailable.

"This necessary expansion of our peace time productive capacity will require new facilities, new plants, and new equipment.

"It will require large outlays of money which should be raised thru normal investment channels. But while private capital should finance this expansion program, the government should recognize its responsibility for sharing part of any special or abnormal risk of loss attached to such financing.

Plans Public Works.

"Our full employment program requires the extensive development of our natural resources and other useful public works. The undeveloped resources of this continent are still vast. Our river watershed projects will add new and fertile territories to the United States. The TVA, which was constructed at a cost of 750 million dollars—the cost of waging this war for less than four days—was a bargain.

"We have similar opportunities in our other great river basins. By harnessing the resources of these river basins, as we have in the Tennessee valley, we shall provide the same kind of stimulus to enterprise as was provided by the Louisiana Purchase and the new discoveries in the west during the 19th century.

"If we are to avail ourselves fully of the benefits of civil aviation, and if we are to use the automobiles we can produce, it will be necessary to construct thousands of airports and to overhaul our entire national highway system.

"The provision of a decent home for every family is a national necessity, if this country is to be worthy of its greatness—and that task will itself create great employment opportunities. Most of our cities need extensive rebuilding. Much of our farm plant is in a state of disrepair.

"To make a frontal attack on the problems of housing and urban reconstruction will require thorogoing coöperation between industry and labor, and the federal, state, and local governments.

"An expanded social security program, and adequate health and education programs must play essential rôles in a program designed to support individual productivity and mass purchasing power. I shall communicate further with the congress on these subjects at a later date.

"The millions ot productive jobs that a program of this nature could bring are jobs in private enterprise. They are jobs based on the expanded demand for the output of our economy for consumption and investment. Thru a program of this character we can maintain a national income high enough to provide for an orderly retirement of the public debt along with reasonable tax reduction.

"Our present tax system geared primarily to war requirements must be revised for peace time so as to encourage private demand.

"While no general revision of the tax structure can be made until the war ends on all fronts, the congress should be prepared to provide tax modifications at the end of the war in Europe, designed to encourage capital to invest in new enterprises and to provide jobs. As an integral part of this program to maintain high employment, we must, after the war is over, reduce or eliminate taxes which bear too heavily on consumption.

"Deep Disturbances" Predicted.

"The war will leave deep disturbances in the world economy, in our national economy, in many communities, in many families, and in many individuals. It will require determined effort and responsible action of all of us to find our way back to peace time and to help others to find their way back to peace time—a peace time that holds the values of the past and the promise of the future.

"If we attack our problems with determination we shall succeed. And we must succeed. For freedom and peace cannot exist without security.

"During the last year the American people, in a national election, reasserted their democratic faith.

"In the course of that campaign various references were made to 'strife' between this administration and the congress, with the implication, if not the direct assertion, that this administration and the congress could never work together harmoniously in the service of the nation.

"It cannot be denied that there have been disagreements between the legislative and executive branches—as there have been disagreements during the last century and a half.

"I think we all realize, too, that there are some people in this capital city whose task is in large part to stir up dissension and to magnify normal, healthy disagreements so that they appear to be irreconcilable conflicts.

"But—I think that the overall record in this respect is eloquent: The government of the United States of America—all branches of it—has a good record of achievement in this war.

Executive Coöperation Praised.

"The congress, the executive, and the judiciary have worked together for the common good.

"I myself want to tell you, the members of the senate and of the house of representatives, how happy I am in our relationships and friendships. I have not yet had the pleasure of meeting some of the new members in each house, but I hope that opportunity will offer itself in the near future.

"We have a great many problems ahead of us and we must approach them with realism and courage.

"This new year of 1945 can be the greatest year of achievement in human history.

"The year 1945 can see the final ending of the Nazi-Fascist reign of terror in Europe.

"The year 1945 can see the closing in of the forces of retribution about the center of the malignant power of imperialistic Japan.

Envisions World Peace.

"Most important of all—1945 can and must see the substantial beginning of the organization of world peace. This organization must be the fulfilment of the promise for which men have fought and died in this war. It must be the justification of all the sacrifices that have been made—of all the dreadful misery that this world has endured.

"We Americans of today, together with our allies, are making history—and I hope it will be better history than ever has been made before.

"We pray that we may be worthy of the unlimited opportunities that God has given us."

BRITISH ACCUSE ELAS OF FLEEING WITH HOSTAGES

Release Demanded as Truce Condition.

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 7 [Sunday] —(AP)—Accusing the left wing ELAS of taking a large number of British and Greek civilians as hostages when they pulled out of Athens, Lt. Gen. Ronald M. Scobie declared today this violated the rules of civilized warfare and that any truce negotiations would have to cover release of the hostages.

The British commander of British and Greek government forces in Greece said the original British terms for a truce, which called for surrender of weapons by the ELAS, had been withdrawn but that he was still prepared to discuss terms with ELAS leaders.

Scobie disclosed that besides civilian hostages, the ELAS had captured a "considerable number" of British and Greek regular troops and that the ELAS had refused repeated requests for the International Red Cross to visit the prison camps or "to give any assurance they are being conducted according to recognized conventions."

Athens Quiet at Last.

With the abrupt withdrawal of the ELAS forces from the city, Athens was quiet for the first time in a month.

Field Marshal Alexander, allied commander in the Mediterranean, and Harold MacMillan, British resident minister at allied Mediterranean headquarters, returned to Athens and conferred with Scobie, Regent Archbishop Damaskinos and Premier Nicholas Plastiras.

British forces had been prepared for a full scale offensive to throw the ELAS out of the city today, but found that the leftists had fled.

Warfare Continues.

There was no indication, however, that the ELAS was giving up its fight, for Scobie's bulletin today told of continue warfare in the Piraeus and Patri areas.

Plastiras told a press conference he was confident that with Attica [province which includes Athens] cleared, order would be restored to all of Greece within weeks.

"But I hope the rebellion will end with the rebels laying down their arms," he said.

He said he took the portfolios of war, navy and air in addition to the premiership of his cabinet because "the situation in Greece is purely military."

'No Dictatorship.'

"If the rebels respond to my invitation to lay down their arms, trusting my word that I will not allow establishment of a dictatorship, then my job as war minister will be confined to the creation of a first-class national army. If not, then I will naturally be compelled to head the clearing of the situation by force."

Where Couple Died in Fire

Bruno Sadowski, 54, a die caster, and his wife, Katherine, 52, died yesterday when flames trapped them in their basement bedroom in a three story building at 2020 Cortland st. The fire swept the building causing $5,000 loss, according to Chief Paul Zwiefka who said the blaze was started by an overheated furnace.

Their daughter Mary, 24, a defense worker, was asleep in her first floor room when she heard her mother scream. She told police she ran to the basement, but couldn't get past the flames. She awakened a neighbor, Leonard Popolinski, but both were unable to get into the basement bedroom.

Popolinski and his wife, Leona, then carried their three year old son to safety. Mary collapsed and was taken to the St. Elizabeth hospital.

WRITERS SEEK U. S. ACTION TO GET GREEK FACTS

Charge British Allow Only One Side of Story.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 5 [Delayed]. — American correspondents today were planning to draft a petition asking the United States state department to intervene in order that the story of both sides of this Greek revolution may be presented to American readers. It was hoped the petition would be sent to the department thru Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh.

The action was decided upon after repeated requests of American and British correspondents to interview representatives of the leftist liberation front on their frequent official visits to this side of the lines had been refused by British military authorities. Early in the revolution this writer and several other American correspondents went thru the lines to the ELAS side to describe conditions there but since then all such intercourse has been absolutely forbidden by the British.

Cite Needs of Security.

The British base their refusal to allow correspondents to interview liberation front leaders on grounds of military security. They state the liberation front is an "enemy" and remind the writers of the rigid regulations under which we are accredited and allowed to work with the military forces.

These rules are justified regarding British writers but the position of the Americans is different. Thruout the revolution the Americans here—a few army men and united nations relief and rehabilitation administration representatives—have maintained a neutral position and this position has been accepted by both the government and the ELAS side. For several weeks the UNRRA personnel lived in the Acropole Palace hotel behind ELAS lines and came and went thru the lines without question. The air transport command, until a few days ago, lived at the Cosmopolite hotel on the exact boundary between ELAS and British lines. UNRRA members are going behind the ELAS lines to distribute food and medical supplies.

All Pleas Rejected.

Army and UNRRA personnel are allowed to talk to the ELAS if they desire. Only correspondents are forbidden to do so. British authorities state that intercourse with the ELAS leaders would violate security because correspondents, in the daily conference, are taken into their confidence by the military and told off the record information. We then requested an interview in the presence of a British officer the next time ELAS leaders came thru the lines for a conference. We even suggested putting out questions thru an officer with no words actually passing between the ELAS representative and the correspondents. The answer still was "No."

Despite this attitude of the higher authorities which might be expected to extend into censorship, the censorship has been fair.

POST-WAR BILLS TO LEAD FIELD IN IOWA ASSEMBLY

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 7 [Special].—The 51st Iowa general assembly will convene Monday with a host of post-war plans in the offing that may result in a lengthy session.

Major legislation expected to be presented at this session, includes 19 school bills drafted by the school code commission and calling for 12 million dollars in state aid for schools, creation of a new department of public instruction, and a retirement plan for teachers and school employes.

The state board of education and state board of control will ask 17 million dollars for new construction at state institutions, including universities and mental hospitals.

A 638 million dollar post-war highway program has been recommended by the state post-war rehabilitation commission established by the last legislature.

At caucus meetings held today, the house Republican members named Rep. Harold Felton of Indianola as candidate for speaker, Edward Morrissey of Valeria for speaker pro tem and X. T. Prentis of Mount Ayr as their floor leader. The senate G. O. P. members named B. C. Whitehill of Marshall town as candidate for president pro tem.

THEATER OF AIR OPENS '45 WITH OPERA FAVORITE

'La Boheme' Music Wins W-G-N Audience.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The rapturous music and the pathetic story of Puccini's "La Bohème" were presented by W-G-N and Mutual's orchestra, singers and drama group in Medinah temple last night as the Chicago Theater of the Air's first 1945 offering. To Marion Claire, as Mimi, and to Richard Tucker, as Rudolph, fell most of the heavy love melodies which have kept "Bohème" among the best liked operas in the repertoire.

The first great opportunity for music making in the passionate Italian manner came when Tucker received his cue for the first act Narrative. His delivery was rich and round of tone. A skilful use of nuance gave the music an eloquence which would have commanded a hearty burst of applause even if the announcer had not been on hand to signal for it.

Miss Claire Wins Applause.

The Narrative's companion piece, "They Call Me Mimi," which is fragile where the other is robust, and which carries more of the opera's essential pathos than any other music of the first act, was tellingly sung by Miss Claire. Another burst of rapid fire applause followed.

Music of quite another sort, Musetta's perky song in the second act, fell to Penny Perry. She aired the somewhat frivolous philosophy of the song competently and with a pleasant tone quality.

Conductor Henry Weber coaxed from the orchestra a type of fervent playing which gave tone colorings an added sheen and rhythms an extraordinary cogency. The capable baritone, Bruce Foote, and the W-G-N chorus made up the remainder of the musical forces.

Condensed Into Hour.

In order to condense into a single hour this relatively complicated story of love and misunderstanding in the Latin quarter of 19th century Paris, many of the opera's longer sequences were entrusted to actors and actresses rather than musicians. Chief among the drama group were Sondra Gair, Wilms Herbert, Laurette Fillbrandt, and William Everett.

The narrator was John Barclay and the announcer Lee Bennett. The production as a whole was the work of Jack La Frandre. Robert Trendler had coached the ensemble.

SLAVS OBSERVE TODAY AS THEIR CHRISTMAS DAY

Today is Christmas day on the Julian calendar and will be marked by celebrations in the homes of approximately 100,000 Chicagoans of Slavic birth or descent, and in Russian, Ukrainian, and Serbian Orthodox, and Greek Catholic [Carpatho-Russian] churches.

The Christmas divine liturgy will begin at 10 a. m. in Holy Trinity cathedral, 1121 N. Leavitt st. At the same hour there will be high mass in St. Michael's Greek Catholic church, 2419 N. Campbell av. Masses also will be offered at 8 and 10 a. m. in SS. Peter and Paul Orthodox church, 9211 Avalon av.

Last night Christmas eve was observed in the churches with vespers, midnight mass, and carol singing. In the homes of citizens of Ukrainian descent special holiday menus, featuring kutya, a compote of wheat, honey, poppy seed, and nuts, eaten in accordance with traditional rites, was served.

SEEKS TO FORCE PARKING LOTS TO CLEAN WALKS

An ordinance to force operators of parking lots to keep their sidewalks and driveways clear of snow and ice will be recommended to the city council by Lloyd M. Johnson, commissioner of the department of streets and electricity, he said yesterday.

Many complaints have been made by pedestrians that downtown parking lot owners neglect to clean their walks, he said. These sidewalks are particularly dangerous when icy, he said, because they slope.

Altho sidewalks technically are under the control of the city, Johnson said, the parking lot owners may be made responsible for their maintenance because the owners must obtain city permission to build driveways. Johnson said he will ask Corporation Counsel Hodes to prepare the ordinance.

WAGES IN WAR.

Wage rates, like commodity prices, are set in the market and, therefore, rise and fall with the fluctuations of supply and demand. Contracts with unions provide for the stabilization of wage rates in spite of market changes, and most employers do not cut the pay of their permanent help except in deep depressions.

During wars wage rates rise, both because of the drafts made upon the labor force for the army and navy and because of the need for more help for expanded industry. In the last war the annual earnings of American wage earners rose continuously. A study made by Prof. Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago, now a captain in the marine corps, showed that worker earnings advanced 29 per cent between 1914 and 1917, but that the rise in the cost of living completely offset the pay raises, so that the purchasing power of wages did not advance at all. The increases given in 1918, the last year of the war, enabled the average American worker to gain a little bit on the mounting cost of subsistence. Real wages, by which is meant the purchasing power of the money wages received, had outrun the spiral of rising prices by barely 3 per cent at the time of the armistice.

But real wages, Prof. Douglas found, had been stable for many years before 1914. Altho wages had been rising for many years, living costs had been going up, too, and pay for an hour's work when the other war started would not buy any more goods and services than in the 1890s.

In the present war the situation is different. Wages had been rising faster than living costs for many years before the outbreak of the war in 1939. Since 1939 there have been further large advances in wages and only small increases in living costs, so that real wages have continued to rise.

Prof. Douglas' figures on annual earnings were extended to 1926. From 1918 to his terminal year earnings rose, interrupted by declines only in 1921 and 1922. But in the middle of 1920 prices tumbled and continued to drop into 1923, stabilizing thereafter at the lower level. With wages going up almost steadily and prices going down, real wages advanced, and by 1926 were 24 per cent higher than in 1914.

Between 1926 and the outbreak of the war in 1939 there was a boom, a depression, and partial recovery. Average weekly earnings [annual rates not being available] by 1939 were almost but not quite as great as in 1926. The cost of living in 1939 was 21 per cent lower. Thus real earnings of employed American workers the year the war started were substantially higher than in 1926.

The war has created a seller's market for labor and wage rates have risen to heights never before dreamed of. Average weekly earnings, which were $24.58 in 1939, have advanced to $46.25, the department of labor figures show. This is an increase of 88 per cent. In the meantime the cost of living, as shown by the department of labor studies, has gone up 27 per cent. Real wages increased 72 per cent during the war. The cost of living figures were attacked by several labor organizations, but experts whose impartiality is not subject to question reviewed the labor department's data and methods and, in general, approved them. During the last year the studies show little change in living costs but a large gain in average wages.

The wage advances have come about because of the withdrawals from industry of enough men to fight two wars while expanding our national output to twice the greatest ever attained in peace time. Union membership has increased during this period and union officials have attributed to themselves the responsibility for the advance made. Neither they nor the national administration, which also claims credit, has had much to do with it. Wages would have gone up as a result of the greatly expanded demand for labor and the reduced supply of labor if there weren't any unions or a national war labor agency seeking to correct substandard inequalities.

When the war is over and the demand for labor drops and the supply of labor rises wages will fall again. Common sense and experience teach us that. Union membership increased with rising wages in the last war. As the unions couldn't possibly keep up wages after the panic of 1920 they lost many of their members. The membership of American trade unions rose from 2,716,000 in 1914 to 5,110,800 in 1920, and dropped to 3,780,000 in the next three years. Wise labor leaders will prepare their constituents for the inevitable change, but to do that they will have to admit that high war earnings are not the result of their magic.

IMMIGRANT WORDS.

Mrs. Luce, upon her return from Europe, told reporters in Washington that in her opinion a great many of the soldiers are America firsters, but few of them are isolationists.

What she meant by that is her secret. In truth, isolationism is a political catchword that was an emigrant from England and never was naturalized in America. No American political leader of consequence and no American political party that amounted to anything ever advocated the kind of living behind a Chinese wall that the term implies. In that sense there never were any isolationists in this country and there probably never will be as long as we continue to be a leading importer and exporter, the leading lender to the world, the leading almoner to the world, the most traveled people in the world, and a nation maintaining diplomatic relations with the nations of the world.

We don't know when the word "isolation" first was used as descriptive of a political attitude. We had a notion that it appeared in English politics about a century ago, when England had decided to have nothing to do with the Holy Alliance that was trying to run the continent, but if so the Oxford dictionary doesn't support the theory. The first use noted was in 1896. Early in February of that year, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian leader, seems to have said:

"Whether splendidly isolated or dangerously isolated, I will not now debate, but for my part I think splendidly isolated because the isolation of England comes from her superiority."

Within a few weeks George Joachim Goschen, then Britain's first lord of the admiralty, picked up the phrase in the following sentence: "We have stood alone in that which is called isolation—our splendid isolation as one of our colonial friends was good enough to call it."

The first use of the word in this country is credited to a Philadelphia newspaper in 1899, three years later. The new American historical dictionary doesn't include "isolation." As an import from abroad, it has a companion in "appeasement," another word that has no native roots. Both of them came into use here—thanks to the efforts of British propagandists and their American collaborators. People who talk about "isolationists" and "appeasers" thereby reveal that they are the tools, conscious or unconscious, of British propaganda.

In fact, repeated polls have shown that at least 80 per cent of the American people have always believed that their own country's welfare should be the first consideration of their government. Thus, 80 per cent of the American people, at least, are America firsters. Probably the percentage has increased of late in view of the recent revelations of British and Russian designs in Greece and Poland. It should be more obvious than ever that, in a world containing British firsters and Russian firsters, Americans must be America firsters if their country is to survive and prosper.

SPENDING FOR VOTES.

The reports of the two parties show that the Republicans received $437,000 more than did the Democrats in Presidential campaign contributions, and that they spent $772,000 more than the Democrats. But the Democrats elected a President and they picked up 51 seats in the house and one in the senate.

Doubtless the political action committee of the CIO, which has already reminded 115 members of congress of its claims, will be quick to assert that it provided the margin of victory. But other interpretations are possible. There are 3,335,000 persons on the New Deal pay roll, and with that many aces in the hole no party need worry about the size of its campaign fund. It has sure votes, not dollars of problematical value in getting votes.

One of the most clairvoyant predictions on the election was made by the Dun Survey of Greenwich, Conn., three weeks before the election. It stated then that Mr. Roosevelt couldn't lose, because "the New Deal has placed federal employes in various states, in numbers sufficient to provide a marginal bloc vote needed to elect Mr. Roosevelt." It said that without this "bought" vote the fourth term would be resoundingly defeated. It said, further, that the federal employe bloc vote in 1944 was replacing the WPA marginal vote, which had insured a New Deal victory in 1936 and 1940, and that there had been no free representative elections since 1934. It warned that the New Deal's program for post-war relief is designed to provide the marginal vote needed to win in 1948.

Much was made by the New Deal of "decentralizing" government when the war caused great overcrowding in Washington. Bureaus and agencies were transplanted to distant cities. Evidently the number of employes transferred was carefully apportioned according to political needs, while still others were added to the pay rolls of these decentralized offices. A post-election survey showed that shifts in federal workers since 1940 could easily have carried 11 states with 191 electoral votes for Roosevelt. In nine of these the number of resident federal employes was greater than Roosevelt's majority. Each employe also probably carried one or more votes from his own family to Roosevelt.

To most of the burocracy the New Deal was the meal ticket. Why vote it out of existence and run the risk of losing their jobs under another administration which might practice economy? It would appear to be self-evident why the New Deal did not have to spend a great deal to win votes. The votes were already there.

THEY GOT THEIRS.

Among the new bills introduced in congress on the opening day was one by Rep. Lane of Massachusetts, who wants the veterans of the merchant marine to be treated equally with the veterans of the army and navy in the distribution of federal benefits.

The merchant sailors can't have it both ways. They insisted on receiving very large bonuses for traveling into dangerous waters, with the result that some of them collected the pay of a vice admiral and all of them who were exposed to danger were paid far more than they were accustomed to getting and, of course, far more than went to enlisted men in the army and navy.

The special benefits voted to soldiers and sailors are intended to express the thanks of the nation to those of its sons who not only risked their lives for their country, but sacrificed their own financial welfare to do so. Some of the men of the merchant marine can qualify under the first count, but not under the second. They are entitled to the benefits of the G. I. bill only if they pay back to the government the bonuses they received for accepting the war risk.

There was a time when the men of the merchant marine were subjected to great danger in many parts of the world. It would be instructive to learn how rapidly the bonuses were revised downward as the seas became safer.

HOW NOW, ENGLAND?

The following editorial is reproduced from the New York Daily News of Jan. 5:

On Dec. 29, the London Economist denounced the United States as hypocritical, preachy, and entirely too vague about its foreign policy, especially its post-war intentions. Maybe, hinted the Economist, Britain after the war had better team up with Russia. The Economist is owned by a company whose chairman is Brendan Bracken, Winston Churchill's long time friend and British minister of information.

We didn't pay much attention to the British weekly's blast at the time; thought it might have resulted from some editor's consuming either too much or two little Scotch at Christmas.

On Jan. 2, however, the Yorkshire Post, owned by Mrs. Anthony Eden's family, chimed in with an editorial entitled "Will America Kindly Say?", indorsing the Economist's blast, and adding that the United States seems to be plotting to grab some pieces of the British empire after the war, "such as bases the United States would like."

The next day, the London Times, looked on as virtually the press mouthpiece of the British government, crashed thru with an editorial saying that the United States shows an ingrained "unwillingness to accept political responsibilities in Europe." The Yorkshire Post, the same day, took exception to "silly [American] press sneers at Field Marshal [Sir Bernard L.] Montgomery, one of the greatest of soldiers."

We'll agree on that estimate of Marshal Montgomery. But we read numerous newspapers, and we'll add that we have never yet seen or heard of a sneer at Montgomery in an American newspaper. The American press and public generally, we are convinced, admire Montgomery as a soldier as much as do the British people.

Replying to these concerted British complaints that we aren't holding up our end in the war and don't intend to do so afterward, we'd like to point out first that Von Rundstedt did indeed break thru American troops in his Dec. 16 counter-offensive, but that he was also stopped by American troops. There weren't any British troops in that part of the line.

We'd like to point out further that an estimated 75 per cent to 80 per cent of all allied troops on the western front are American troops.

As to the reasons why our men are in western Europe, it can no longer be argued sanely that they are defending us against German attack—or England against German conquest. Germany can neither defeat England nor invade us in this war.

Our official position is that we are fighting in Europe to defend the future, by making it impossible for Germany to start another war. In addition, it would seem that we are now fighting in Europe to bolster up Britain's power to influence western European affairs after this war, so that Russian power and influence may not flood all Europe.

The British and the Russians are playing power politics against each other in the middle of this war, while we, at least at this moment, do most of the fighting.

If Britain feels like teaming up with Russia after the war and leaving us out in the cold, the United States can get along all right—if necessary, against England and Russia at the same time. That is, of course, if we keep on the defensive and don't go over to Europe to fight them. Our productive and military achievements in this war forecast that. And if things should regrettably come to such a showdown, there are several potential British hostages in this hemisphere.

All this is said without any animosity toward Great Britain. We admire the British people for their historic achievements; and Great Britain is mamma to the United States, even if mamma has grown a bit querulous in her maturer years.

We make these frank remarks because we are aware that the British do not respect people who do not talk back to them. Whether that attitude is wise or unwise is not for us to opine. But that is the British attitude by and large.

The Churchill government, for reasons best known to itself, has opened a barrage of anti-American propaganda via British publications which work hand in glove with the Churchill government. If Americans take this British scolding meekly and without retorting to it, there will be more of the same, and the consequences can be most unpleasant, if nothing worse, for all concerned.

We'll get along much better with our British allies and friends, both during and after the war, if Americans will take to retorting frankly [tho politely, of course] whenever influential Britons talk out of turn about us.

Editorials of the Day

ROOSEVELT'S FAITH IN PRIVATE ENTERPRISE DIES A-BORNIN'.

[San Antonio Express.]

It is the United States News' information and conviction that President Roosevelt has plans neither for debt management nor for dealing with unemployment after the war. For that reason, it currently asserts that when and as those problems shall become acute, Mr. Roosevelt will follow the path of least resistance—politically, of course—and turn to public expenditures and general boondoggling. His mention of 60 million jobs, the United States News is sure, was "a slip of the tongue." He has no idea where 60 million post-war jobs might be found—other than by government spending.

It is seldom that an editorial judgment receives such prompt confirmation from the subject. On the day the United States News containing that opinion reached subscribers, President Roosevelt called upon the congress for 76 million dollars "to help get post-war employment rolling" toward the 60 million job goal. The method would be to divide the pot among states, counties, and cities, according to population—not give it to them, mind you, but lend it—to pay for drawing blueprints and engineering plans for public works. After that would come the deluge.

Plainly, the administration has a sharp eye on the ball. Heretofore it has required that indigent government units with outstretched palms at least have paid for their plans. Now it is taking no chances; it is making certain that when unemployment shall return, everything will be shipshape for Washington simply to turn on the tap. This time the engendering of "prosperity" a la WPA is not to be hindered even briefly by state and local shortsightedness.

What could have happened, in so short a time, to Mr. Roosevelt's profound campaign confidence in private enterprise?

FUTURE FREEDOM AND THE DEBT.

[Economic Council Letter.]

At the present time and for some time past, the spendings of the United States exceed the spendings of all other belligerent powers [both our associates and our enemies] put together. Our national debt in three years has grown from 44 billion to 226 billion. Today it practically equals the combined debts of all the other belligerent powers, including both our associates and our enemies. If the war in Europe lasts until next spring or summer, and the war in Japan lasts for two or three years more, which is the expectation of well informed persons at the moment, our debt will probably reach 400 billion, and probably will be more. This is about 50 billion more than our entire national wealth. Such being the case, if we are not to retain permanently a totalitarian form of government, the most intense effort of mind and spirit will be required of our people and their congress. There is henceforth and forever no place in American politics for a tagtail policy like the see-you-and-raise-you policy of Mr. Dewey and his party in the recent political campaign.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

"GIVE ME SOMETHING TO TAKE!"

ALL too many of us seem to think that when we visit a physician we are defrauded if two or three prescriptions are not forthcoming. We forget that many an ailment will respond better to hygienic measures, more rest, and balanced menus, than to the influence of any drug.

But in some quarters the bottle which the druggist delivers typifies all our faith in the healing art. It may be just what is needed. If the body lacks iron, for example, it may be wiser to supply it from an outside source than to await the accumulation of an adequate quantity via the diet. The emphasis today, however, is upon keeping well rather than getting well. We must learn the rules of body care and observe them if we would avoid incapacity and hence the inability to earn a livelihood.

But there are numerous remedies of real power. Few modern medical men feel that they can get along without the valuable sulfonamides. They realize, however, that the remedies must be watched carefully lest they do more harm than good. Skin eruptions may break out, the kidneys may be damaged, and the whole system upset because they are not given expertly or sufficiently guarded with alkalies.

We can recall that grandmother had one or two favorite "receipts" which are just as effective today as they were a century ago. The old standby, Dover's powder—a concoction of that English buccaneer-doctor, Thomas Dover—is one of the time honored preparations that has endured. True enough, it has been replaced in part with aspirin or one of the salicylates, but many an internal congestion has been relieved completely thru its use.

We don't take medicine today because some one says, "It helped me a lot." We study a product for its specific effect, when diagnosis is certain. We know that atropin [belladonna] will relax the smooth muscle of the digestive tract and thus become a useful aid in spastic colitis and various stomach disorders. Now and then a chemical will be proposed which appears potent altho no explanation is possible. It may be that the accidental trial of a certain compound will outweigh the scientific evidence that it is useful. But if something is of truly lasting utility, proof will come speedily.

There is an adage from Alexander Pope:

"Be not the first by whom the new
are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

Younger physicians employ more drugs. Those who are older, and whose judgment has been ripened by experience, probably utilize fewer. In addition, their formulas are simpler. They have recourse to single ingredients rather than shotgun mixtures. Likewise the dose is based upon the disposition, temperament, and the weight of the patient and is accurately adjusted.

We all have friends who are constant dosers. They believe mistakenly that their vital organs will be likely to pop out of gear unless they have available a box of pills which are considered anchors of health.

Without denying ourselves the benefits of the great advances in pharmacy, we can make medicine a servant and not a master. Furthermore, we can keep in mind that lessons of right living are more precious than a concoction of pearls.

WORM CATCHER.

L. F. writes: Have you ever heard of getting rid of a tapeworm by starving the patient and then tempting the worm up thru the mouth with food?

REPLY.

This suggestion must have come from Bil Holman. Starve the parasite all you please, he will still hang on. He must be made so sick with drugs that he will give up the ghost and depart.

THICKLY POPULATED.

A. S. writes: Is it all right for a 14 year old girl to sleep in a bedroom with three canary birds, a bowl of goldfish, and a dozen plants?

REPLY.

No harm if ventilation is adequate. The cages should be covered so that your pets will not warble and keep you awake.

SHORT OF BREATH.

J. L. writes: What causes shortwindedness in tuberculosis?

REPLY.

The pulmonary area may be lessened sharply. In consequence, effort will bring on the symptom.

NOT KNOWN EXACTLY.

F. T. writes: Is rheumatic fever a germ disease?

REPLY.

Probably, altho the question has not been answered definitely. The streptococcus seems to be the accepted culprit.

WATCH TROUBLE.

J. B. writes: My watch ran perfectly until six months ago, and it still does when it is on the dresser. But when I put it on my wrist it will not work. The jeweler said I have acid blood. Could this be responsible?

REPLY.

Some one is spoofing you. It couldn't be the jeweler, could it?

LAGGARD PULSE.

Mrs. W. writes: What is bradycardia?

REPLY.

Unusually slow beating of the heart.

FIRST OF ALL DIVISIONS.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—As one of those who carried the red 1 from Cantigny to Soissons to St. Mihiel to the Argonne to Germany and back home, I have been wondering what part the 1st division was playing in the near debacle of the last 10 days on the European front.

They were in there somewhere, I felt sure, and I could not picture the old 1st breaking before any drive, even tho the army of which it was a part was being overrun and badly mauled.

The front page story in Saturday's Tribune was a mighty welcome confirmation of my idea. Pulled out of a rest area at the start of the drive and thrown into the line at Monschau, the 1st was still there and still holding the "hot corner" when Von Rundstedt's attack lost its momentum.

From the map it looks as tho the 1st stalled the drive aimed at Liege and forced the Germans to turn south and west and change their objective to Namur. They are credited with smashing two of the best panzer divisions.

To me it is significant that the 1st division, which in the last war "never failed to gain an objective and never yielded a foot of conquered soil," held its ground when all around other divisions were overrun and mauled to pieces.

The torch we held high in 1918 still lights the way, and the 1st division in younger hands is still the first.

ISOLATIONISTS AND BUSYBODIES.

Ganges, Mich., Dec. 18.—One of the boastful reverberations of the New Dealers and the internationalists following the recent election was that the isolationists were done for. As there seems to be some confusion in the terminology of these two groups, the following is submitted to help clarify what is really meant by these terms.

The isolationist can be likened to a man who loves, provides for, protects, and is proud of his family. He is thrifty, a good citizen, attends to his own business, and is respected by his neighbors. The internationalist can be likened to a man who runs after and provides for another man's family, while neglecting his own. He is not much thought of or respected by his neighbors.

Twenty-five years ago we were led by an altruistic spirit in an effort to establish democracy and freedom thruout the world. Much of our best blood and substance were sacrificed. We received little thanks for it and a lot of unpaid debts. This was soon forgotten, and at the beck of England, the leader of this nation involved us again, with grandiloquent and lofty language in the Atlantic Charter.

Our best chance to help the old world to a lasting peace is not by force but by good example.

[Advice and assistance on draft and military questions, the problems of dependents of service men and veterans, is given here and by mail if a stamped envelope is sent. Personal advice and assistance are given veterans by appointment.]

V. T. T. asks: "Will there be another class for navy V-12 or is it all closed up? Is there any other officer candidate program open in the navy for men who have been eliminated in another program?"

The navy will resume its V-12 program July 1, of this year for approximately 2,000 students selected from among enlisted men. Applicants for the 1945 course will be permitted to express preference for the type of duty toward which they wish their training to point. Modified qualifications for assignment to the midshipmen training makes it possible now for men with minor nonorganic physical disabilities to be appointed to that program. Under new rules, applicants who have been previously separated from any officer candidate training program, active or inactive, may be reconsidered after the completion of six months' sea duty. Candidates must be under 30 on date of application.

A. C. writes: "One of my sons who has been discharged from the army has been sending me and the four children an allotment. Another son is now going into the navy. Can the allotment account be transferred to the son entering the navy?"

No. He will have to initiate application immediately upon reporting to active duty. It would be advisable for him to attach to his application a simple statement outlining the situation. If the bureau of supplies and accounts feels the need of additional information to establish dependency that office will send you the necessary forms.

NO ONE SPOKE FOR AMERICA.

Lake Mills, Wis., Dec. 26.—If the United States had stood for a firm purpose and the maintenance of its principles in the prosecution of this war, neither Russia nor Britain would have overreached themselves in their empire grabbing schemes, and today would be lending full and undivided support to the destruction of German militarism. Likewise, there would be real unity among the allies instead of the present atmosphere of apprehension.

Long before we entered this war and after we were in it, any one who spoke up for the maintenance of American principles or in any way defended our mode of thought and manner of life was shouted down as a "nationalist," a "nativist," or an "isolationist." The result has been the complete disregard by both Russia and Britain of the aims and desires of the American people. All that remained thereafter was for the Russian and British leaders to secure the supine acquiescence of our commander in chief and proceed with the extension of their empires and imperial aims as soon as our full military force came into effect against the Germans on the western front.

DEAN E. SMITH.

THE GROWTH OF MILITARISM.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—The threat of permanent militarism is here. Logically, the question should not even come up in time of war, when, by the very nature of things, everything military is exalted. But this apparently is the reason the militarists have chosen an hour of high emotional stress to impose their policy as a permanent feature on our way of life. James Madison, known as the father of the Constitution, said, "In time of war great discretionary powers are constantly given to the executive magistrate. Constant apprehension of war has the same tendency to render the head too large for the body. A standing military force with an overgrown executive will not long be safe companions to liberty. The means of defense against foreign danger have always been the instruments of tyranny at home."

The militarists refuse to wait for the war spirit to dissipate. They were bitterly disappointed after World War I. when the American people rejected the proposal to transform this nation into an armed camp. Those who would cherish the American tradition against anti-militarism must speak up now and remember the words of Woodrow Wilson: "We never have had, and, while we retain our present principles and ideals, we never shall have, a large standing army. We shall not turn America into a military camp. We shall not ask our young men to spend the best years of their lives making soldiers of themselves." Beware of the super-Americanos who would scuttle the anti-military tradition and duplicate in our nation the monstrous instrument of force which has cursed Europe for so many centuries.

WORLD WAR I. VETERAN.

STREET CAR SERVICE.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Since the inauguration of the coin box system on the Milwaukee av. car lines, the service is something to marvel at. Night after night, between 7 and 8, people intending to ride loopward to work have been standing north of Central av. and watched car after car going north toward Devon without any sign of a car returning on the southbound run.

After a wait of between 20 or 30 minutes several unmarked cars go whizzing by your corner but finally one marked "California av." will stop and allow you to board. At Central av., a ride of only a few blocks, the operators of this car will yell "car ahead" and every one jams onto the car standing there. The one you just left continues on to California and again picks up passengers along the route. Finally you arrive at Irving Park rd., where the conductor suddenly announces that no one will be permitted to get aboard unless they have even change. Block after block the public is refused admittance because they happen to have a dime in their possession instead of the required 8 cents.

We suckers on Milwaukee av. don't mind getting our exact change from the newsboy on the corner before boarding a street car; we don't even mind if the conductor jams the back platform of the car and lets us ride free because we cannot get near the coin box, but this business of waiting 20 or 30 minutes for a southbound car several nights a week is slowly getting us down.

GARAGE LOCATIONS ON CABS.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—I am suggesting a plan whereby thousands of cab miles can be saved daily. Because I am a driver, many passengers tell me that they would be more than willing to take a south side cab south if they only knew how to tell which cab is a south side cab.

This information could be easily given by painting the garage location of each cab on its doors. Then if you were to leave the Palmer House and wanted to go to Rogers Park and there were two cabs unloading at the entrance, you would take the cab marked "North Side," because by so doing you would save tires, gasoline, equipment, and man power. You would be taking the driver to his section of the city, where his garage is located, and where he could most likely finish his shift.

DRIVER.

A NOT SO FREE RIDE.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Dec. 27.—In the current taxicab controversy, no one has seen fit to mention the most disgusting of all rackets practiced by the drivers.

Recently, in Chicago, I was forced to use a cab three times in one day and in each case the routine was the same, which would indicate that it is an established practice.

Cab No. 1 pulled away from the stand with me as the only passenger. Within a half a block the driver spied a group of army officers and invited them in. Naturally, I had no objection to this, altho I was given no opportunity to express myself. The driver asked their destination and, upon arrival, the officers inquired as to the fare but were told, "You don't owe me anything, just give me a tip." Nice patriotic guy—anything for the boys, etc. But five times the 25 cent tips he collected equals $1.25. Not bad.

Having taken me slightly out of my way to deliver the boys, the driver then proceeded to my destination, where he collected the regular fare. This routine was identical with the drivers of cabs Nos. 3 and 4 except that in each of these cases the invited guests were enlisted men, altho they tipped liberally enough.

Ho, hum. Chicago, the great friend of the service men—at a price.

L. M. LARSON.

A ROOF AS IS A ROOF.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Mr. J. G. R.'s idea for roofing the loop to provide a modern centralized airport deserves serious consideration and enthusiastic support. My only criticism: His plan is too conservative.

May I suggest that the supporting columns consist of 12 modern 60 story buildings, uniform in architecture, each covering one block and evenly spaced within the loop district. Twenty-five or 30 feet below the flight deck there would be another platform, identical in area, to be used as hangar space. Considerable steel bridging, of course, would be required between platforms.

Naturally, existing buildings, no matter how modern, would have to be razed to permit the erection of the 12 tower buildings which, collectively, would form a rectangle seven blocks long [north and south] and five blocks wide, allowing a full block each way between towers. Eventually, all buildings between towers would be removed, permitting all existing streets to be doubled in width. All remaining space in the cleared area [23 square blocks] would be used for automobile parking, preferably without charge to the public.

Thus under one roof would be housed the world's greatest mercantile center, affording mass accessibility without a hint of congestion. Perhaps the greatest single building project ever undertaken by man, yet from an engineering standpoint it should be a comparatively simple job.

WATCH YOUR THUMB, LIEUTENANT.

Stevens Point, Wis., Dec. 30.—I have noted with interest the back page of the Dec. 29 issue of The Tribune, particularly the photo of the lieutenant posting a notice of army seizure in the Montgomery Ward plant. So far this picture is the only amusing item, news or otherwise, that I have noted regarding the Montgomery Ward situation.

To drive a tack he is using a machinist's ball-peen hammer; he is choking the handle; and he is posed as a golfer from the standpoint of the position of the thumb.

NEW YORK LACKS UNIVERSITIES OF A REAL CALIBER

Joke About Degrees Given by Columbia.

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 6.—New York is the great gathering point in the United States for people who take their own thinking capacity seriously. Such often gather in or around educational institutions; yet in this respect New York has no such preeminence as in finance or the theater.

In quantity the showing is impressive. Inside the five boroughs are four large institutions of higher education [Columbia, New York university, College of the City of New York, Fordham], besides smaller schools, special technical or training schools, and finishing schools. Some of the smaller ones are departments of the bigger ones or affiliated with them—for example, Barnard college for women is a part of Columbia.

American establishments of this kind have to be considered in two ways — as institutions of learning and as social clubs. In neither respect does New York have anything topnotch to offer. It has no engineering school any better than Rensselaer Polytechnic institute at Troy, N. Y., population 71,000. Medical schools with the greatest prestige are at Chicago, Boston, and Baltimore. The Columbia law school is one sometimes mentioned with those of Northwestern, Yale, or Harvard, but no one ever suggests it is better than any of those three.

Local in Appeal.

Of the four big institutions, three [Fordham, N. Y. U., and C. C. N. Y.], are fundamentally local in appeal. In fact, it may be said of the last two that they rarely get a student from outside a 50 mile radius of Times square.

Columbia has acquired a nationwide reputation inside one profession—pedagogy.

It stands above its rivals in two ways. First it has a special college to train teachers to teach, and to train teachers to train other teachers to teach. This may sound a bit vorticist to the average citizen, but it's an accurate description of the process.

Second, it supplies from its graduate school teachers in our higher institutions with what has become virtually an indispensable tool of their trade—the Ph.D. degree.

Back in the middle of the 19th century, the learned who wanted this ultimate adornment had to go to Germany. The British at that time furnished nothing more impressive than an M.A. The French "doctor of state" degree has had vogue almost entirely with teachers of Romance languages.

Impressive to Laymen.

As American institutions became Germanized in the closing decades of the century, they founded graduate schools and went into the Ph.D. business for themselves. Columbia, in its great expansion under the presidency of the restless Nicholas Murray Butler, put the Ph. D degree on a mass production basis. The professors might refer to Columbia sneeringly as a "Ph.D. factory," but all looking for promotion would come to it if they could. Insiders joked about degrees given for counting the floral epithets in Chaucer, but to laymen the degree was impressive. It had the name of Columbia on it, and Columbia was the biggest thing of its kind.

Columbia may still be the biggest in enrollment if any one knows how to define an enrolled student. Other institutions, however, for a generation now have competed with it in the graduate school business. The Ph.D. of Chicago probably has a higher standing now among professionals than Columbia's; and in the middle west alone those of Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Northwestern may be considered at least equal.

They are fully as useful and offered on just as attractive terms.

Teachers' college, the pedagogues' training school affiliated with Columbia, undoubtedly does much to carry a special New York point of view into the country. On its students it reputedly exercises a strong formative influence, and they, in turn disperse in all directions to exercise their formative influence on American youth

New York Point of View.

Despite its showing of professors concerned only with their business or who have a positively conservative point of view, the prevailing tone of Teachers' college is "radical," "liberal," "leftist.' You probably know what that means in these times. It has nothing to do with liberalism, as the word was once used, nor with "radicalism" in the sense of opposition to orthodoxy. Instead, it is concerned with keeping to the orthodox line in its special religion, Marxism, with allowances for new revelations which come out of Moscow.

Here is a definite pernicious influence of New York if you think this sort of thing pernicious. But in its origin is it of New York? Apologists of Teachers' college say no. The initial impulse to "radical" thinking there, they claim, was brought out of the middle west —from Chicago to be exact—by a philosopher named John Dewey Since then it has only assembled and registered ideas abroad among the American people everywhere.

As Wall street does in finance, then, Teachers' does in the commerce of ideas. It acts as an exchange; it does the brokerage. New York exercises more influence than Kansas City—say—not because of greater reserves of originality but because Kansas City and every place like it sends its ideas to New York.

Freed by Kidnaper

[Associated Press Wirephotos.]

Grace Wadlington after her release by masked bank robber.

East Falls Church, Va., Jan. 6 (AP). —A 14 year old girl, abducted here by a masked man after his unsuccessful attempt to rob a bank, was located in near-by Washington late today, apparently unharmed.

Identified by police as Grace Wadlington, of this community, she was taken by her father to police headquarters to describe the hunted man.

Soon after the girl had been forced at pistol point into the bandit's car, it was found abandoned at a near-by cross roads. Police assumed a second car was used to reach Washington.

The bank manager, A. M. Barber, said he opened the bank's door after closing time to a young man who poked a pistol at him and said: "This is a holdup." Barber slammed the door and the bandit fled.

WHEELER LASHES BACK AT ATTACK BY STETTINIUS

Soldiers Commend Stand of Montanan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.], critical foe of the administration's foreign policy, and secretary of state Stettinius today traded vigorous words on the question of unconditional surrender.

In a formal statement Stettinius denounced a plea, made by the senator in a radio address last night, for abandonment of the "brutal and costly" policy of unconditional surrender.

"Whatever the intention of the speaker, Sen. Wheeler's attack upon the unconditional surrender principle agreed to by the British government, the Russian government, the Chinese government and our own, will be understood in Germany and Japan as meaning that if these countries can resist long enough, and can kill enough American soldiers, the will of the American people to achieve a complete victory will be broken and a negotiated peace can be secured," the statement said.

"Speaks for Discredited Few."

"The people of Germany and Japan do not know, as the people of the United States do know, that Sen. Wheeler speaks not for the American people but for a discredited few whose views have been overwhelmingly rejected by their fellow citizens of every party. Sen. Wheeler's statement is, therefore, profoundly regrettable."

Wheeler replied to Stettinius in a speech from the floor of the senate which moved a number of soldiers from the galleries to come to shake his hand as he left the senate chamber.

As he went into the senate Wheeler said, "I realize that anybody that stands up for America, American interests and the interests of the fighting forces must expect to be smeared by Stettinius and his smear crowd."

On the floor of the senate Wheeler said that he is not and never has been for a negotiated peace but is for a dictated peace and would offer minimum terms to the German people.

Costly Threats to Nazis.

"I assert, without fear of contradiction that the statement recently made by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in which he said that we should enslave the German people which statement, according to the press, had been placed in the hands of every German soldier and read over the radio to the German people by Goebbels, has cost the lives of many American boys," Wheeler said.

"Mr. Stettinius says that I do not speak for the American people, of course I do not speak for all the American people. But I will venture the assertion that I speak for more people than does Mr. Stettinius because he has never had to face a constituency in this country. He may be expressing the views of the big interests whom he has heretofore represented in this country. He does not represent the rank and file of the American people."

PACIFIC PARLEY TOLD LEADERS PERIL THE PEACE

Hot Springs, Va., Jan. 6 (AP).—The Institute of Pacific Relations today opened a 10 day conference here and heard its chairman, Edgar S. Tarr of Winnipeg, Canada, charge "the leadership of the great powers is falling short of the expectation of mankind." Tarr, a director of the Bank of Canada, is chairman of the Pacific council of the I. P. R.

In his audience were 160 leaders from 12 nations bordering on the Pacific who are exploring the possibilities of getting a lasting peace.

Tarr cited as the shortcomings of today's world leaders the dispute between Britain and the United States over the Italian policy, the Chicago aviation conference which ended in comparative failure, the absence of agreement among the Big Three over the Polish question, and the tragedy of Greece.

ELECTORAL VOTE ADDS UP RIGHT; MR. R.'S IN AGAIN!

BY WILLIAM MOORE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Congress solemnly counted the votes today, and sure enough, President Roosevelt's in again—for a fourth term.

Most members of the house and senate thought the election returns last November were a 'reasonably good indication Mr. R. had been reelected.

Just the same, Vice President Wallace, president of the senate, and Speaker Rayburn [D., Tex.] of the house were taking no chances. They each brought two gavels [croquet mallet size] with them when they came to preside over the joint session of the two chambers.

The congressmen were hosts, and very considerate ones at that. They saved the front rows of the house for the senators and gave them a cheer when they marched in.

Ballots in Metal Boxes.

Along came two senate pages then, carrying tightly strapped metal boxes which looked like small trunks. The boxes were unstrapped and the sealed certificates of the electoral college votes were handed to the senators and congressmen chosen as tellers.

Sen. Green [D., R. I.] opened proceedings. Said he:

"The certificate of the state of Alabama seems to be regular in form and authentic, and it appears therefrom that Franklin D. Roosevelt received 11 electoral votes."

The tellers took turns with the same announcement for other states, but Green forgot to change from Roosevelt to Dewey for Colorado and gave Colorado's votes to Mr. Roosevelt.

Amid loud laughter, Green tried to correct himself, explaining, "I couldn't get away with it." But he gave Colorado's votes to Mr. Roosevelt again and the hilarious members shouted, "No! No!"

Green got it right on the third attempt.

Well, they read all the votes, and Wallace told 'em to add. Pencils scratched and the tellers announced that they'd all got the same answer:

Roosevelt, 432; Dewey, 99.

Wallace then declared Mr. Roosevelt the next President.

Congress was a lot of fun today. The senate met before the joint session to correct an oversight: the senators had forgotten to vote to themselves permission to stay in the house long enough to hear the President's message after counting the votes.

So they fixed that up and then decided to elect a president pro tem. to preside when the president of the senate is away.

Vandenberg Defeated.

Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.] proposed Sen. McKellar [D., Tenn.], who had been applying for the job for weeks. Minority Leader White [R., Me.] proposed that they just strike McKellar's name out and insert that of Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.].

They took a roll call and decided 37 to 24 against Vandenberg, because the majority party always wins on a strictly party issue of this sort. Vandenberg made a speech praising McKellar and persuaded the Republicans to make McKellar's election unanimous.

Vandenberg said he's been defeated four times in a row, recalled the good old days of "Republican sanity and wisdom," and predicted he'll be elected next time because he thinks there'll be more Republicans than Democrats.

FIND INCENDIARY BOMB IN LOOP GARAGE WINDOW

For two weeks a box sat on the window ledge of the Monroe garage, 12 E. Monroe st. Yesterday Manager John Sturgeon, 44, of 417 N. Clark st., grew suspicious and called police.

Police opened the box and discovered a 10 inch long circular bomb. Sgt. Marshall Pidgeon of the bomb squad detail said he believed the bomb was filled with magnesium. Printed on the side were the words "hand grade, incendiary."

The bomb squad turned it over to agents of the federal bureau of investigation.

WARD'S CONDUCT A BLOW AT WAR, BYRNES ASSERTS

U. S. Suit for Injunction to Come Up Tomorrow.

War Mobilization Director Byrnes rallied yesterday to support President Roosevelt in his effort to force Montgomery Ward & Co. to obey war labor board orders. In an affidavit to be used in federal District court here tomorrow, Byrnes asserted that Ward's conduct, "if allowed to continue, will seriously interfere with the successful prosecution of the war."

Byrnes' affidavit, sworn to in Washington, D. C., Jan. 4 and filed with the court clerk yesterday, charged that Ward's attitude of nonconformance "threatens to disrupt" procedures set up to stabilize wages and prices.

"Located in Vital Centers."

One paragraph in the affidavit indicates the basis of the President's contention that Ward's business is related to the war effort and, therefore, covered in the act authorizing him to seize and operate war industries. Some of the company's properties, the affidavit states, are located "in vital centers of war production." There is, however, no direct assertion that Ward's is a war plant.

The affidavit is expected to be used by federal attorneys as a specific statement of the President's contention that Ward's is a war plant. Altho the President, in his order to the war department to seize and operate 16 Ward properties here and in six other cities, held the company's business was related to the war, he had expressed himself only in general terms.

The court hearing tomorrow will be on the government's suit for a temporary injunction to restrain Chairman Sewell L. Avery and 15 other officials from interfering with army operation of the company. It will be before Judge Philip L. Sullivan, who yesterday said he had cleared away all other matters so as to give it his full attention.

Calls WLB Essential.

Byrnes' affidavit stated in part:

"In my official capacity I am familiar with the machinery established by the congress and the President for the prompt and peaceful settlement of war time labor disputes and for the maintenance of wage and price stabilization. The national war labor board is an essential part of this machinery and an important element in the national wage and price stabilization program.

"Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., has persistently refused to settle labor disputes arising in its plants and facilities located, in some cases, in vital centers of war production, and to adjust its wage rates in accordance with the decisions of the national war labor board.

"Procedures Threatened."

"It is my opinion that the continued refusal of Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., to conform to these procedures for the adjustment of war time labor disputes and for the maintenance of wage and price stabilization threatens to disrupt these procedures and that the company's conduct, if allowed to continue, will seriously interfere with the successful prosecution of the war."

Harold L. Pearson, Ward treasurer and vice president, charged army officers faked two newspaper photographs showing the army paying employes, to suit "propaganda purposes." He remarked the funds with which employes later were paid were obtained by the army on drafts officers drew on the Ward treasurer. Pearson said these bore a machine facsimile of his signature. Pearson said the drafts were drawn without authorization of any company official. However, he said, Ward's deposited $135,000 to make them good, because the company desired to maintain its credit.

Bank to Accept Checks.

The company's charge, made last Thursday, that the army "illegally" was cashing checks sent by customers in payment of merchandise sold prior to the seizure, brought a statement yesterday that the war department stood ready to make prompt reimbursement on presentation of a company claim.

The army administrators also said that a loop bank, which they declined to identify, had agreed to accept these checks in an army account.

Lt. Col. W. A. Munroe, deputy war department representative, issued a statement denying he had threatened Maurice E. Garrison, operating assistant manager of Ward's Chicago store, with army induction unless he coöperated with the military management. Garrison's affidavit was attached to the company's answer to the government's injunction suit, which was filed in federal court Friday.

Set for Inaugural

NANCY GREEN.

[Associated Press Photos.]

GLORIA GREEN.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 6 (AP).—Gov. Dwight Herbert Green will be sworn in Monday, the day before he becomes 48 years old, for his second four year term as Illinois' chief executive. His first official act after inauguration will be to outline to the G. O. P. controled legislature his Republican administration's record and its program for the future.

Inauguration ceremonies at noon before a joint legislative session will be brief and simple. The governor and five other state officers—only one a Democrat — will take their oaths. Gov. Green will follow with his inaugural message at 1:30 p. m. It will be broadcast over WBBM, Chicago, and 16 downstate stations. The customary inaugural ball has been canceled because of the war.

Two of the most interested spectators will be Mrs. Green, the governor's wife and their two daughters, Nancy, 17, and Gloria, 13, who are students in the Springfield High school.

LUEDER TO HEAD GROUP.

State Auditor Lueder, who will begin his second term of four years tomorrow, will head a delegation of Chicago Republicans who will leave today for Springfield to be present at the inauguration ceremonies at noon tomorrow for Gov. Green and the other state officials elected last month. In Lueder's party will be Ward Committeemen Sinon A. Murray, Michael Connelly and Max Landesman, Herbert G. Immenhausen and Thomas J. Downs, former president of the Young Republicans of Illinois.

72 Purple Heart Holders Dine as Jewelers' Guests

Seventy-two holders of the Purple Heart, now patients at Gardiner General hospital, Vaughan General hospital, and Great Lakes Naval hospital, were special guests last night at the 71st annual banquet of the Chicago Jewelers' association in the ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Other guests at the banquet included State's Atty. Touhy, his predecessor, Thomas J. Courtney, and Col. I. B. Summers, chief of staff, 6th service command.

HOFFMAN ASKS IF G. O. P. ISN'T FUMBLING BALL

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Rep. Hoffman [R., Mich.], in a summation of Republican election reverses, concluded today that when a team has been in the league cellar consistently for 16 years there may be something wrong about the way it's handling the ball.

He wrote each of his Republican colleagues a 1,200 word letter, headed "what's cooking?" and saying some sharp things about politics and party leadership.

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, former Republican national chairman, is house party leader, but Hoffman did not criticize him by name.

Questions G. O. P. Soundness.

"One thing strikes the casual observer," Hoffman said. "That is, either the New Deal is safe, sound, and advantageous, or the Republican opposition has been weak and misdirected.

"A baseball or a football team which is consistently in the cellar is sometimes there, not because of the overwhelming strength and playing ability of its opponents, but in part at least because of its own weakness."

Hoffman accused party old-timers of grabbing the choice house committee assignments and suppressing initiative in younger members.

Warns on Party Unity.

"Individual members are for unified, loyal party organization, but they want to be a part of, active participants in, such an organization — not a flock of sheep just permitted to jump over the fence when the leaders whistle," he said.

A unified Republican house organization "can never be established if the talents of a majority, perhaps three-fifths, of the members of the congress go unused," he wrote.

RADIO OFFICIAL URGES U.S. SEIZE PETRILLO UNION

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Stanley E. Hubbard, Minneapolis radio executive, suggested today to War Labor Board Chairman Davis that the government take over James C. Petrillo's American Federation of Musicians [AFL] as it has some business firms. Emerging from a conference with Davis, Hubbard said Davis and the WLB "appeared to be afraid of Petrillo."

Hubbard, president of station KSTP, said he had suggested to Davis that the WLB take over Petrillo's headquarters and that the army operate the union as it has in the Montgomery Ward company plant for noncompliance with the WLB orders. Davis replied that such a request was "ridiculous," Hubbard told reporters. A statement from the WLB later said Davis told Hubbard there is no provision in the law for seizure of the union.

Hubbard said the musicians union at KSTP has refused to obey directives of the labor boards that musicians, who walked out eight months ago, return to work.

CHICAGO YANK FETED AT HIS BIRTHPLACE IN ITALY; RELATIVES O. K.

Pvt. Perrone.

How an American soldier born in Italy returned recently to his birthplace, visited his grandparents and was feted by the townfolk of San Sosti was told in a letter written by Pvt. Frank Perrone, 21, to his mother, Mrs. Mathilda Perrone, 3437 Congress st.

Pvt. Perrone wrote that as he approached the town with his infantry company he recognized landmarks he had not seen since he left when he was a boy of 9. He had no difficulty in finding his grandparents' home, he wrote, adding that they were in good health but in need of clothing. Word of his arrival spread thru the village and he was wined and dined by the populace. Perrone was employed in a tailoring firm prior to entering the army in 1943.

CAPTURE 2 MORE NAZI FUGITIVES.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 6 [AP].—Capture of two more German U-boat fugitives today increased to 17 the number caught since 25 tunneled out of the Papago Park camp near here Christmas eve. The pair, Captains Jurgen Faslem and Fritz Guggenberger, were surprised by customs agents as they slept on the desert 18 miles north of the Mexican border near Topawa.

A BIT OF METAL PUTS HIT-RUN TAG ON DRIVER

A five inch piece of metal moulding picked up at the scene of a fatal automobile accident last Oct. 15 led to a confession yesterday by the runaway motorist, it was announced by state highway police at Joliet. The man held is Tom Conrad of the Central hotel, Downers Grove. Victim of the accident was Peter J. Carson, a track laborer, who was hit as he walked in Romeo rd., near Lemont.

Conrad was arrested last Wednesday by Policemen Gustav Hendrickson and Lee Ruphard, whose superiors, Capt. Clayton Hamlin and Lt. Harold Fewell, credited them with constant work since they picked up the bit of plated metal. First they identified the make and model of the car. Then they learned Conrad had such a car. He had departed, but the policemen learned he had relatives at Westfield, Ind., near Indianapolis.

A search in the neighborhood of Westfield resulted in finding a garage in the nearby village of Noble where a car of the model sought had been repaired and had required five inches of new moulding strip. Further police work identified it as Conrad's.

PROPERTY TAX ROLL FOR EIGHT TOWNSHIPS UP

The 1944 personal property roll for eight townships within Chicago has been delivered to the board of tax appeals, and shows an increase of $103,522,062 over the 1943 roll, Assessor Clark said yesterday. The increase is attributed to a new policy whereby all corporations were visited, and definite information obtained from the taxpayers, Clark said.

The assessor stated that the 70 per cent of book value rule is still in force, and that no part of the increase contradicts this rule. A field check disclosed that many corporations and unincorporated businesses were not scheduling their vacations on the basis of the 70 per cent rule, Clark said. Schedules were increased for violators, he added.

The rule is based on the presumption that 70 per cent of book value represents the fair cash value of properties, Clark said.

$62 FINE REASSESSED.

Judge N. J. Bonelli yesterday reassessed an original fine of $62 on a state and city charge of selling liquor to a minor when Ray MacFarland, 49, tavern owner at 7635 N. Paulina st., failed to appear in court after having been granted a new trial on Dec. 21.

Rectal disorders are a major disease problem. If they are not corrected in the early stages by proper medical care serious trouble may follow. A simple hemorrhoid or pile without proper medical care can cause a

Fistula or Rectal Abscess These are dangerous types of rectal disorders. The first symptom is a throbbing pain which grows more intense as the condition develops. This will continue until the abscess breaks of its own accord or is opened by a skilled physician. The latter is the best and safest procedure, for in many cases pus will burrow into surrounding tissue, causing more abscesses and fistula tracts to form. Competent medical attention can prevent this constant menace to health. There are many other rectal ailments usually associated with hemorrhoids or piles which require special medical care. The most dangerous possibility, of course, is

Cancer Several thousand persons die each year as a result of cancer of the rectum. Yet cancer is curable when diagnosed in the early stages and properly treated. This is true of all types of cancer. N. U. WHIPS WISCONSIN, 52-37; PURDUE, IOWA WIN

WILDCATS TURN ON POWER IN SECOND HALF

Boilermakers Beat Ohio State, 37-36.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 6 [Special].—Northwestern university's basketball team, scoring 35 points in the second half, tonight opened its Western conference season with a 52 to 37 victory over Wisconsin. A crowd of 11,500 watched the Wildcats, led by Max Morris, break a long losing streak in Madison appearances.

Morris, Northwestern center, scored 10 field goals and a free throw. He made 11 of the Wildcats' 17 points in the first half and these helped the Evanston team to a 17-16 edge at the intermission.

The Wildcats lost no time clinching the game, scoring 16 points in the first seven minutes of the second half for a 33 to 19 lead. The Badgers were weakened by the absence by illness of their veteran scoring leader, Ray Patterson.

Morris Scores on Rebounds.

Northwestern controled the rebounds almost exclusively. Most of Morris' goals came on rebounds, but the Wildcats also scored freely at long range. Frank Wright popped in five baskets for the Wildcats, four of them on one hand shots.

Northwestern's early 5 to 2 lead melted to a 5 to 5 tie and the Badgers later rallied for a 9 to 9 deadlock. Then Wisconsin went ahead, 14 to 13 and 16 to 15, but Morris' overhead goal gave the Wildcats their slim first half edge.

Two goals by Wright, one by Morris, and three points by Ben Schadler put Northwestern in front, 26 to 18, early in the second half. Then the Wildcats kept adding to their lead. Lineup:

PURDUE, 37; OHIO, 36

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 6 [Special].—Purdue's speed more than offset Ohio State's height tonight as the Boilermakers turned in a breathtaking victory 37 to 36, over the defending Big Nine champions. It was the first loss in two conference starts for the Buckeyes and Purdue's opener in league play.

The game was in doubt until the final gun with first Ohio State's height and then Purdue's speed producing field goals on practically an even basis. The lead changed hands innumerable times and the score was tied six times, three times during the frantic second half.

Buckeyes Take Lead.

Due to the long range shooting of Paul Huston, who scored four field goals in a hurry, Ohio State set a fast early scoring pace to take a 10 to 3 lead, but Purdue came back to tie it up, 16 to 16. The Boilermakers, having their trouble penetrating the Ohio's defense, finally took a 22 to 19 advantage with seven minutes of the half remaining. They then stalled and retained possession of the ball until the half without taking a shot.

Ohio State came back to take the lead, 27 to 23, early in the second period, but Purdue again tied it up, 27 to 27, midway in the period. Purdue went in front, 31 to 29, only to have Arnold Risen score on two rebounds to put Ohio State ahead, 33 to 31. Free throws by John Hinga and Paul Hoffman made the score 33 to 33, after which Myrwin [Red] Anderson put in a short shot that regained the lead for Purdue, 35 to 33. A moment later, Warren Amling tied it up with a one-hander, but Jack Dugger hit from the free throw line.

Purdue Stalls to Win.

With two minutes remaining, Anderson made Purdue's final field goal from close in, and the Boilermaker five went back into their stalling game to the end.

CONCORDIA FIVE IS DEFEATED BY WHEATON, 44-34

The Wheaton college basketball team dealt the Concordia quintet its fourth defeat in six games, 44 to 34, on the Concordia court in River Forest last night.

Wheaton was trailing, 28 to 27, at the end of the first half but, led by Guard Dave Norbeck, who topped the scorers with 12 points, quickly forged into the lead in the later period. German Glaess led the Concordia scorers with 11 points. Lineups:

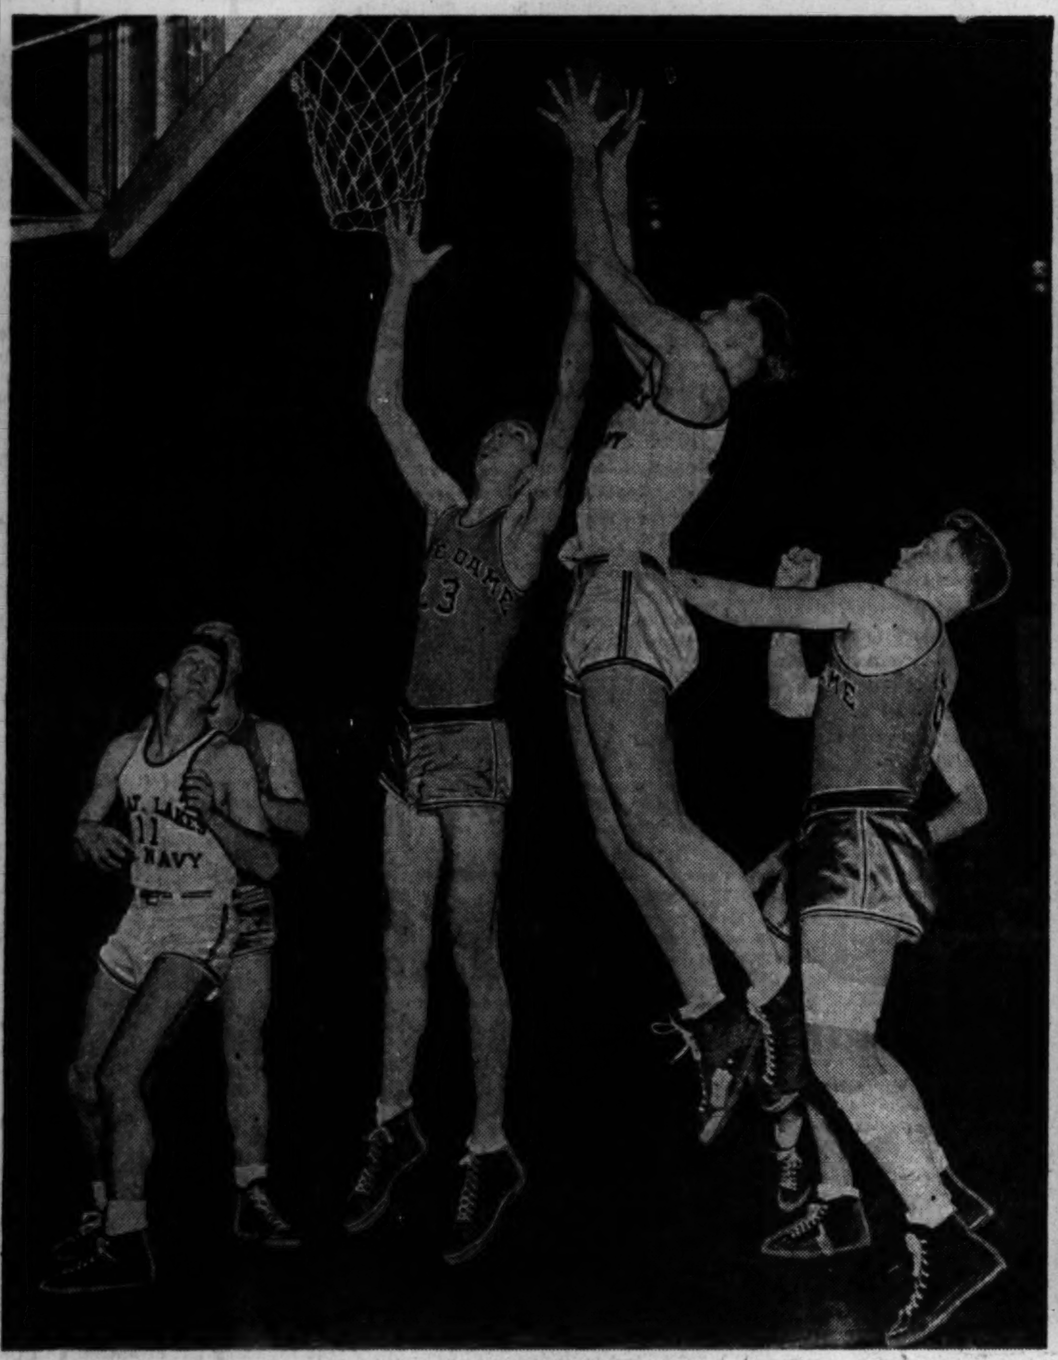
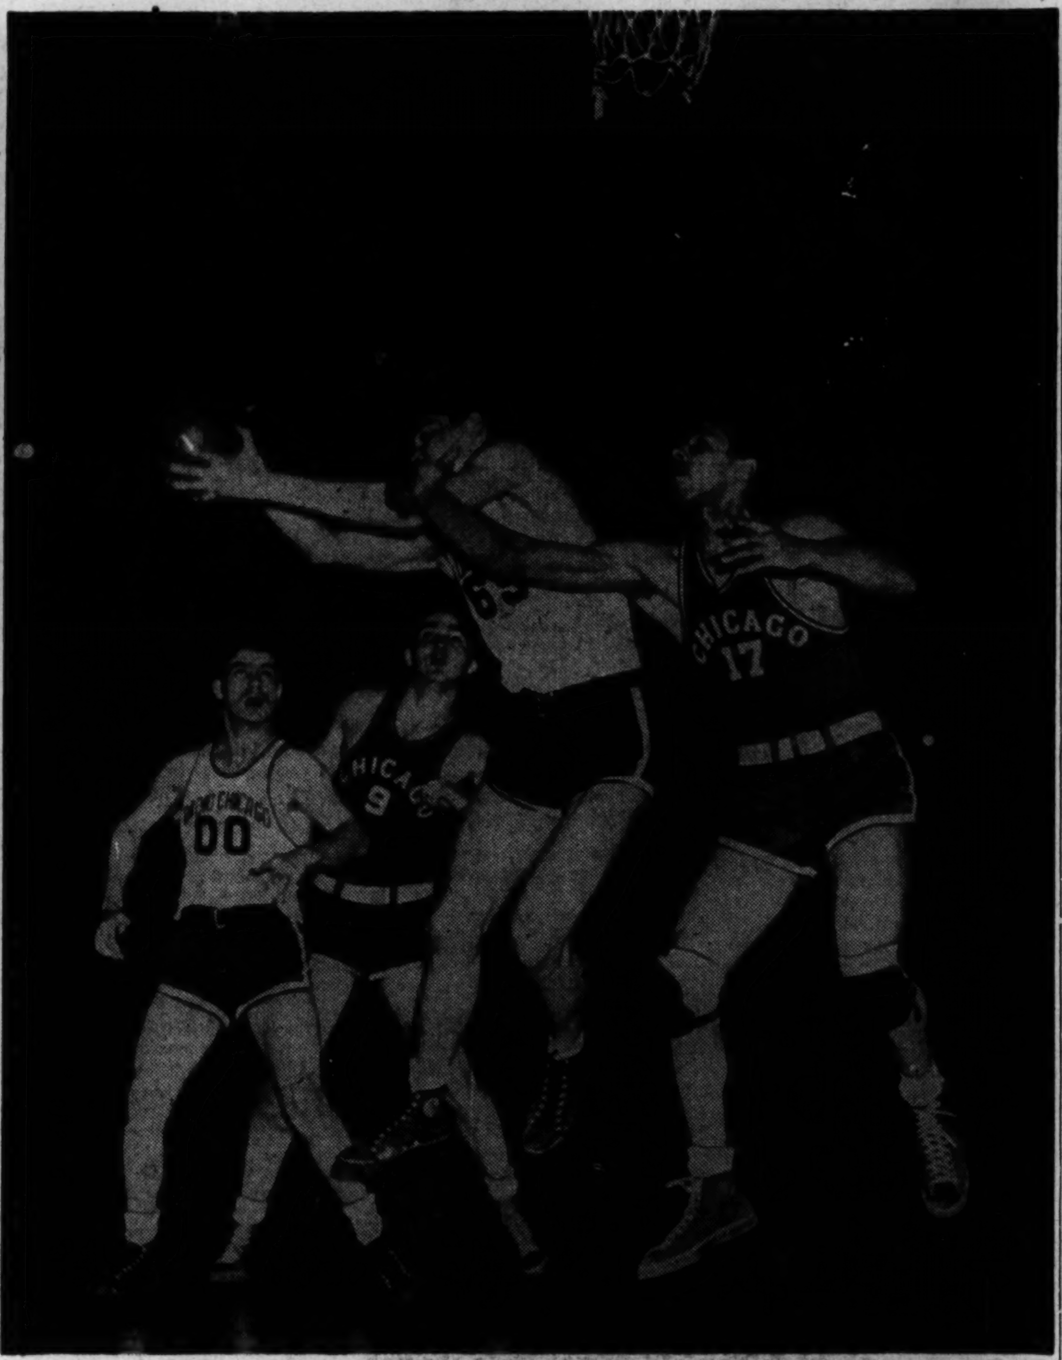
SERVICE TEAMS TRIUMPH OVER COLLEGE RIVALS



Walt Budko of Great Lakes goes up for a rebound shot after his teammate, Rand Clark (11), had missed his try for goal during the Sailors' 59 to 58 victory last night over Notre Dame at the naval training center. Bill Roberts, Notre Dame center, tries to block the shot, while Billy Hassett (right), also of the Irish, gets in on the play. [TRIBUNE Photos.]



George Janchenko, Chicago Radio center, gets a rebound a split second before George Raby of the University of Chicago quintet makes a lunge for the ball in last night's game in the Maroons' fieldhouse. Also in the play are Bernie Biederman (00) of the Radio five and Fred De Graw (9) of the Maroons. The service team won the game, 59 to 47.

HAWKEYES TOP GOPHERS, 41-34; WOLVERINES BEAT ILLINI, 43-38;

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 6 [Special].—Iowa opened its bid for its first share of a Big Nine basketball title since 1926 by defeating Minnesota tonight, just as expected, but the narrow 41 to 34 margin came as a surprise to most of the 10,000 present.

Using a deliberate style of attack, the under-manned Gophers matched the Hawkeye five, which had averaged 71.3 points in winning six nonconference games, for the first 10 minutes, battled to hold its own for the next 15, and then closed with a final burst that counted 10 points to draw within five points just before Dick Ives drove in to close the scoring with five seconds remaining.

Iowa Stars Well Guarded.

The Gophers restricted Ives and Clayton Wilkinson, Hawkeye scoring stars in previous games, to four baskets apiece, but in the free throw department Iowa cashed in. It connected on 17, which grew out of 25 Minnesota fouls, and this meant the game, for Minnesota outscored the winner from the field, 13 baskets to 12. Clayton Wilkinson made good on nine of 11 free throw attempts to take scoring honors with 17 points.

It was the same elder Wilkinson brother who put a serious crimp in the Minnesota offensive by limiting Clarence Hermsen to a single basket and free throw, which came in the final minute and 40 seconds.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 6 [Special].—The Michigan basketball team rallied in the second half to defeat Illinois, 43 to 38, tonight before 4,200.

Illinois led at the half, 20 to 17, and held this margin thru the first nine minutes of the second period. Then Bob Geahan, Michigan forward, from Lansing, went on a scoring rampage which netted him 11 points in 11 minutes and sped Michigan to its second victory in three Big Nine starts. It was Illinois' opening conference game.

Don Lund's 13 points led Michigan scoring. Walt Kirk was Illinois' leader with 11.

John Mullaney of Evanston scored exactly half of the 16 points which gave Michigan a four point edge in the first 18 minutes. He received help from Lund's six points and from Walt Kell's two. Illinois, meanwhile, totaled 12, seven by Kirk and five by Jack Burmaster.

When Howie Judson and John Orr scored field goals, the score was tied, 16 to 16. Burmaster's free throw put the Illini ahead, 17 to 16, and John Orr's rebound shot made it 19 to 16. Kell hit a free throw—the Wolverines' first success in seven tries from the foul line. Judson's free throw made the score 20 to 17 at the half. Lineups:

Sports to Feel Effect if 4-Fs Leave Field

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt today appeared to have put the blinkers on the green light he issued to sports three years ago this month.

As a result of the President's address to congress urging the enactment of a legislation making all 4-F's available in "whatever capacity is best for the war effort," sports may be hard hit.

Three years ago the President, in a letter to the late K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner, expressed his personal rather than official point of view, urging the nation game to continue in war time.

281 4-F's in Majors.

In full accord with War Mobilization Director Byrnes, whose request last Dec. 23 that all 4-F's be reexamined for duty either in military service or in war jobs, Roosevelt's suggestion to congress parallels War Secretary Newton D. Baker's "work or fight" order of 1918, which disrupted baseball in the waning days of World War I.

Professional sports are studded with many men rejected by the army and navy physicians for physical disabilities. Major league baseball, with 281 of its 400 players in 4-F, would be hardest hit. With spring training only two months away, club owners are marking time.

Pro Football Sits Back.

Professional football, with more than half its personnel either in 4-F or army and navy dischargees, has several months in which to wait for something to happen either way.

Byron Nelson and Harold [Jug] McSpaden, two of golf's leading money winners of 1944, are in 4-F. Boxers either in 4-F or discharged from the services include Willie Pep, featherweight champion; Ray [Sugar] Robinson, Bobby Ruffin, Jimmy Bivins, and Ken Overlin.

College athletics, supported in the main by predraft age athletes and naval trainees, would be affected to some degree by the loss of 4-F's or the universal service act, asked by the President.

Hockey probably will lose little, since most of its players are Canadians under strict supervision of the dominion government. The only Canadians available are those discharged or rejected from military service, or those in the under- or over-age group.

SPORTS LEADERS SILENT

Officials of the major baseball leagues and the National Football league kept mum yesterday on President Roosevelt's recommendation that 4-F men be channeled into war industry.

SAILORS DEFEAT IRISH, 59 TO 58; RADIO CHICAGO BEATS MAROONS

Mickey McGuire sank two long shots to pull the game out of the fire and give the Great Lakes basketball team a 59 to 58 victory over the Notre Dame quintet in the naval training center gymnasium last night.

Great Lakes went into the lead at the start and was ahead, 30 to 27, at the half, due largely to the work of Jack Dee, a transfer from Chicago's Loyola university, who made 11 field goals and three free throws to take individual scoring honors with 25 points.

Baryla Held in Tow.

Vince Boryla, Notre Dame's high scoring center, was held to two field goals and three free throws. Walter Budko, a forward, and McGuire paced the Great Lakes scoring attack with 14 and 10 points, respectively.

Both teams put on a fine exhibition of fast breaking basketball during the second half in which the Sailors split up the scoring assignments and relied upon a five man offensive.

McGuire Does It.

The score was tied at 40 to 40, 44 to 44, 55 to 55, and 57 to 57. Dee then sank a free throw to put the Irish ahead, 58 to 57. With 20 seconds remaining, McGuire dropped in a long one to end the scoring, 59 to 58, in favor of the Sailors. Lineups:

Radio Chicago won its second victory over the University of Chicago quintet, 59 to 47, last night in the Maroon fieldhouse. Leading all the way, the victors had an easier time than an earlier 45 to 43 triumph which came in the final minute of play.

Chicago tied the score once, at 20 to 20, just before the half but was unable to close the gap thereafter. Radio Chicago led at the intermission, 27 to 20.

Bernie Biederman of Radio Chicago was high scorer with 17 points, two more than Chicago's Fred De Graw. George Raby, Maroon center, scored 14, and Radio's Bob Robbins and George Janchenko made 11 each. The defeat was Chicago's sixth in 12 games to date. Lineups:

Mangrum and McSpaden Tie for Golf Lead

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan 6 (AP).—Slim Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles pro out of the big time golf tournament picture of late, and Harold McSpaden, defending champion, were deadlocked for first place at the end of 36 holes today in the 72 hole Los Angeles open. They posted two round totals of 140, two under par at the halfway mark.

Sam Snead, tournament favorite, had an excellent chance to jump to the forefront. He blew it on the back nine, and finished with a par 71 for a total of 142.

McSpaden, now registered from Sanford, Me., played steady, if not spectacular golf, to continue his strong bid for his second consecutive victory here. In the first round, when he tied with Sam Byrd, Detroit, he had a 34—36. He reversed the figures today. Byrd, incidentally, dropped back to a 72 and a tie with Snead, Leland Gibson of Randolph Field, Tex., and George Schneiter, Salt Lake City.

Mangrum, with an opening day 71, charged into real contention with a 69.

Stocky Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., trailed the two leaders by a single stroke, posting a 71-70—141. He had a 34-36 today.

Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., leading golfer in 1944, slipped back a stroke when he came up with a 72 today for a total 143. It put him in a tie with Claude Harmon, Ellsworth Vines, and Leonard Dodson. Vines carded a 69 for his second round.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 6 (AP).—There were several strange figures in Chicago Blackhawk uniforms tonight and at least two who have long been identified with hockey in the Illinois metropolis were not present, but the result followed an old familiar patern—a defeat for the Blackhawks. The Montreal Canadians trounced the Chicagoans by the convincing score of 10 to 1.

Perhaps the fact that the Canadiens were playing with a complete team for the first time on home ice in a month might have had some bearing on the outcome, but if the Chicago management hoped to increase the Hawk standings in the National Hockey league by the recent shuffling of personnel said management must have become TOURNAMENT OF CHAMPIONS—Feb. 26, 27, and 28, Chicago Stadium, 1800 W. Madison st.

FINALS—March 9, Chicago Stadium.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

All amateur boxers who live in the metropolitan area today are invited to enter the 18th Golden Gloves tournament annually sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. This is first call for all who wish to win sectional honors in two tournaments, the south side contests which will be held in the St. Sabina gymnasium and the north side contests in the Loyola university gymnasium.

Winners in each of these sectional tournaments will fight for Chicago city titles Feb. 12 in Marigold Gardens and the eight open division champions then will represent Chicago in the Tournament of Champions in the Stadium Feb. 26, 27, and 28.

Divided Into Two Classes.

The Chicago tournaments, as usual, will be divided into two classes, novice and open. The latter is for experienced boxers who will carry on against teams from thruout the west and south. The novice champions are not eligible but they will be rewarded with miniature golden gloves.

The pairings at Marigold—north side novice against south side novice and north side open against south side open—furnishes a complete program of 16 championship fights Feb. 12. Last year an overflow crowd jammed the arena for these finals.

Fix Dates of Trials.

We now are immediately concerned with the entries for the south side bouts in St. Sabina gymnasium and the north side bouts in Loyola university gymnasium. The south side tournament will be held Jan. 29 and 30. On the next three nights, Jan. 31, Feb. 1 and 2, the north side trials are scheduled.

Many amateur boxers have entered the service, but Golden Gloves, this year as last, will benefit from the competition now being held at camps and bases. Several teams already have entered the tournaments in various sections of the midwest and south which qualify for the Tournament of Champions.

The Amateur Athletic union, which sanctions all Golden Gloves tournaments, permits a boy to box when he has reached the age of 16. These younger boys of 16 and 17 may have a better chance than ever to win a Golden Glove. They probably will not dominate the matches, however, as has been shown by recent bouts in Chicago and in other midwestern cities.

Service Men to Enter.

Chicago will have many fighters who do not belong to a club because of lack of experience. Indeed, the primary reason for the novice tournament is to encourage participation in this contact sport which for most youngsters will have a direct bearing on their conditioning for military service. Most clubs, such as the Catholic Youth organization, Madison A. C., and the Savoy A. C., which

FARMERS WANT HUNTERS TO SHOOT RABBITS

Cottontails Are Causing Plenty of Damage.

BY BOB BECKER.

It's rabbit hunting time in the snow covered country of the middle west, and, if the weatherman continues to pile up more of that white stuff which falls on us every winter, farmers and others who live in the fairly wide open spaces are going to be very happy to see some rabbit shooters come along, for the cottontails started some weeks ago to damage shrubs and small trees. We've noticed that in the limited area of northern Illinois which we have hunted, the signs of rabbit damage were very conspicuous. The snow is so deep that it has covered much of the vegetation, so the animals are going to work on small trees.

This is not supposed to be a good rabbit hunting year. The cottontail population seems to run in cycles, with the number of cottontails building up gradually until it hits a peak, and then down it goes. We've been in that low part of the cycle for a while. But there is plenty of evidence to show that the rabbits are staging a comeback right now.

Down state around Vandalia, we saw an unbelievable number of the animals on Nov. 7 and 8. And since we went rabbit hunting northwest of our home a few days ago, we're convinced that the animals are definitely more numerous up there than they were last season.

On this hunt we found the cottontails assembled in a small swamp surrounded by high timbered ground. Earlier in the season our Labrador retriever and setter romped thru the high weeds, grass, and the alder and poplar thickets in the swamp to rout the pheasants for us. Now it's been taken over almost exclusively by rabbits.

Paced by the parallel bowling of Nick Rini and Sam Tantallone, the Conventry Recreation team of Cleveland, assumed the lead in the ninth annual Ray Schalk holiday five man sweepstakes at Evergreen Towers, 2535 W. 95th st., at the conclusion of the first squad yesterday with a four game total of 3,920.

Rini rolled an 831 total and Tantallone one pin less. The team has games of 949, 960, 1,005, and 1,006. Their score sheet reads:

The Coventrys were the only team on the opening shift to shoot over the 3,900 mark, the second place A. G. Refrigeration five of Chicago getting 3,822. Incidentally, it was the only outfit, excepting the leaders, to better the 3,800 figure, Brandt's Tavern of Oak Lawn holding down the third spot with 3,771.

The Eppings 7-Up quintet, defending champions, led the squad thru the first three games but faltered to an 880 game in their final, to end up with 3,758, nine pins behind the Bowes Seal Fast Five of Indianapolis, which was fourth with 3,767.

DETROIT BEATS TORONTO, 5 TO 2; LUMLEY STARS

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 6 (AP).—Aided by the spectacular goal tending of young Harry Lumley, the Detroit Red Wings defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 5 to 2, tonight before 12,384 to remain on the heels of the leading Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey league race.

Detroit caught the Leafs off stride to score four goals in the first 10 minutes and then hung on to win handily as the 18 year old Lumley kicked out 38 Toronto drives.

Earl Seibert, obtained from Chicago this week in a player trade, made his first appearance in Detroit uniform by scoring the first goal of the game at 3:16 of the initial period, and gave an outstanding exhibition thruout. Lineups:

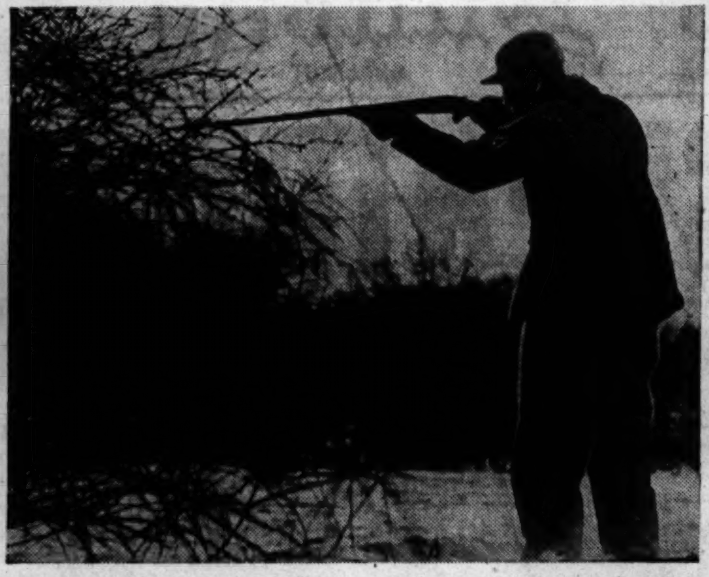
TIME'S HERE TO GO AFTER THOSE BUNNIES

With plenty of snow on the ground and more promised by the weather man, the time has arrived to start after those rabbits. Is there a bunny in this shock? To make sure, one of the hunters gives it a good kick while the other stands by ready to fire.



There goes a cottontail out the other side of the hedgerow. This hunter went out in the afternoon when the rabbits are in grassy thickets, resting in weedy hedgerows and other spots where the cover was exceptionally good.

POST-WAR PLANS AT N. U. INCLUDE BIG FIELDHOUSE

A fieldhouse which will seat 14,000 for basketball and other indoor sports attractions to be erected immediately after the war is in the planning stage at Northwestern university, it was announced yesterday.

Cost of the new structure, to be a memorial of the present war, will be in a range from $1,000,000 to $1,900,000, depending upon the amount received from friends of the university for this purpose. Holabird and Root, Chicago architects, have designed the structure. The financial drive has not yet started, but it is hoped a donor or donors will provide funds so that construction can start early in the post-war period.

It is proposed to erect the fieldhouse immediately north of Dyche stadium, which would make possible the utilization of the stadium's heating plant and other facilities. It will have a running track and will provide space for baseball and football practice. The building also will be headquarters for the athletic staff.

Old Patten gym, where the Wildcats' basketball team formerly played, was torn down and replaced by a new gym shortly before Pearl Harbor. The new Patten gymnasium, designed for intramural sports, has no seating accommodations. The basketball team practices there, but plays its home games in Evanston Township High school's gymnasium and Chicago Stadium.

Canadiens Triumph, 10-1, Over Hawks

Seiber Among Those Absent.

Tonight marked the first game in years that Earl Seibert had not been in a Blackhawk uniform, and the Chicagoans didn't miss his defensive play any more than Whirlaway would have missed the aid of a pair of legs in his racing heyday.

Cully Simon, Don Grosso, and Butch McDonald who were acquired from the Red Wings in the trade that sent Seibert to Detroit, were present tonight, but the Canadiens were apparently unimpressed.

The Canadiens, who often in the past have had to depend upon their first line of Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach, and Toe Blake for a majority of their goals, had three equally powerful lines tonight. Each line accounted for three goals with the third line setting up the play for the 10th goal by Defenseman Butch Bouchard.

Mosdell Leads Scoring Parade.

Kenny Mosdell led the scoring parade with three goals. Fern Gauthier, playing on the third line with Buddy O'Connor and Dutch Hiller, turned in two and also assisted on Bouchard's goal. Each member of the first line scored, with Lach counting early in the game and Richard and Blake tallying in the third.

Russ Brayshaw collected the only Hawk goal, teaming up with Joe Cooper in the second period while Montreal was a man short.

SPORTS TO FEEL EFFECT IF 4-F^S ENTER WAR WORK

came from the American league president, Will Harridge; Ford Frick, president of the National league, and Elmer Layden, head of the National Football league. Other major league officials who met in Chicago Friday to discuss a new big league agreement had left town after a surprisingly short session.

"The Western conference's temporary athletic commission was more articulate. Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson of Northwestern, member of a three-man group directing the conference since Maj. John L. Griffith's death, said loss of 4-Fs wouldn't make much difference. "I don't think there were many more than 15 4-F regulars in the whole conference last football season," Wilson asserted.

As for the professional groups, their attitude was pretty well expressed by one official who declared, "it certainly would be wrong for any one in our business to even try to guess what will happen in the next few months."

Name Griffith as Football Man of Year

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 6 (AP).—Posthumous selection of Maj. John L. Griffith, former Western conference commissioner, as football's man of the year in 1944 was announced today by the Football Writers Association of America thru its secretary, Bert McGrane.

Maj. John L. Griffith.

The late commissioner emerged the winner of the football writers' trophy by a narrow margin over Carroll Widdoes, coach of Ohio State's unbeaten team, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the army air forces.

Others nominated by football writers from coast to coast were Col. Earl Blaik, United States Military Academy football coach, and Leslie Horvath, Ohio State's All-America back.

Previous winners of the award were Commodore Tom Hamilton on the navy in 1942 and Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg of the College of the Pacific in 1943.

"Griffith's influence on athletics was widespread," the association announcement said. "He assumed the leadership in the fight to continue football and other college sports thruout the war years as a means of helping to prepare men for military service.

"His efforts continued until the day of his death on Dec. 7, 1944. He frequently conferred with government and man power leaders in Washington in behalf of colleges. His contributions thru the years included leadership in the fight of the Western conference against recruiting and proselyting."

TRIBUNE'S RACE EXPERT PICKS 8 OF 15 WINNERS

Eight winners out of 15 races! That was the record for the Tribune race handicapper yesterday at Mexico City and Havana, Cuba. The four winners at each track included the daily doubles.

Gay Princess won the second race at Mexico at $4 for $2. Rock Irish scored in the third at $3.40. They formed the $9.40 daily double. Muy Rapido took the fifth at $16.20 and Red Sonnet the sixth at $2.60.

Day Go Bye scored in the opening race at Havana at $4 and Miss Sokolo the second at $16. The daily double paid $48. Titia made it three in a row in the third at $5.60. Here She Comes won the seventh at $5.20.

GEO. WILLIAMS QUINTET BEATS WILSON, 59 TO 36

Carl Ferguson, George Williams junior college forward, scored 18 points as his team defeated Wilson, 59 to 36, last night in a nonconference game at Wilson. Lineups:

PRO FOOTBALL LEADERS SET FOR WALKIE-TALKIE

BY EDWARD PRELL.

National Football league owners, who battle as hard in the meeting rooms as do their players on the gridiron, will begin assembling in Chicago tomorrow for the opening of the annual winter session. It will be held in the Blackstone hotel and the delegates will be kept just as busy as they want to be with a variety of problems. It's a sports walkie-talkie with lots of words and floor pacing.

A meeting of the rules committee on Tuesday will be the first official business, but on the day before that the early arrivals probably will go into unofficial huddles with Elmer Layden, league president. Layden, by the way, is starting on the fifth and last year of his first contract. Whether a new one will be forthcoming at this meeting or in subsequent ones this season is any one's guess.

Players Hold War Jobs.

Professional football probably is better off than any other sport in relation to man power. A large number of the players continue in war work during the season, this being possible because games are played only on Sundays. As a result of War Mobilization Director Byrnes' recent request that local draft boards reëxamine 4-F athletes, plus President Roosevelt's request for a labor draft, 11 teams in the organization may make it mandatory for all their players to follow a work and play program during the season.

Because the teams will not have the usual September run of big league ball parks where they play most of their games, exhibitions probably will drop in number. Either that, or other cities out of the major league belt will be used as substitute sites.

Use Parks if Available.

The major baseball league recently voted to keep football out of their parks until each team had completed its home season. Last year, the Bears and Redskins met in an exhibition game in Wrigley field while the White Sox were playing in Comiskey park.

Apparently it's all right for pro elevens, if they can get the parks, to appear in such cities as Chicago, New York, and Boston, which have teams in each baseball league, while one still is playing out its home schedule.

The Cardinals, Steelers, and Brooklyn Tigers, which failed to win a single game in 1944, will have first pickings in the college draft. A coin will be flipped to determine which team picks first. On subsequent drawings the three will alternate positions.

Hirsch May Be No. 1 Choice.

Most publicized college player last season was Ohio State's Les Horvath, but it so happens that he was drafted two years ago by the Cleveland Rams. It is thought that Les, unless he develops to be another Valentino in his movie tryout, will play with Cleveland next season.

Horvath, who holds an honorable discharge from the army, is going into business in the Ohio metropolis. Last year, Angelo Bertelli of Notre Dame and the marines was the No. 1 man. He was selected by the Boston Yanks, but since has declared he will play—when he plays—with Los Angeles of the new All-America conference.

It is likely that some one like Elroy Hirsch, who played at Wisconsin and Michigan, will be the first choice in the draft. Last season would have been Hirsch's third. Under the National league's new rules, he is eligible for selection.

Eye Ten Team Setup.

Of the 300 collegians selected for the 1943 season, only 23 reported and many of these were gone before the schedule was completed. Last year 11 teams picked 330 campus stars and less than a dozen showed up.

There were 11 teams in the league in 1930 but no uniform schedule. Green Bay, which won the title, played 15 games. New York, the runnerup, engaged in 17, while Minneapolis took the field only nine times. This was before the East-West setup, which was inaugurated in 1933. Since then, each team has played the same number of games.

The league threw up its hands last April after trying for many hours to fit 11 teams into this sort of a playing chart. This is why something probably will be done to cut back to 10 teams.

Weaver, who is bidding for the vacancy in the Pre-Flight lineup brought about by George Leddy's graduation to primary training, says he learned his tricky overhead two-hand shot from watching the pro five in his native Sheboygan, Wis. . . . Lt. Dick Cole, 135 pound wrestling champion during his undergraduate days at Iowa State, is assistant coach of the Seahawk mat team, which scored a 21 to 9 victory over Illinois Tech in the opening dual match of the season.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY ROBERT BEACH.

CHICAGO'S biggest house bowling tournament for women will be run off at Bowling Lanes, 5221 Broadway, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 27 and 28, and the imposing list of entrants in this big individual event with a $750 top, has Betty McCarthy all enthused. That's because she's in charge of staging the event and is bound to bask in the reflected light of the tournament's success.

Among the 150 girls already entered are the complete team of Grand Rapids' Fanatorium five, the group which holds the seasonal five woman record for a three game series—2991. Then there is a team from Wells, Minn., captained by Cleo Salzman; a big Detroit delegation headed by Gears by Enterprise, featuring Marie Shamlock whose 1183 won the Classic tourney in Detroit, Eddie Coy and her Vernor Ginger Ale girls, and Maxine Cruchon leading the Colonial Broaches; the Kornitz Oils and Gladys Light from Milwaukee; Medrith Maxton and her Pepsi Cola stars from Dayton, O.; Tillie Kagel Jardina from Indianapolis; Ethel Sablatnik of St. Louis; Anita Rump of Fort Wayne, and the Abbott Girls of Waukegan.

Overflow Forces Management to Schedule Extra Shift.

More than 200 entries will be on the final list and this overflow has necessitated the addition of a Saturday midnight squad. Other squads will start at 6, 8, and 10 o'clock on the 27th and at 4, 6, 8, and 10 o'clock on the 28th. Entries will close midnight of Sunday, Jan. 14.

Meanwhile, Jerry Peck's team sweeper, a Chicagoland team event, opens its two day run in the Chicago Arena a week from next Saturday, with a four squad, 32 team entry the goal. This tournament will draw top notch performers from Chicago and suburbs.

Chicago Recreation Captures South End Traveling Crown.

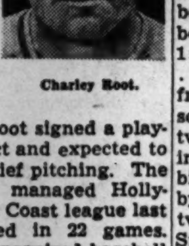
CHATTER—With the holidays safely out of the way, bowlers, men and women, will resume their tenpin proclivities with customary vigor. In fact, the South End traveling league began its second half campaign in Western recreation last night. The Chicago Recreation five which won the title last season, won the first half championship with a 40-11 record, six games ahead of Little Bohemia. Ted Svoma's 195 plus led the averages for that period. . . . Eddie Kowalics, Findlay, O., one of the nation's finest bowlers before he joined the army several years ago, reports he found the only tenpin alleys in London and has been giving 'em a real workout. He's bowled 30 games and his averaged around 200, with 236 his high single and 633 his top series. . . . The first national meeting of the 700 Bowling Clubs of America will be held in Chicago Feb. 10. in the Sherman hotel. City association secretaries from Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Milwaukee have been invited. Elmer Baumgarten, A. B. C. secretary, is the grand king pin of the organization and Ferd Lipovetz of La Crosse, Wis., originator of the group, is the grand pin buoy. . . .

Extend Deadline for Petersen Doubles Until Jan. 20.

The deadline for the doubles half of this winter's Petersen Classic has been extended to Jan. 20. The individual portion of the Classic was booked solid long, long ago. . . . Marigold Arcade resumed its weekly Saturday handicap yesterday and the event will continue each Saturday from now until. Handicap is based on 60 per cent of average and 180. Entry fee of $1.50 includes bowling. Sweepers from women will be held there, too, each Thursday at 1:30, starting this coming Thursday. . . . Fritzi Scheffs won their series from Mee and Ramme in Samuelson's Major by five pins, but lost two games. Axel Sandquist led the individuals again with a 656. Mobilgas still leads in the standings by one game over Edelweiss and two over Monarch Encore. . . . Spencer Coals won the Greater Northwest Traveling league's sweeper at Logan Square with a 2760, 66 pins ahead of the Stratford Recs. who were runnersup. . . . The North End Traveling resumes operations tomorrow night with Chapin and Gore and Gold Crowns tied for first. The C. and G.s meet the Marigold Arcades at Marigold and the Crowns face the Curtiss Baby Ruths at De Luxe. Carl Winterburg leads the average parade with 210 plus. . . . Sam Berger, new manager at Hyde Park Recreation, 5120 Lake Park av., has arranged a mixed doubles event for each Sunday night starting Jan. 14. The H. P. annual handicap sweeper is scheduled for the five Saturday nights which will decorate the March calendar. . . . The Bridge Tenders, Engineers, and Steamers are tied for the lead in the Senior Traffic club standings, each with a 33-18 mark. . . .

Root to Manage Columbus Nine in Association

Columbus, O., Jan. 6 (AP).—A. L. Bannister, president of the Columbus club of the American association, announced today the signing of Charley Root, former Chicago Cub pitcher, to manage the Redbirds during the 1945 season.



Charley Root.

Root succeeds Nick Cullop, who resigned recently to become manager of the Milwaukee Brewers.

Bannister said Root signed a player-manager contract and expected to do considerable relief pitching. The 45 year old Root managed Hollywood of the Pacific Coast league last season and pitched in 22 games. Root has been in organized baseball since 1921.

SOX BUY BAKER, A SHORTSTOP, FROM BROWNS

The White Sox, apparently with an eye to possible strengthening of a seventh place infield, yesterday acquired from the champion St. Louis Browns the services of Floyd Wilson Baker who specializes as a shortstop. In making the announcement, Vice President Harry Grabiner included the fact that it was a cash transaction but the amount was not disclosed.

The newcomer, who is 25 and classed as 4-F in the draft, hit only .175 as part time help with the Browns last season, but in 1942 at San Antonio, Tex., he compiled a neat .326.

400 ICE SKATERS COMPETE TODAY IN STATE MEET

3 Champions to Defend Crowns at Glen Ellyn.

Twenty-two races in 11 classes constitute the Illinois state speed skating program this afternoon at Glen Ellyn, Ill. With the exception of the men's senior division, which has three races scheduled and the class B mile for men, two events are listed for all others. The first race will start at 1:30 p. m.

Three 1944 champions, Lowell Miller, Elaine Bogda Gordon, and Ken Henry, will defend their titles. Other winners last season either have advanced to higher classes or are in service. Miller, senior champion, represents the Catholic Youth organization. Mrs. Gordon of the Northwest Skating club is defending women's senior while Henry, who skates for the George F. Barrett club, seeks to retain the junior state title. Henry hopes to celebrate his birthday which now sends him into the intermediate age class for the remainder of the season.

They'll Seek Silver Skates.

Miller and Henry will seek Silver Skates championships in the 28th annual races sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in Garfield park Jan. 20 and 21 but Mrs. Gordon, who won the girls' senior title in 1937, is not eligible. Entries for THE TRIBUNE's eight Derbies close at midnight next Sunday. Senior champions are eliminated each year while other winners, if they wish to compete must advance to the next higher class.

There is only one race in each age class in THE TRIBUNE'S Silver Skates Derbies and this is graduated from the 220 yard distance for midget boys to the men's two mile championship. The girls' junior Derby is contested over a quarter mile course, the girls' intermediate at a half mile, and the senior at one mile. All preliminaries are skated at half of the championship distance.

Offer 48 Major Awards.

Today's state meet furnishes a test of individual ability, Silver Skates, however, will attract a large number of inexperienced skaters and each will receive a souvenir button. Forty-eight major awards are offered and there are two team trophies for the 28th Silver Skates races in Garfield park.

The state meet today on Lake Ellyn has an entry list which includes most of the experienced skaters in Illinois. The list of events follows:

SENIOR MEN—440 yards, ¾ mile and 2 miles.
INTERMEDIATE BOYS—440 yards and 1 mile.
JUNIOR BOYS—220 yards and ¾ mile.
JUVENILE BOYS—1-6 mile and 880 yards.
MIDGET BOYS—220 yards and 880 yards.
CLASS B MEN—1 mile.

Approximately 400 will skate in today's events and in addition to the Chicago teams, Glen Ellyn A. A. A., Champaign-Urbana, and Elgin will be represented.

Klemundt Is Favorite.

George Fischer of the Northwest S. C., holder of the intermediate title, is now in the army and the boys having the best chance to succeed him are John Klemundt of the C. Y. O., winner of the city championship, and Dave Roll of Glen Ellyn, who captured the Western open championship last week. Luetta Du Mez, who won just about all the titles in the intermediate division last year and helped the C. Y. O. to the team championship, is now in the senior class competing against Mrs. Gordon, Peggy Barber, and Bessie Laga Douglas of the Barrett club. Mrs. Douglas won the city title.

Virginia Bell of the Barrett club will not defend her title but will try for the intermediate crown, which will leave the class open to a couple of Northwest skaters, Joan Musson, city champion, and Juanita Gatling, winner of the Western open title.

Tilden in Junior Class.

Tom Tilden representing Glen Ellyn, and Francis Malpede of the C. Y. O., co-holders of the juvenile title, both have advanced to the junior class and will give Henry a battle. Joan Murphy of Glen Ellyn and Betty Taft of Champaign-Urbana, co-holders of the 1944 title, are now in the junior class.

Other contenders are Janet Smith, Glen Ellyn youngster, and Tillie Bieschke of the Northwest club, who won the City and Western titles this year. Larry Richter of the C. Y. O., last year's midget sensation, is now skating as a juvenile and the class is open with Joe Prachter of the Champaign-Urbana S. C., holder of the city and western titles, having the best chance to win the state championship.

JUST THE WEATHER FOR A BIG WEEK-END ON ICE

Yesterday's weather, ideally suited for the ice skating clan, ushered in a big week-end for the boys and girls who travel on blades. In preparation for today's state meet in Glen Ellyn, many Chicago skaters competed in the Catholic Order of Foresters' annual Derby in Humboldt park. Left to right, the girls at the top, including four of yesterday's winners, are Luetta Du Mez, C. Y. O., third in the 220 and 880 yard events; Rita Janet, Northwest Skating club; Marian Laise, C. Y. O., second in the 880; Elaine Gordon, Northwest, the winner of the 220 and 880 championships, and Peggy Barber, Barrett A. C., second in the 220.

OPENING CALL IS SOUNDED FOR GOLDEN GLOVES

won the city team championship last year, will have entries in both the open and novice divisions.

Entries also will come, as in other years, from service men stationed in Chicago. There is no doubt but that this year's bouts will produce as many interesting matches as in 1944 and a team which will carry on creditably against the champions from the south, midwest, northwest, and the Pacific coast in the Tournament of Champions.

One Ring for Preliminaries.

Only one ring will be used each of the five nights of Golden Gloves boxing at St. Sabina and Loyola. Two rings will be required for the Tournament of Champions Feb. 26 and 27. On the third night in the Stadium one ring will be used to reduce the field to 32 semi-finals. These boxers will return to Chicago for the finals March 9 in the Stadium.

The eight champions will be supported by approximately 24 additional boxers chosen from the Tournament of Champions to prepare for the 18th intercity Golden Gloves bouts with New York. The intercity matches—16 bouts—will be held here April 4. Chicago is the defending team champion by virtue of its victory last year in Madison Square Garden.

Each boxer who enters the open or novice division of the Chicago sectional tournaments will receive a souvenir medal.

Gold Medals to Winners.

The north and south side champions will be awarded gold medals. The eight novice and eight open division champions in the city finals will be awarded golden gloves.

The prizes for the Stadium finals of the Tournament of Champions are identical with the awards when Golden Gloves was inaugurated in 1928. The champions will receive a golden glove set with a diamond. The runners-up in each weight will receive a silver glove set with an emerald. Each boxer chosen for the intercity squad will be given a bronze glove set with a ruby.

Entry Blank Printed Today.

Now to enroll Chicago's amateur boxers. Entry may be made on the blank which is printed today in these columns. Team entry may be submitted by coach or director, but the home address of each contestant must be furnished. Send entries to Wilfrid Smith, sport department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Each boy will receive instructions by mail and will be assigned to a preliminary examination center. Each also will receive a parental consent card which must be signed by his parent or guardian if he is under 21 years of age. This card must be presented at the boxer's preliminary examination.

SOCCER GROUP TO HOLD ANNUAL DINNER SESSION

Annual dinner meeting and election of officers of the Illinois state soccer commission will be held tomorrow night at 8 in the Sherman hotel, with Axel Ohman, chairman, presiding.

The delegates will make plans for the state cup competition and discus the National Soccer league's proposal for starting and finishing the season during the same year.

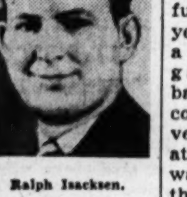
The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

BEFORE the arrival of the next summer sports season [and that happy time can't come too soon to suit a lot of us], the radar and radio industries of Chicago will have their own recreational association. That is the word which comes to this department on the wings of a January blizzard, and not by radio either.



Ralph Isacksen.

Several preliminary conferences have been held and members of the industry are in favor of the proposed new industrial sports organization. Ralph Isacksen, personnel director of the J. P. Seeburg corporation, has been named as chairman and Leonard Shapiro, executive secretary of Radar-Radio Industries, will act as secretary. A final meeting to complete the organization of the association will be held in the next few weeks.

Seeburg Corporation Employes Working on Plans for Show.

A survey of the field shows there are 65 concerns in Chicago which manufacture radar and radio or parts which are used in equipment of this kind. The organizers feel this is a fine field for a new organization, which would serve to bring employes of concerns in the field of electronics into closer contact with one another. Plans call for the organization of interplant leagues in all sports and also the promotion of various other recreational activities.

Speaking of the nonathletic recreational activities, the Seeburg corporation, which has a well balanced program, again is working on its biggest annual event, the All-Seeburg Varieties. The third presentation of this home [or plant] talent show is scheduled for Saturday night, Feb. 24, in the Lane High school auditorium. The first two shows were artistic successes, pleasing capacity audiences, but members of the 1945 cast expect to outdo the two earlier efforts.

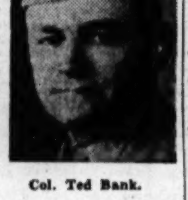
Owl League Has Plan that Keeps Ball Away from Gutters.

Getting back to the athletic side of the Seeburg program, which is in charge of Vince Infante, athletic director, under Isacksen's supervision, the Owl league, one of the company's three bowling organizations, has developed a unique plan for keeping the boys in the straight and narrow path, at least when it comes to keeping the ball out of the gutters which bound each alley.

A large hat, painted red and green, with a two foot plume on its top, is kept on hand whenever the league is in session and the instant a careless or unfortunate bowler gets a ball in the gutter, action is halted while he is crowned as King Gutterball. He must wear the hat and bear the title until some other participant suffers the same humiliation, or the session ends. The stunt not only has added hilarity to the league's matches but also has served to improve the bowling.

Joe Raso of Gits Molding last week moved into first place in individual scoring in the North Av.-Larrabee Y. M. C. A. Industrial Basketball league. Joseph scored 24 points in his team's 56 to 32 victory over the Seeburgs. He displaced Bob Werderitch of the Engene Dietzgen company, as top man.

COL. TED BANK, who last week was named president of the Athletic Institute of America, a position in which he succeeds the late Maj. John L. Griffith, knows whereof he speaks when he talks of the importance of physical training in American life, present and future. For four years Col. Bank, a former Michigan quarter back, Tulane coach and University of Idaho athletic director, was in charge of the American army's athletic and recreation program, both at home and overseas.



Col. Ted Bank.

Therefore, when Bank says physical fitness is one of the most vital subjects to the nation's welfare, it is a good idea to pay attention. "Only approximately 50 per cent of the young men examined for service are able to pass their preliminary tests," he said, "and many of those who are passed are sadly lacking in real physical fitness.

Institute Has Been Leader in Field in Industrial Recreation.

Speaking of the value of competition on high school and college athletic teams as fundamental training for army or navy service, Col. Bank said that qualities of leadership, aggressiveness and agility acquired on athletic teams not only have helped many of these former athletes to advance but in many cases definitely have been responsible for saving their lives and those of their comrades or men serving under them.

The colonel was released from his army position so that he could accept the position of head of the Athletic Institute, which gives an idea of the value which those in high places place on the promotion of physical fitness among the nation's youth.

The Institute, incidentally, has been a leader in the field of industrial recreation, having financed some intensive research in that field, in which it has collaborated with the Industrial Recreation association.

Clearing Industrial Basketball League Resumes Action Tomorrow.

The Clearing Industrial District Basketball league will resume competition tomorrow night after a two week rest from competition. The Lindahl Foundries, with two victories and Great Lakes Spring Corporation, with one, were the undefeated leaders when the league suspended for the holidays. Johnson & Johnson is next in line with one game won and one lost and the other three teams, Mechanical Handling, A. B. Wrisley Co., and United Air Lines, all have lost their single starts.

Evidence of the downstate interest in industrial sports and more especially in associations for direction and control of such activities is found in the word from Pekin about the forming of the Interlocking Trust Co., a nonprofit organization for promotion of sports, physical education and other activities among the employes of the Interlocking Fence Co. and the Meyers Manufacturing Co.

ARMY TEAM WINS.

COL. TED BANK last year received an achievement award for the army from the National Baseball Congress in recognition of the fact that army baseball teams won more state championships in semi-pro competition than did any other division. Army teams have won the national semi-pro title for the last two years.

Spartan Five Beaten, 39-37, by Cincinnati

East Lansing, Mich., Jan. 6 [Special].—Michigan State's basketball team suffered its fourth consecutive defeat tonight, losing to Cincinnati university by a score of 39 to 37.

The victory starved Spartans held the lead most of the game, but fell behind with seven minutes remaining when the Ohio quintet put on a display of snappy ball handling and shooting.

Cincinnati's center, John Mueller, was the game's high scorer with 12 points, while Forward Robin Roberts and Guard Joe Beyer led the Spartans with 10 each.

During the first half, the lead changed four times with Michigan State leading by a score of 22 to 18 at the half. It held this lead until seven minutes before the end of the game, when Guard Arnold Brinn scored from far out to give the Bearcats a two point advantage.

MARQUETTE FIVE LOSES, 48-45, TO WEST. MICHIGAN

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 6 [Special].—Western Michigan took the lead midway thru the first half in tonight's game with Marquette university and then fended off every threat to beat the Hilltoppers, 48 to 45.

Marquette started fast with a 5 to 0 lead, was tied at 12 to 12, and then slipped behind. The Broncos led at the intermission, 23 to 19.

Eleven points behind at one stage in the second half, the Hilltoppers rallied but their efforts fell short in the stretch.

U. S. THOROBRED GROUP SUPPORTS BAN ON RACING

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 6 (AP).—Dr. Charles Hagyard, president of the Thoroughbred Club of America, said today that thorobred owners and breeders would comply with the racing ban provisions and would continue to support the war effort and all associated agencies.

Commenting on the ban ordered by War Mobilization Director Byrnes, Dr. Hagyard said, "I am positive all racing men will attempt to comply fully with the request, no matter how it affects us.

"Owners and all persons connected with racing should, and I am sure they will accept the order in the spirit in which it was made."

Thomas B. Cromwell, connected with the sport for more than 50 years, predicted racing would recover from war time restrictions and recalled "the early '90s when thorobreds were given to any one who would lead them off the farms."

Sportsmen groups who wish to join in this winter bird feeding program will be assisted by the department if they will call the Chicago office, Central 4442.

CUDAHY PROFIT, SALES DECLINE IN FISCAL YEAR

Heavier Tax Load Cuts Income.

Cudahy Packing company yesterday reported reduced dollar sales volume and lower profits for its fiscal year ended Oct. 28 despite all-time peak sales on a tonnage basis.

E. A. Cudahy.

Second of the Big Four packers to disclose results of 1944 fiscal year operations, Cudahy reported physical sales volume rose 6.16 per cent above the 1943 fiscal period. However, sales and revenues were $419,618,000, or 2.15 per cent less. Lower dollar sales were attributed "to slightly lower average selling prices, principally on products sold to government agencies," by E. A. Cudahy, chairman.

Net Income Lower.

Net income was $3,190,061, equal to $5.58 a share, compared with $3,431,454, or $6.10 a share, a year earlier. Reduced profits reflected higher taxes, said Cudahy. Taxes totaled $10,680,278, compared with $10,209,957, and exceeded the total tax bill for the fiscal years 1935 to 1940, inclusive.

The company's working capital on Oct. 28 was $30,121,000, compared with $31,451,000. The decreases reflected refunding operations in which total funded debt was reduced $3,945,000, Cudahy said. Inventories of products, ingredients, and supplies were $24,954,000, $6,744,000 less than a year ago. Lighter live stock receipts toward the end of the fiscal year accounted for the reduced inventories, he said.

Cudahy paid tribute to the "patriotism, industry, and resourcefulness of the American farmers" who produced "vast quantities of live stock, necessary feeds, and other food stuff." Despite large military and lend-lease food requirements in 1944, approximately 5 per cent more meat was available for civilians on a per capita basis than in 1943, and about 14 per cent more than the average for the years, 1935-'39.

"Solutions Make Problems."

Commenting on the "revolutionary changes that have taken place in farm policy," Cudahy said that "price raising measures instituted to solve one problem have created other problems requiring new measures."

"The present policy of 'planned economy' for the agricultural population is a long journey from the original federal farm board legislation of 1929," he said. "Unless some radically different legislation is enacted after the war, the farmers of this country have lost their independence and will be subject to burocratic control for many years."

Asks Gradual End of Control to Avert Chaos

War time economic controls over production, man power, rationing, and prices must be removed gradually if the United States is to avoid chaos after Germany and Japan have been crushed, John Maurice Clark, professor of political economy at Columbia university, asserted yesterday in a study for the committee for economic development.

Warning that steps must be taken to avoid depression, inflation, or deflation, Clark asserted that to disband all controls instantly at the end of hostilities would be an invitation to trouble.

"This mistake was made after the first World war, with results which were bad and easily could have been worse," he said.

Names Three Objectives.

Three objectives which he said must be kept in mind in planning the orderly release of controls are [1] early preparation and speedy clearing of the decks for resumption and expansion of civilian production, [2] fair opportunity for all producers, particularly new ones, including access to necessary means of production, and [3] avoidance of cumulative depression, violent deflation, or violent inflation.

To encourage business to work toward the creation of more post-war jobs Clark recommended tax reform which would "permit industry to have sufficient funds for expanding risk taking enterprises."

To protect labor during the necessary period of reconversion he advocated unemployment benefits "as liberal as possible without causing idleness to be more attractive than employment."

Material Releases Urged.

Altho needed deferred public works and a backlog of maintenance and repairs will contribute to employment, he asserted chief reliance must be placed on large scale employment in industry, trade, and agriculture.

He recommended early release of materials needed for experimental development of new products, and said all remaining controls over materials could be ended after victory except on a few minor items.

Man power controls may present a more serious problem during the transition, Clark maintained. Resumption of even limited civilian production may increase the drift of workers away from war work, he warned, necessitating tighter rather than relaxed controls.

Rationing will be a field in which controls must continue for some time, he contended.

The study, which represented Clark's personal conclusions, will be published in book form. Later the C. E. D. will issue a statement of policy based on the study.

STOCKS LOWER; SOME LEADERS CONTEST TREND

Average Gains Half Point in Week.

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—The stock market today finished one of its liveliest weeks in several years with more profit cashing that extended yesterday's decline. Altho scattered favorites successfully contested the trend, the general direction was downward from the start and losses of fractions to a point or more predominated at the close.

The Associated Press 60 stock average was off 0.1 at 58.8 today, but held a net gain of 0.5 on the week. Of 828 issues traded, 369 declined, 237 advanced, and 222 were unchanged. Transfers of 742,990 shares compared with 1,016,440 last Saturday.

Omnibus corporation and Fajardo Sugar were up 1 and 2 points, respectively. Small advances were retained by American Telephone, New York Central, Southern railway, Chrysler, Kennecott, and Texas company. A loss of 2¾ points was recorded for Allied Chemical.

BOND MARKET UNEVEN.

New York, Jan. 6 (AP).—Bond market trends were irregular today, reflecting active selling of some recently buoyant rails coincident with new buying of other carriers. Volume of $8,824,000 made it one of the most active short sessions of the last 12 months in contrast with $6,928,200 last Saturday.

Bonds of the Monon system added 1 to 3 points to the sharp advances earlier in the week. Other rails making substantial improvement included Alton 3s, Morris and Essex 3½s, and Baltimore and Ohio convertible 1960s.

CHICAGO LIST SAGS.

Prices declined on turnover of 20,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. More active issues included Cities Service, up ⅜; Peabody Coal, up ⅛, and Chicago corporation common and Libby, McNeill, each down ⅛. Stocks reaching new 1944-'45 highs included Omnibus corporation, up ¾.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR RYE TURNS GRAINS HIGHER

Grain prices advanced quickly in early trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade before profit cashing caused a reaction. All deliveries of rye and wheat sold at new seasonal high prices and barley futures rose to new levels for the crop year. The close was well below the top prices. Rye finished ½ to 1 cent higher, wheat ¼ lower to ½ higher, corn ½ higher, oats ⅛ to ⅜ higher, and barley ¾ to 2 higher.

Heavy commission house buying which uncovered stop loss orders carried rye futures up 1¾ to 2 cents, May selling at $1.19⅛, or within 1¼ cents of the seasonal high before the upward movement was checked. Rye prices have advanced 5½ to 9⅞ cents from the low of last week.

Action of rye influenced the trend in other grains. Wheat was up around 1 cent early, but mills were credited with selling May freely and the market reacted.

Cattle Trade Pressure Cuts Feeding Profit

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Pressure on cattle markets because of tighter restrictions on packers' beef sales to civilians, talk of a price ceiling on live cattle, and the OPA policies cost farmers more than 10 million dollars during December and reduced the feedlot inventory value of animals scheduled for market the first half of 1945 by almost 50 million dollars, it was estimated yesterday at the stock yards.

Current top cattle prices were barely above the $17.50 proposed ceiling. Average returns were $1 a hundred pounds lower than a month ago and as low as any time in 29 months. Recent payments have been about $9 a head since early last month.

Predict Change in Feeding.

With the exception of farmers who handle the short fed cattle that produce the leaner kinds of beef, owners of farm feedlots say their business has been at a loss. Producers of the choice and prime animals have been hurt most.

Unless there is an upward revision of prices in the weeks ahead feeding methods will be altered drastically, experts on cattle feeding predicted. The existing price arrangement calls for strict feedlot economies, which mean reduced tonnage and still lower quality of beef, they said. The psychological effect of recent price changes and the ceiling threat may bring some liquidation. Most cattlemen said they will continue to feed what they have, but will enter the field of short-feds by selling at lighter weights.

Blame Drive for Control.

Trade leaders said it was not only the threat of a $17.50 price ceiling when top grades were bringing $18.50 that brought on the market difficulty. They also blamed the government drive to gain complete control over the sale of beef by packers, which has reduced packers' income from beef and threatens to slow down the movement of supplies thru packing plants. Several weeks ago the beef set-aside order was extended to include all plants butchering more than 51 cattle weekly.

A complaint of federal meat buyers has long been that the beef set aside for them was not always the kind they desired. Consequently, beginning tomorrow, all packers under federal inspection must not sell any beef to civilians until federal buyers have selected the 60 per cent they want. Packers said this will reduce the operations some because packers must hold their entire output until 40 per cent is approved for sale to civilians.

LISTING REQUIREMENTS.

The New York Stock exchange prides itself on its listing requirements and on the care exercised by its department of stock list. Moreover, to be listed a security must first be registered with the securities and exchange commission. Despite such precautions, developments and disclosures following the listing of Elastic Stop Nut corporation common stock on the exchange last September have made the admission of the shares to trading appear untimely.

The president of the company, William T. Hedlund, took his own life on Nov. 29. On the same day the SEC ordered a suspension of trading in the shares, which lasted four weeks. The price has slumped.

Meanwhile the company filed amendments to its registration statement. These disclosed net operating losses for August, September, and October, altho in earlier periods substantial profits had been shown, including $1,025,516 in the six months ended last May. In November, inventories previously valued at $3,362,587 were sold for $195,653, a tax saving offsetting 73 per cent of the loss. Unfilled orders fell from $25,798,000 on Dec. 1, 1943, to $5,418,000 on Oct. 31, 1944.

In December, preferred dividend action was deferred.

The exchange thru its listing standards and information requirements seeks to protect investors. Just a few days before the appearance of Elastic Stop Nut on the roster, Emil Schram, president of the exchange, in a statement to members had summarized the general qualifications for listing, as follows:

"The [applicant] company must be a going concern; it must have substantial assets or demonstrated earning power, or both. . . . The exchange also attaches importance to such questions as the degree of national interest in the company, its standing in its particular field, the character of the market for its products or services, the relative stability and position of the company in its industry, and whether it is engaged in an expanding industry with prospects of maintaining or improving its position. Also, the company's securities must have a sufficiently wide distribution."

Rules and systems, however, cannot always be made proof against the possibility of untimely, or otherwise unfortunate, listings. The risk of untimeliness is increased under shifting war time industrial conditions, especially in the case of companies with large war orders subject to cancelation or cut backs. Despite all precautions on the part of stock exchanges and despite laws for the protection of investors, it remains for the individual buyer of securities to exercise vigilance in the selection and timing of his purchases.

REVISE ARCHAIC HIGHWAY LAWS, TRUCKERS URGE

Place Illinois Lines at Disadvantage.

The Illinois legislature will be asked at this session to revise the state's "antiquated highway laws" to permit trucking lines to operate on equal terms with those in other states, Walter E. McCarron, general manager of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators association, said yesterday. He asserted that industries and householders alike are paying penalties as a result of Illinois laws which set limits on truck lengths and weights below those allowed in most other states.

"The public does not realize that when a truck or trailer reaches the Illinois state line, the cargo must be unloaded and reloaded on smaller units to comply with regulations comparable with those of only three other states," MacCarron said. "Almost every cargo is consumer merchandise and the added expense of needless handling must be passed on to merchants and ultimately to the family consumer."

Length Limit 40 Feet.

McCarron said that in Illinois the over-all length of a truck is limited to 40 feet. Only one other state, Tennessee, has a lower length limit, 35 feet, he said. Illinois permits 16,000 pounds of weight per axle; 31 states permit 18,000 pounds; six states have no weight limit and six other states allow 19,000 to 22,400 pounds.

"A semi-trailer, a unit drawn by a power tractor, may not exceed 35 feet in Illinois which illustrates the limitation fixed by a 40 foot over-all length," he said. "It makes a heavy trailer combination an impossibility on Illinois roads. The hardships are manifold, and the state's reputation as a 'bottle neck' reacts against motor carriers having home offices in the state. Feeder shipments are diverted from the state when possible and as a result Illinois operators lose thousands of tons of freight annually."

Standard Limits Widely Used.

McCarron said that nearly all states have legalized the standard length of 45 feet and the uniform axle weight of 18,000 tons. Kentucky and Tennessee are among the few that have not. The L formed on the map by the states of Illinois and Kentucky blocks the northeastern manufacturing district from the western and southwestern states as far as economical truck transportation is concerned, he said.

The fact that truck laws have had to be disregarded during the war indicates that they should be revised to allow Illinois truck operators to compete on a more equitable basis with operators in other states when the war ends.

DELAY SOUGHT IN INSURANCE TRUST RULING

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6 (AP).—Legislation to exempt insurance business from the anti-trust laws, except for agreements involving boycott, coercion, and intimidation, until March 1, 1946, was introduced today by Senators O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.] and Hatch [D., N. M.].

O'Mahoney explained that the measure carried out recommendations of the National Association of State Insurance Commissioners. He said it was designed to give the state legislatures and the insurance industry time to make adjustments to the Supreme court's decision of last year that the insurance business is subject to the anti-trust laws.

Tighten Curbs on Price Rise in Furnishings

Rising prices of home furnishings have made necessary "more vigorous" control than has been experienced in other consumer product fields, Harvey C. Mansfield, price executive of the office of price administration's durable goods branch, said yesterday at the midwinter home furnishings market in the American Furniture Mart.

Four furniture regulations and orders make up OPA's immediate program, said Mansfield. Two were issued last Thursday. The others will be issued "at the earliest possible moment," to reduce the cost of goods to the retailer, he said.

Restrict Extra Margins.

One will be a furniture jobber order designed to curtail or eliminate some of the extra margins paid before goods reach the retailers. No program exists to limit the proper distribution functions of jobbers, said Mansfield, but action was necessary to combat war conditions which permitted new intermediaries to "tax" dealers or consumers for the privilege of access to limited supplies that normally were available directly.

The other order, affecting upholstered furniture, will seek to eliminate upgrading in fabrics, which he said accounted for much of the rise in upholstered goods prices.

Low Cost Lines Sought.

One of the orders issued last week was to encourage return to the market of scarce furniture lines most needed by low income groups, he said. The other sought to hold the price of upholstered furniture covered with the retailer's own material the same to the consumer as if the manufacturer had obtained the fabric from his regular source.

These and future actions will not be directed at making scapegoats of retailers as the last handlers of goods before they reach consumers, he asserted, but retailers cannot expect to be immune from necessary tightening up of existing controls and development of new ones.

Mansfield said OPA was attempting to ease shortages of bedding items, including innerspring mattresses, and return them to the market at March, 1942, price levels.

CHARGES 18,000 BANK CREDITORS GOT NOTHING

Charges that a settlement of the stockholders' liabilities in the defunct United American Trust and Savings bank left only enough money to notify 18,000 creditors that they would get nothing were contained in an appeal that has been filed with the Illinois Supreme court.

The appeal was brought by Atty. Joseph D. Teitelbaum on behalf of Helen Postelneck, described as a creditor of the bank in the sum of $275,000 plus interest.

It charged that settlement of the case by Superior Judge U. S. Schwartz on recommendation of a special commissioner, Harry A. Boissat, provided for collection of $45,500 in stockholders' liabilities, with $42,400 to be paid out immediately for attorneys' fees, master's fees, and other expenses. This left $3,100, approximately enough to notify the 18,000 creditors, the appeal charged.

Liability found by a master and settlements made by some of the stockholders were listed as follows: County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, $3,400 settled for $750; Superior Judge Peter H. Schwaba, $1,000 for $250, and the estate of the late Paul Drymalski, member of the board of tax appeals, $10,000 for $5,000.

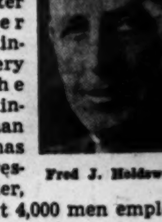
COAL DEALERS ASK PUBLIC AID ON DELIVERIES

Man Power Supply Half of Normal.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Public coöperation in ordering coal and in helping with deliveries was asked yesterday by Fred J. Holdsworth, president of the Chicago Coal Merchants association, after severe winter weather had intensified delivery problems. The Chicago coal industry's man power supply has become progressively shorter, with only about 4,000 men employed in delivery operations compared with 8,500 normally.



Fred J. Holdsworth.

Chicago consumes 10 to 11 million tons of coal annually for heating, and most of it must be delivered to consumers by trucks. With only about half their normal number of workers, coal dealers said the delivery problem was approaching crisis proportions.

Handles 90 Tons Instead of 200.

One dealer who said he should be delivering about 200 tons a day has been able to get out only about 90 tons because of lack of help.

Consumption of coal for heating in December was estimated to have been about 5 per cent more than a year ago and the same rate of increase was expected this month, depending on weather.

Holdsworth said coal stocks were ample and the trucks available, with man power all that was lacking. Public coöperation will go a long way toward relieving the situation and averting distress, he said.

"For example, if the coal bin is not easily accessible to delivery, let the nearest window be used to get coal into the basement," urged Holdsworth. "At this time, with the ground hard, probably no damage will result from permitting trucks to drive into unaccustomed places to facilitate delivery.

Careful Ordering Asked.

"Give your coal merchant a week or 10 days' notice in advance of the date you expect to be out of coal. Do not order fuel if you have two weeks or more supply on hand, thereby making all man power available to serve those in actual need.

"If you have any means of supplying the necessary labor to take the fuel from the truck to the basement it will be most helpful to the entire effort, allowing available man power to perform these services for the aged and infirm. Full coöperation of the public is urgently needed to overcome this emergency."

The possibility of some curtailment of shipments from the mines to the Chicago area also was indicated by reports that some large Illinois mines had been ordered to divert large shipments to eastern railroads.

Merchants National Bank Reports Increased Income

The Merchants National Bank, Chicago, yesterday reported net earnings of $107,026 in 1944 compared with $94,484 in 1943. The bank said its surplus account was $500,000, having been increased $100,000 by a transfer from undistributed earnings.

HOW TO GET MORE OUT OF IMPORTANT NEWS . . .

■ ■ ■ Do you have friends you secretly envy because they seem to get more out of important news of the day than you do—yet apparently spend no more time on their newspapers?
Is their overall view of what's happening clearer than yours? Do they see in the news important meanings or implications you've missed? Are they apt to know quicker than you how developments will affect personal or business interests?
If you yourself want to get more out of the news, here's how:
Every day The Wall Street Journal carries a front-page feature, What's News—condensing in one column all important "world-wide" events, and in another the outstanding developments in Business and Finance.
Just 5½ minutes' reading time gives you a definite background against which to consider and appraise individual industrial, financial and Washington developments—concisely, accurately reported and analyzed in The Wall Street Journal's other columns.
That's one reason why The Wall Street Journal really is a new kind of newspaper. That's why, too, The Wall Street Journal is a daily working tool of progressive management.
Our acceptance of subscriptions ($18 a yr. in U. S.) may be subject to delay because of wartime limitations on publishers' use of paper.

COLLEGES MAKE LARGE POST-WAR BUILDING PLANS

Spending of 50 Million in Chicago Proposed.

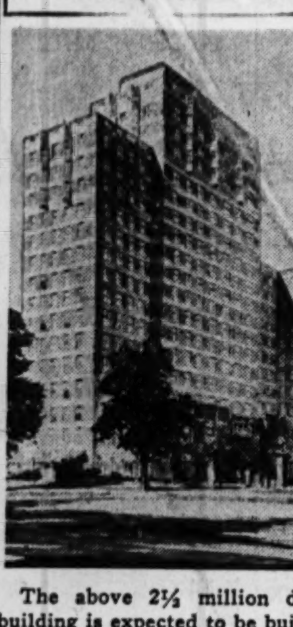
BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Franklyn B. Snyder.

The largest educational building program in Chicago's history was disclosed yesterday when post-war construction plans were made public by the University of Chicago, the University of Illinois, Loyola university, and additional details of the 17 million dollar expenditure contemplated by Northwestern university were told. Altho complete figures were not available it was estimated that approximately 50 million dollars will be spent by the four universities over a period of years after the war.

About half of the 17 million to be spent by Northwestern will be used for new buildings on the Chicago campus, it was said. The largest will be an 18 story structure for the University college, an evening division in the fields of liberal arts, education, music, speech, and engineering. It will cost about 2½ million dollars and will be built west of Abbott hall. This will be one of Northwestern's earliest post-war projects.

Post-War Unit



The above 2½ million dollar building is expected to be built on the Chicago campus of Northwestern university from plans by Holabird & Root as soon as war restrictions are lifted. It will house the university college and will be erected west of Abbott hall.

Plan Several Hospitals.

Later the Morton Memorial hospital, in memory of the late Joy Morton, will be built on Superior st. adjoining the Ward memorial. Part of the funds necessary is available thru a bequest of 1½ million dollars from the estate of Morton's widow. It will be one unit in a larger development for the study and treatment of diseases of the nerves.

Other buildings planned for a medical center on the Chicago campus include a maternity hospital, a children's hospital, and a large building for medical research.

Northwestern intends building in Evanston a million dollar field house to seat 14,000 persons, a humanities building, a women's gymnasium, a dining hall for non-fraternity men, 10 residence halls for men and women, a chapel, an administration building, an infirmary, and buildings for the schools of speech, education, commerce, and journalism.

Loyola to Spend Millions.

Several million dollars will be spent by Loyola after the war. As part of the university's 75th anniversary program of development architects thruout the country have been invited to submit competitive sketches for five new buildings for post-war erection. These will include a 5 million dollar medical and dental school building in the west side medical center; an administration building, a chemistry lecture and laboratory building, a dormitory for out of town students, and a liberal arts building with classroom accommodations for 1,000 students, all on the lake shore campus.

Other Loyola post-war plans include the purchase or construction of downtown facilities in a large central campus to house the law, graduate, and commerce schools, university college, school of social work, and other activities now at 28 N. Franklin st.

Housing by U. of C.

Housing of students, faculty, administrative employes, and the general public will figure largely in the University of Chicago's post-war plans. The faculty yesterday received notice from President Hutchins that an extensive housing program for it and administrative workers was contemplated south of the Midway. Student housing is also a post-war objective.

Lyndon H. Lesch, assistant treasurer, said that as soon as restrictions are removed work will be started on a demonstration housing project at 6105-29 University av. The land is now being used by the government.

U. of I. to Expand.

Vice President Wilbur C. Munnecke said that other post-war plans call for food research and administration buildings, and a new contagious disease hospital.

The University of Illinois may spend about 3 million dollars in Chicago when the war ends, said Park Livingston, president of the board of trustees. Plans include a general hospital addition for medical research, possibly an atmospheric research building and acquisition of land for expansion.

PLACE NEW $615,000 LOAN ON GRANVILLE GARDEN APARTMENTS

A refinancing loan of $615,000 for 24 years at 4 per cent has been placed on the Granville Garden apartments, at the northwest corner of Hoyne and Granville avs., Draper & Kramer, Inc., said yesterday. The mortgage was made thru the John Hancock Life Insurance company.

The 14 building development, containing 196 apartments, was the first million dollar project of its kind to follow the 1929 stock market crash. It was built in 1938 and financed with a $750,000 FHA insured mortgage. Flats were rented from blueprints long before the building was completed. It has been 100 per cent occupied for several years. Draper & Kramer has managed it since completion.

Lake Shore Drive Corner Purchased by Beck Oil Co.

The Beck Oil company yesterday bought the northwest corner of Lake Shore dr. and Ontario st., 120 by 200 feet from Security Life Insurance Company of America, for $55,000 cash, thru the George F. Lurie company, and will erect a large gas station when building restrictions are lifted. The buyer now operates a small station on the property under a lease.

Sixth Tribune Fashion Contest!

By NORMA LEE BROWNING

FOR 150 YEARS the American people, freed from the old world tradition of obeisance to an all-powerful authority, have been amazing the world by such talents, ingenuity, and progress as had not been recorded before in 6,000 years of world history. It is paradoxical that not until only five years ago did America step forward to take her rightful place in another field that had long been neglected in this country.

Since the satiny, swirling days of Marie Antoinette, Paris had been the world arbiter of fashions—until five years ago. America's smart set slithered and strutted in imported labels. That is, until five years ago.

It took a war to free American women and American designers from another old world tradition: to be fashionable it must be from Paris.

But they have been freed. And in five short years America has made fashion history of the kind that comes only when creative genius must no longer bow down to any presupposed authority.

Today the American woman wears an American label on her back and wears it proudly.

Today the slogan American designs for American women is taken for granted, the same as bathtubs, hot dogs, moderately priced automobiles, and all the other things that are typically and uniquely American.

The Chicago Tribune is proud of the role it has taken in boosting America to top spot in the fashion world.

Shortly after the fall of France in 1940 The Tribune originated the first nation-wide American Fashions Contest for the purpose of uncovering and encouraging American talent in the field of fashions and design.

The first contest brought almost 15,000 entries from every nook and corner in America.

Sketches came in from professionals and amateurs, from struggling young shop clerks, ambitious school girls, graying seamstresses who at last had found the inspiration to fulfill their creative urge.

Thru the years of The Tribune's contest some of these unknown and obscure would-be designers have found sudden fame in the fashion world when their sketches were selected for prizes or honorable mentions. Many others have been given responsible and well paying jobs in various phases of the fashion industry as a result of their work in the contest.

Not only was The Tribune responsible for discovering a vast reservoir of latent talent thru its fashion contests, but it has helped create and stimulate a style that is distinctly American.

This can best be explained by Mrs. Grace Pickering, fashion authority, who has directed the American Fashions Contest since it first started five years ago.

"Americans have become accustomed to simplicity," Mrs. Pickering said. "We've grown to like and to demand that slim and slick look that makes the new Paris styles seem exaggerated and fantastic in comparison. In fashions, as in all the arts, nothing is smarter than simplicity, and on this score American designers have surely taken the lead."

As the 1945 American Fashions Contest gets under way there seems to be little doubt in the minds of American designers that American fashions are here to stay.

"American designers have always had everything Paris had, and more," said "Gladi," Chicago dress designer. "It took the American women a while to realize this, but now that they have, we have nothing more to fear from Paris competition."

At left: Sophisticated dinner dress of crinkled crepe emphasizes the beauty of the fabric, with the suave gathered drapery to the bodice and the slim skirt. A dashing long sash belt ties at the side and ends in two long, swinging tassels of jet beads. (Designed by Alice Orovan, New York, N. Y.)

Narrow piping of black outlines the curved-cut detail sections; a precise black patent leather bow is under the chin. Red hat, black gloves, and black muff complete the costume. (Designed by Miriam F. Belcher, Garrison-on-Hudson, N. Y.)

FILMDOM'S NINE MOST BEAUTIFUL

At left is TONY GAUDIO, veteran Hollywood camera man and considered an authority on beautiful women. Tony, when asked to select the 10 most beautiful women in screen history, named nine, saying there "aren't 10 real beauties." Here are his choices:

CORINNE GRIFFITH, the "ethereal or spiritual type."

NORMA TALMADGE, "perfect brunette classical type."

JEAN HARLOW, first of the "perfect voluptuous type."

MARION DAVIES, chosen for her flawless complexion.

At right: MERLE OBERON, the mysterious, exotic type, "with orchid-like glamor."

At left: ANN SHERIDAN, whom Tony considers supreme as the modern voluptuous type; more "languorously sultry" than Jean Harlow.

LOOKING at HOLLYWOOD with HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood.

ON THIS first Sunday of 1945, as we enter our fourth year of war, I'm going to leave my Hollywood beat in order to share with you a letter from "Spec" McClure, formerly of my staff and now serving with our army in Belgium. I have found no finer expression of what our soldiers think about and their hopes for the post-war world.

The army nurse to whom Spec pays tribute in this letter was Frances Slanger, who was killed by a German shell Oct. 21, 1944, just a few hours after she had mailed to Stars and Stripes her open letter expressing her appreciation of the fighting men she served.

Spec's letter follows:

"Dear Miss Hopper: It is Thanksgiving afternoon, and here the earth is relatively quiet—as quiet, one might say, as the army can ever be—a thrum of distant motors; perhaps a friendly if loud argument or two; perhaps a lone G. I. grievously addressing his Maker over the latest exasperation. Otherwise, as I said, the earth is relatively quiet, and beyond the doors the dead leaves fall.

"I have long intended writing you something of entertainment overseas, knowing that you may be interested in some first-hand impressions. I had meant to do that today, but something interfered, and I do not feel like writing of entertainment. Since morning I have been thinking of a dead girl whom I never knew but whom I, doubtless along with countless others, felt I knew.

"She was an army nurse, and a few weeks ago, in answer to the blessings the wounded and dying had heaped upon her kind, she wrote an open letter to the men. It appeared in our Stars and Stripes. And it was a model of a selfless devotion, a humanity, and an integrity one thinks extinct.

"As I recall, she made no mention of a cause; nor did she speak of a cloven-footed enemy who gored children with their horns. She wrote merely as a G. I. Jane to a G. I. Joe deeply involved in a bloody business called war, asking not for understanding, expecting no mercy, but giving to her limits in both.

FRANCES SLANGER

"And we knew there wasn't a false word in the letter. We knew the tent from which she wrote, with the rain and wind slashing thru it, the flashlight chandelier, the drying clothes, and outside the mud and the sound of the guns. We knew it as a world so far removed from our former life that it might have been on another planet or in an age beyond time. But we knew it for our world, and we grinned in appreciation, knowing that we read the letter of a girl already dead, and her words fixed beyond alteration. They were sealed with her blood.

"Perhaps the story got a big play in the States; it should have. Most soldiers over here doubtless know it. However, it should be shoved down the throats of those who put gain and personal ambition above a common cause, who too lightly or too thoughtlessly or too casually take what the girl lived and died for.

"During this war, as both civilian and soldier, I've seen ideals trampled in the mud by those who most profess to uphold them. I have seen this too often to have much faith left. And I have seen, as all who make an honest effort must, a thousand forms of betrayal and stupidity. And in weariness I have told myself a thousand times nothing remained to believe in—that the ancient enemies of mankind—greed and ignorance (for surely all evil springs from these)—were too great for our mortal strength to conquer. But now I know that this is not altogether right, even when believing with all my heart and soul that all great and honest minds cannot but be pessimistic.

"For somewhere in the sordid, selfish, shameful business that makes up most of our petty lives there is a nobility that will not perish. And men declaring that nothing is worth fighting for are known to die with their faces to the enemy, refuting by their action the words their lips have shaped.

"And I have seen too many graves of those who, loving life as dearly as I love it, nevertheless died in order that something might keep on living. Whether these gave their lives willingly or unwillingly is now beside the point. Whether they knew even what they were dying for cannot now be important to them. Whether wars have ever solved anything is a plaything of philosophers and those who have the ultimate answers. I have none. But there is no argument about a grave. It is an immutable fact. And there is no arguing that they who wished to live died, and we lived, in the name of a common cause.

"And I have come to know that if all else turns hollow with betrayal, these graves are fixed for eternity. They will not fail—and whatever their purpose, it is to them we must tie ourselves. For in the end—and I speak far beyond this war—if humanity loses the fight, and selfishness, futility, and the will of petty egos destroy the world, and all comes to dust and ashes, it is still best to have bound your brain and heart and energies to those who perished facing the enemy squarely in whatever form he may have come. I now know this to be true, and it is the one thing that matters.

"They say this war is won and the victory is ours. I believe it is. They speak of winning the peace. That remains to be seen. But this I do believe: If the common attitude is not changed, if greed is not uprooted and sincerity restored to life, if a man's ideals are less than his purse, and the graves are forgotten, we will not have won the war; we will not have won the peace; we will have rather lost the world.

"It is a common mistake of people to think pensiveness and morbidity the same. Almost invariably when I'm caught in a thoughtful mood I'm asked what I'm sad about. This is particularly true of barrooms, where, walled in by the effects of alcohol, a man can conversely be the most neigh-

This Is Tokyo—Target for Today!

AS A RESULT of the earthquake catastrophe of 1923, modern Tokyo is not the tissue paper city many Americans suppose, but nevertheless its extensive slum areas, generally backed up against the fine office buildings that line the Ginza and other principal streets, make it still vulnerable to fire. Equally important, Tokyo is not only the source of political authority for Japan, but as the home of the god-emperor it is the national shrine inspiring the Japanese with their notions of race superiority and invincibility. Bombs on Tokyo can blast not only war factories and naval and military establishments but the whole Jap supremacy idea.

Tokyo began as Yeddo (or Edo), a city built in the Musasino swamps around a feudal castle. Strategically situated near the middle of Honshu, the Japanese main island, in about 1590 it became the capital of eight Japanese provinces, and under the shoguns it flourished and attracted a population of 1,000,000 persons. When the Emperor Meiji defeated the shogun in 1868 and began the creation of modern Japan he removed his capital from Kyoto and Yeddo became Tokyo, political, religious, industrial, financial, and cultural center of the new empire.

Under Meiji a port was begun at Yokohama, 18 miles away; canals were dug thru the swamps of lower Tokyo, the Sumida river was bridged, and banks and factories were established. Modern Tokyo, however, was not built until after the disastrous earthquake and fire of 1923.

The first shock of the quake came two minutes before noon on Sept. 1. Great fissures opened in the earth, buildings collapsed, walks and pavements cracked, and soon the fires began. Generally they started in the business and industrial section and moved east and north on both sides of the Sumida river. The destruction of the water supply system and heat cyclones increased their menace. On Sept. 1 almost a third of Tokyo burned, and by the end of Sept. 3 nearly half the area of the city, including almost all of the industrial and business zones, was in ashes.

The burned area was more than four times greater than that covered by the Chicago fire of 1871, and the property loss was almost 12 times as great. The property destruction was six times that of the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906 and covered three times the area of the San Francisco disaster. More than 218,000 buildings were destroyed, together with bridges, water and land transportation, and even installations under the ground. Almost nothing was left whole in the populous eastern half of this city of 2,000,000 population.

Refugees of the 1923 earthquake. Notice smoke in background.

Out of the shambles, with the help of foreign nations, particularly the United States, Japan built a new, modern capital. Many of the new sections would rival those of American cities in engineering and architecture, and the sky line of Tokyo, tho it is limited to structures of six to eight stories, resembles those of modern American water front cities.

To the north and west of the capital run low ranges of hills, and behind them in the distance is sacred Fujiyama, Japan's highest peak. Most of Tokyo is on lowland flats along the bay and the Sumida river, and this district is laced with canals. Ginza, Tokyo's State street or Broadway, is wide and modern, but in much of the city are narrow alleyways that suffice for streets and are lined with flimsy hovels that provide the chief fire menace. To the west of modern Tokyo station, almost in the center of town, is the imperial palace, half Japanese, half western in architectural style, surrounded by extensive grounds.

Tokyo is a powerful industrial city and once exported great quantities of its merchandise to the United States. The heavy industrial areas line the Sumida river, which curves thru Tokyo on the northeast and then spreads eastward across the Arakawa Hosuiro canal and thru reclaimed lands to the Edo river, eastern boundary of the new Tokyo. Another industrial center has developed along the bay and the Tamagawa river, forming the south and southwest boundary of Tokyo.

Just west of the Sumida river industrial district, extending to red brick Tokyo station and in the general direction of the palace grounds, is the commercial district. The residential area, much of it missed by the 1923 fire, forms a wide wedge between the industrial zones, fanning into the highlands to the west.

Almost every type of heavy manufacture is represented in the industrial sections of Tokyo and near-by Yokohama, altho the big airplane plants are at Nagoya. The particular objects of air raids are the naval yards and port facilities along the bay in the vicinity of Yokohama. Taken together the Tokyo-Yokohama industrial center is the greatest in Japan, exceeding even Osaka and Kawanishi.

The new Tokyo has expanded rapidly in area and population until it now has more than 7,000,000 persons. It has permitted much cheap construction and the extensive development of slum areas dangerously close to the well built neighborhoods, but still it cannot be said that the truly vital parts of the city are unusually vulnerable to air attack. Except for the fact that flimsy small plants would be destroyed and workers driven from their slums, much of the industrial area could be bombed without greater expectation of damage than in London or Chicago.

Unlike London, Tokyo has no blind side which can be approached by planes without warning if the air alarm systems are in service. Tokyo bay is almost completely surrounded by land, and it is almost impossible for planes to approach the city without passing over some land. London, in contrast, can be approached almost directly from the sea, and Berlin is comparatively safe because it can have sound detectors out for hundreds of miles in all directions. Tokyo's land barrier, however, is limited to a few miles, and while an alarm is likely to be given, it could come only a few moments before the attack if the planes came in from the sea and not from China. There are no heights about Tokyo that are particularly suitable for anti-aircraft installations, and an aircraft-carrying fleet, if it could avoid the Japanese sea patrol and the numerous islands protecting the mainland, could send planes in from the sea with a fairly good chance for surprise.

The Tokyo water supply is limited, and bomb smashes on the waterworks at Yodobasi and the reservoir gates at Yamaguti, Murayama, and Ogoti might quickly have the city in distress. These reservoirs and dams, however, are in rugged country not easy to get at. The largest of them is the Ogoti reservoir, on the upper reaches of the Tamagawa river. Until it was built recently Tokyo was frequently threatened with a water shortage.

Tokyo transportation is chiefly water-borne, particularly that of the heavy industries. The bulk of the plants are reached by rivers or canals or are along Tokyo bay. There are 5,512 waterways in Greater Tokyo, including small ponds and moats, and land traffic moves over 288 big bridges, most of them modern, and nearly 5,000 smaller ones. Electric railroads, street cars, and motor buses supply most of the land transportation for the industrial zone, and a modern system of railroads links Tokyo with near-by Yokohama, Osaka, and Kobe to the south and the other large cities and industrial centers, particularly those to the northwest. The largest manufacturing cities of the island are linked by water, however, and Japan probably could struggle along even if its railroads were bombed out.

The climate about Tokyo is usually good for flying. The weather is mild, with many bright, clear days. During fall, winter, and early spring there are frequent high winds, but only in the early autumn is there great danger of typhoons, destructive to all forms of transportation. Such storms are infrequent, and the heavy fogs that impede aviation are rare as compared with the Aleutians or the British Isles.

Tokyo lies 675 miles from Russian Vladivostok and 3,115 miles from Dutch Harbor, Alaska. This geographical position is one good reason why Japan has remained at peace with Russia.

"My clothes have a new lease on life—since I'm onto TWICE the Wear with Ivory Flakes care!"

1. "No two ways about it—

I'm a permanent Ivory Flakes user," says war bride Mrs. William Pène duBois of New York City. "My salary at the real estate office isn't exactly gigantic. So I've been on the lookout for a way to help my trousseau stay pretty for my husband's long-due furlough. Learning about twice the wear with Ivory Flakes care certainly helps take care of that beautifully!

2. "Rough treatment is out these days with new clothes so scarce and expensive!" Did you know, wash tests on dresses, housecoats, undies, prove pretty washables give as much as twice the wear with gentle Ivory Flakes care? So, why treat your precious things roughly with the wrong kind of soap! That's too wasteful for words!

3. "Make all your pretties last longer—not just stockings and undies. Help all sudsables from girdles to slipcovers stay bright and gay longer with Ivory Flakes care."

DON'T WASTE IVORY FLAKES . . . Soap uses vital war materials. You'll see even a little of the flake form of pure, mild Ivory Soap goes a long way.

Wash tests prove the Ivory Flakes way Helps keep "pretties" bright and gay!

YOUNG KING COLE AND HIS FIDDLER ONE

King Cole . . . strings to his trio.

YOUNG KING COLE—he'll be only 28 come next March 17—has come a long way since those Chicago high school days when he first started taking tedious piano lessons under parental urging. He's not at the top yet, but in any listing of great jazz pianists you'll find this deft-fingered fellow's name. During school days Cole (they named him Nathaniel when he was born down in Montgomery, Ala.) was an athlete, and he has the relaxed approach to music that is the mark of a well trained man of action. The King organized a band in Chicago, played local dates, toured with a sepia revue, ended the run in Los Angeles, where he went into the night club field. Now his trio is one of the top instrumental units in the field and is on entertaining display in CAPITOL's King Cole Trio album.

Assisted by two superb musicians, Oscar Moore, one of the great guitarists of the day, and Johnny Miller, an unobtrusive but magnificent bass player, Cole approaches standard numbers with a wealth of talent. He has the sensible idea that there are two things you can do with the melodic line—follow it, or improvise around it without abandoning it or burying it altogether. The album includes eight sides—"My Sweet Embraceable You," "Sweet Lorraine" (with a Cole vocal), "The Man I Love," "Body and Soul," Rachmaninoff's "Prelude" in C-sharp minor (beautifully handled, with a clean regard for the original scoring), "What Is This Thing Called Love?", "Easy Listenin' Blues," and "It's Only a Paper Moon." You'll be fascinated by Moore's enticing patterns and Cole's crystal-clear playing. And you'll applaud Miller's background bass—a perfect example of stellar support. Miller is a California native, Moore an Arizonan.

HOME IS WHAT YOU MAKE IT

By MAUREEN DALY

(Author of "Seventeenth Summer" and "Smarter and Smoother.")

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

AS GUYS AND GALS get bigger and older their houses often get smaller—and older; four walls and a roof, and pretty unattractive at that. For all characters under 13 a back yard can be a fascinating place, convertible into anything from a baseball diamond to a picnic grounds or the wide open spaces for playing cowboy and Indian.

After 13 it is just a small fenced-in place for hanging clothes, where the grass must be cut in the summer, the leaves raked in the fall, and the snow on the back sidewalk shoveled in the winter. And the same thing happens to the basement and the attic. The places that used to be fun to play in are suddenly just new corners for storing old clothes and newspapers and extra spots to clean on Saturdays.

And again the same sudden change takes place in almost every part of the house. The front room used to be fun. It was a comfortable, homey place where you and your family could sit in comfort, talk or listen to the radio. And suddenly you see it as it really is.

You notice that the arm of the big chair in the corner sags a little or a spring is pushing thru the middle cushion of the davenport. The drapes are faded at the edges where the sun shines thru, and the rug is worn a little at the foot of the stairs.

It won't hurt you to get up a little earlier so you can get that bath before the line starts forming to the right.

There are four small chips along the edge of the coffee table where your young sister has bumped it with her kiddie car. The whole room has a thoroly lived-in look, and being a smooth young character, strictly on the ball yourself, you don't like it.

With a brief look around the upstairs of your home, you find it equally impossible. Everywhere you turn you latch your lashes on something new to complain about. The bed sags on one side where you sit to put on your shoes and socks in the morning; the bedroom curtains are exactly the same bedroom curtains (with new starch and a few darns) that have been hanging in your room ever since spring of your freshman year; the wallpaper has an all-over floral design which looked attractive five years ago but is irritating now that you want something chic and striped.

To make things even worse, you have to share that room with your younger sister, who never will learn the meaning of privacy and insists on putting her sweaters in your drawer and hanging her clothes in your half of the closet. Added to the other inconveniences of the upstairs is a bathroom meant to accommodate four people, now handling six, with a hot water heater that doesn't heat enough water for two!

Out of all this you're supposed to emerge looking like Lana Turner in a sweater and skirt and flat shoes. No matter how you look at it (and you've become so critical that you examine it from all angles), your own home just isn't the attractive, convenient place it used to be.

Until children are teen-aged a home is the total responsibility of parents, but when a guy and gal reach high school age that responsibility is split up into as many parts as there are "adults" living in the house. So if your home isn't exactly as you want it to be it's partly your fault. And if you don't like it you know what you can do about it—fix it up.

Your mother's a pretty busy woman, and between keeping the house, doing war time marketing, making jelly sandwiches for Junior six times a day, she may not have time to keep your home in the strictly neat manner you think every good home should be kept. You might help (you might) by getting up 40 minutes earlier in the morning to make your own bed and straighten your own bedroom. And if you're a particularly sharp character you might even fit in time to squeeze the breakfast orange juice or do a bit of dusting in the living room.

A couple of dolls have even been known to rush home after school to take complete charge of the dinner one night a week, just to give mother a cook's night off. And to alleviate that bathroom situation, instead of grumbling in the morning while the line forms to the right you might hop out of bed just this side of sunup and be all clean and shiny before your father begins to shave or your brother Jim wants to take a quick shower.

Of course it's hard on you to lose that extra hour of duty sleep, but it will make it so much easier for the rest of the family.

If you are interested in redecorating (easy does it in war time, of course) you won't be considered selfish if you start with your own bedroom. Besides, for a beginner, your chief interest will be there, and maybe your family like their own rooms just as they are.

The first rule is always simplicity. You're not aiming for a boudoir with quilted walls and pink satin sheets, so think out a plan and make the most of what you already have. Your bedroom may need brightening—your dad or your brother might be willing to paint the walls for you—and if you don't like the finish of the furniture (and if your mother doesn't like it, either) you might persuade the painter to refinish that, too.

Your part will probably come in selecting colors, rearranging the furniture, and in sewing. Unless you're an A student in home economics you'll need your mother's help. Together you might whip up something lush in the way of matching drapes and bedspread.

To avoid that bedside sag you might buy a hassock and re-cover and cushion it in the same material. Be sure to visualize the final effect and do your redecorating slowly.

And the same improvements can be made in the whole house. Often one small change can improve a whole room. If you have suggestions, tell your mother and dad. You aren't criticizing—the house belongs to every one who lives in it, and you're all working together. A home should be fun—try to make it the place you like to live in.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

The recent interfraternity dance, the University of Chicago's first formal social function in two years, was attended by a decidedly youthful group, the majority of them students at the unique College. All of the 1,932 boys and girls now enrolled in the College will obtain their bachelor's degree by the time they are 18 or 19.

IT'S A RARE college dance these days at which one will find hundreds of young men in civilian clothes, but such was the case at the recent dance sponsored by the Interfraternity council of the University of Chicago.

The reason?

Most of the young men in tuxedos or tails were very young, students at the revolutionary and amazingly successful College of the University of Chicago, a self-contained unit within the university which takes students at 15 or 16 and makes it possible for them to earn their bachelor's degree by the time they are 18!

Two years ago this college, after long and carefully weighed effort to provide the best liberal education program it could formulate, shook the academic world by announcing that it would break with precedent by taking students who had completed their sophomore year in high school. The university was accused then of just about every sin in the academic book, from a sheer desire to be different to a snide effort to capitalize on the trend toward the much-touted "acceleration" of war time. As a matter of fact, the Chicago plan of college education had been evolved in and for peace time; that it so perfectly serves the demands of war time, when young men must work or fight when they are 18, is regarded on the Midway merely as a happy coincidence.

This year a further revolutionary step was taken. For the first time in American academic history high school credits were dropped as a basis for placing students in the College of the University of Chicago. The substitution is a battery of placement tests to determine the academic level of new students—tests that require 14 hours of concentration over a three day period and that measure general knowledge in the humanities, English, and the physical, social, and biological sciences.

Dorothea Noble, Toledo, O., and Robert Delgado, Chicago, a Sigma Chi.

With courage that is characteristic, the university headed by Dr. Robert Hutchins termed the conventional high school credit system for college entrance "a broken reed," which hardly endeared the plan farther to the old guard of the liberal arts colleges or those high school educators who were already wounded by the college's attitude toward the hitherto unchallenged acceptance of the necessity of a four year high school course. (It was also announced this fall that, regardless of their formal schooling, war veterans entering the University of Chicago would be given full recognition for their educational achievements.)

Today there are 1,932 students in the four years of the college. Four hundred of them—limited to that number because at present it is impossible to maintain for a larger number the teaching level, housing facilities, and supervision the program for 15 or 16 year olds requires—entered this fall without finishing high school. Four hundred more entered the college this year after finishing high school; they will get their bachelor's degree in two years.

It should be understood that the courses which make up the curriculum are neither "special war courses" nor condensed versions of peace time courses. They consist of a careful selection of fundamental materials in the four basic fields of liberal education in its strictest sense, the humanities and the physical, biological, and social sciences. In addition the student takes a three year course in writing. In the fewest words, the aim is to teach the student to think and to teach him how to communicate his thoughts. He does not choose an assortment of courses for himself—and comprehensive examinations rather than the conventional chalking up of credits earned in separate courses measure his eligibility for his degree.

During their first two years at the college the youthful students from outside Chicago—and students now come from every state in the Union—are carefully supervised, living and working under the guidance of heads of residence halls and faculty advisers, and all in those first two years must participate in the physical training program. During their last two years the boys and girls are under the same social regulations that prevail at the average college.

This College of the University of Chicago is the first of its kind in the country. Its plan may very well come to be generally adopted. Not because it happens to give the young man going off to war the intellectual armor of a bachelor's degree before he must take up his sword, but because, at 18, it provides him with what so many educators feel is the basic intellectual training that is the beginning of wisdom in all things, from special vocational skill he may later wish to acquire to the intelligent and good citizenship that is his certain responsibility in any capacity in a chaotic world.

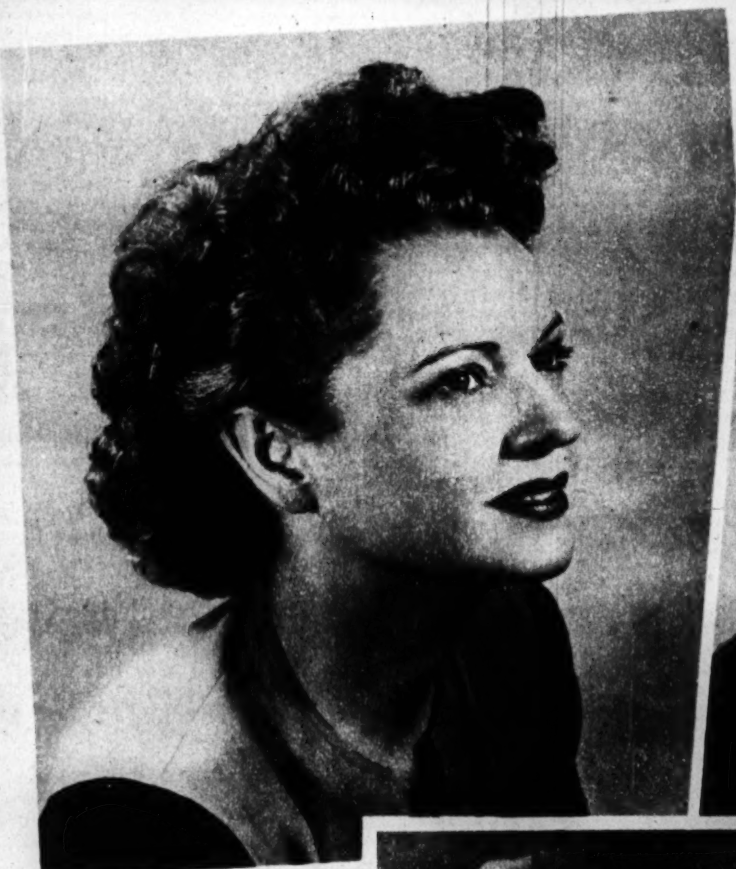
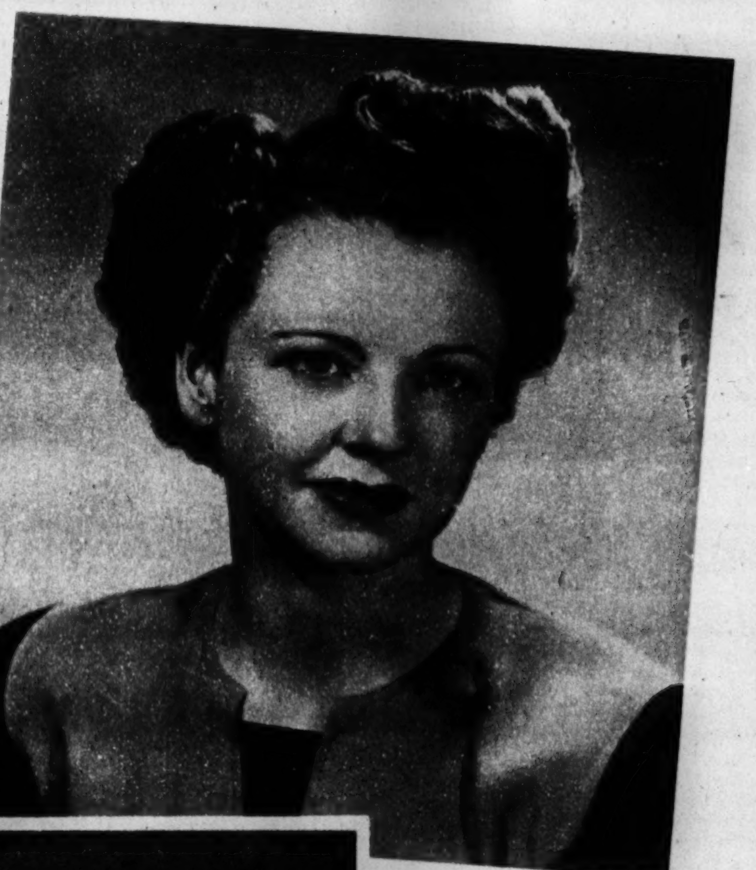
A Homemade Hair-Do for You



Actress Helen Claire shows the practical hair-do she learned to construct.



Another view of the Claire hair.

The process of assuring the proper result takes study and practice but is worth it.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"I WAS GOING to open in a new play out of town, and, as every actress knows, one of the surest ways to give yourself stage fright is to know you do not look perfection, so I made up my mind then and there to do something about it," says Stage and Radio Star Helen Claire.

And what she did about it is prophetic of one definite step in our beauty world—she enrolled in a self-service course to bone up on all the latest tricks in hair styling and makeup.

"A busy woman can't possibly put herself in the hands of professional experts for more than a few hours a week. Why ruin all your good works by being an amateur yourself in between times?" the smart girl asks.

Miss Claire believes that every one deep down feels that she knows herself better than any one else. But being able to project her best points means real training in the technique of beauty, and especially understanding hair care, she says.

"If you're going to be an expert about yourself you must be interested in research and study, whether it concerns acting or pin curls. If young girls just beginning to be conscious of their own attractiveness would tutor themselves in the showmanship of good looks, the American girl, known as the most beautiful, would also be known as the best groomed."

The self-service course in which Miss Claire enrolled insists upon the 100 brush strokes a night, but with some new twists, as, for instance, the use of two hair brushes, one for each hand, for more vigorous scalp work.

In the very first lesson the self-service course student is put thru a hair brush drill, learning once and for all how to brush for results. This is done by bending from the waist and with head hanging down and brushing the hair up and out and away from the scalp.

Helen learned how to pin-curl so that the hair looks soft and naturally curly. This takes a little practice, she found. The tricks are working with sizable partings, being sure the tip ends of the hair are caught in the curl-to-be, and putting the pins in with the curl held upright, not flat. It's this part of the service, Helen tells, that makes you feel "all thumbs and no fingers." But before long you learn how to roll a curl and how to brush it in; how to arrange the hair in one style and rearrange it from the one setting into two or three coiffures; how to put the hair up and how to wear it down.

Helen, whose piquant face is rather round and whose crisp hair is a golden blonde shade, likes to wear it beautifully unbridled and brushed all the way up, a coiffure that expresses her vital, sparkling personality. But, having learned thru her course to brush-curl her hair in and under at the sides and back for a suave, sleekly coifed effect, she wears it that way, too.

Looking at Hollywood

borly and the most alone. Recently I was sitting in a cafe, walled from the confusion briefly by a transfusion of alcohol, and a man came up and said, 'You have the face of a priest.' To reassure him I downed a most unpriestly drink and swore in a manner more becoming a seven year sailor than a churchman. My friend was much relieved. And it is too much trouble to explain the difference between thinking and sorrow, altho the two are brothers.

"I explain this to you so that if my attitude seems turning morbid you will know that is not the case. You might rather call this 'reflections on the death of a pinup girl'—for surely she was the only girl hung up, beyond the corruption of our lives, in the deepest recess of our hearts. And beyond this my mind is a ferment of searching and failing as I try like hell to recapture a faith in life long ago lost. My love, SPEC."

Following is part of Frances Slanger's open letter to Stars and Stripes, written just before the shelling began which took her life:

"For a change, we want the men to know what we think of them. . . . I'm writing this by flashlight. The G. I.'s say we rough it, but we in our little tent can't see it. We wade ankle deep in mud. You have to lie in it. We are restricted to our immediate area, a cow paasture or a hay field, but then who is not restricted? We have a stove and coal. We even have a laundry line in the tent. Our G. I. drawers are at this moment doing the dance of the pants, what with the wind howling, the tent waving precariously, the rain beating down, the guns firing. . . .

"Sure we rough it. But you, the men behind the guns, driving our tanks, flying our planes, sailing our ships, building bridges, and the men who pave the way and the men who were left behind—it is to you we doff our helmets."

Frances Slanger is buried in a military cemetery, flanked on either side by the fighting men she served.

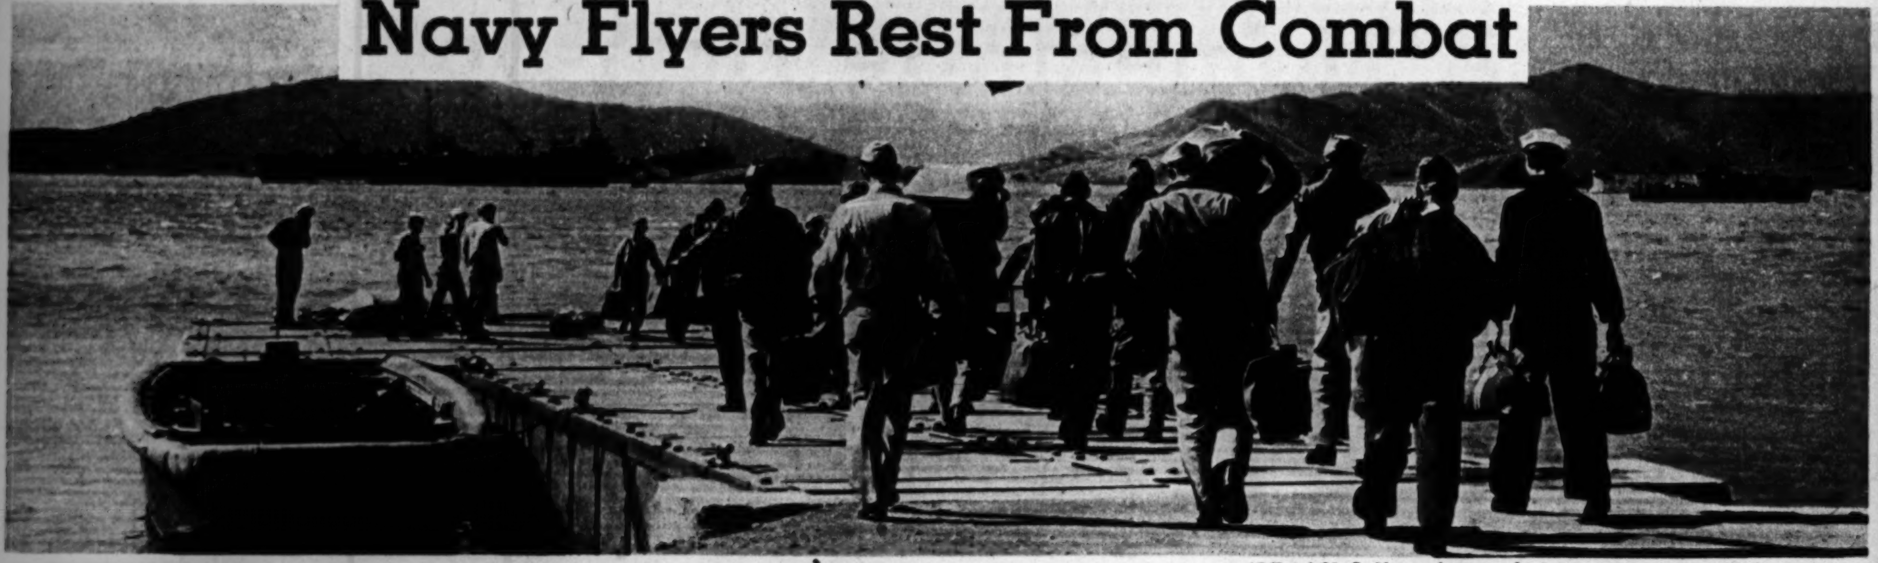
Navy Flyers Rest From Combat



(Official U. S. Navy photographs.)

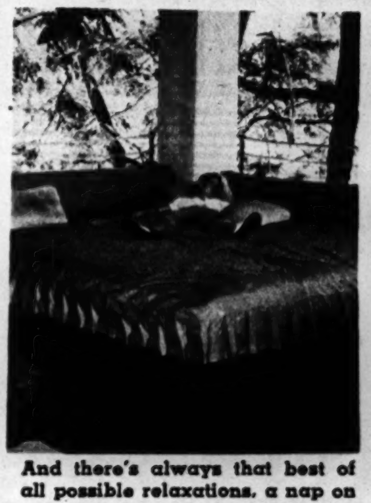
War-weary navy flyers find relaxation and recuperation in rest homes operated at very nominal cost by the American Red Cross. Here airmen jug their gear to small boats that will take them to Glen Innis, a rest home near Auckland, New Zealand.

There is another such rest spot at Honolulu—Chris Holmes home. Letter writing on the veranda is a popular pastime.

Sun baths are the order of the day at Chris Holmes home.

At left: And now and then hula dancers entertain the flyers who are guests on the islands.

Cheris Davenport, one of the Glen Innis hostesses, pours cold milk for some of the flyers.



And there's always that best of all possible relaxations, a nap on the porch in a mammoth bed.

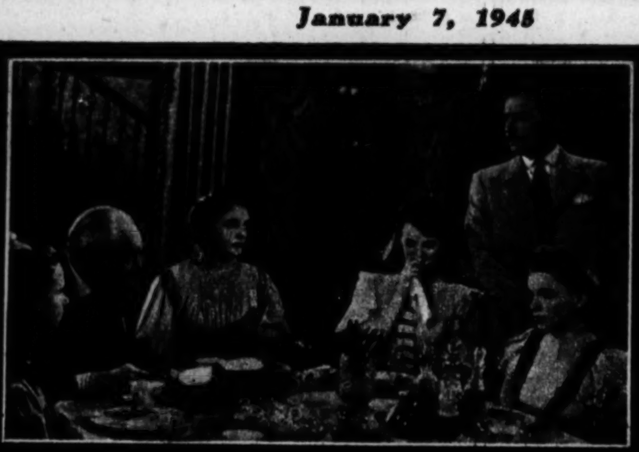
Judy Garland, Margaret O'Brien

in

"Meet Me in St. Louis"



2 At dinner that night Tootie hears her father (Leon Ames) storm over a long distance phone call her sister Rose (Lucille Bremer) received from her beau in New York. Another sister, Esther (Judy Garland), and their mother (Mary Astor) are upset.

1 It is the summer of 1903, and Tootie Smith (Margaret O'Brien) confides in the iceman (Chill Wills) her plans for the big fair next year.

5 At left: Comes Halloween, and Tootie is voted an honor—"most horrible" of the gang.

3 Esther finally meets the boy next door, John Truett (Tom Drake), and is overwhelmed to find he's coming to her party.

6 At left: Then father announces that his firm is moving to New York! All is consternation, for the Smiths don't want to leave.

4 An unexpected diversion at the party is Tootie's duet with Esther of "Ohh I like-a you, and you like-a me, under the Bamboo Tree."

7 At left: But the next day father finds a ray of sunshine, for he points out that now he'll be able to meet Rose's young man.

8 Father goes to New York, approves of the young man, but not of the business deal involving the firm. Back home the Smith family are excitedly awaiting their first trip to the great St. Louis fair.

9 Their happiness over all the grand adventures they have at the fair is doubled when father joins them and announces that he has decided not to move to New York after all.

10 For Esther especially the news is good—for John is holding her hand and now she knows that they will be able to have many happy days together. (THE END)

The Only Man I could ever Marry

He's you, my darling . . . you know that.

And I thought you were in love with someone else.

Till one day, at the office, just before you went away, I wrote some letters for you. You didn't take your eyes off my hands. I knew my hands looked nice and smooth; I've always used Jergens Lotion. I know how easily the skin loses its natural softening moisture from frequent handwashings.

"Lunch with me?" you asked, when the letters were finished. I dashed for my hat . . . and my Jergens Lotion.

And—now—my very dear, you say you want my hands in yours for always. They'll be the soft hands you love. I'm faithfully using my Jergens Lotion.

SECRETARIES TO FAMOUS MEN use Jergens Lotion, nearly 2 to 1. It's so "special" for coaxing even rough, too-old-looking skin to youth-like velvet smoothness. Jergens gives you practically professional hand care. Brings you 2 fine ingredients many doctors use for help in skin-softening. A boon to busy women—no sticky feeling. Help keep your hands adorable with Jergens Lotion.

Beginning to Bake? Nothin' Like Muffins!

Orange honey muffins are easy to make and awfully good. Add dates or currants to the recipe if you wish.

By MARY MEADE

MOST WOMEN like to make biscuits, muffins, cookies, and little cakes, baked foods that come in small packages. They're easy to mix, which may be why brides and young cooks begin their practice in food preparation with them.

Easiest of all to mix are muffins. The true muffin batter is made simply by stirring liquid into sifted dry ingredients. There's no beating to be done. Beating causes "tunnels" in muffins, except in the rich, sweet kind of muffin, which is really a cake and has to be beaten like cake.

Orange honey muffins are wonderfully good, and the recipe may be varied in several ways. A cup of whole wheat flour may replace a cup of the white flour if desired, or currants, dates, raisins, or nuts may be added.

ORANGE HONEY MUFFINS

(One dozen)

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup honey
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
1 egg, beaten
½ cup orange juice
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons melted fat

Combine dry ingredients and sift together. Add orange rind and egg to orange juice and milk. Add liquids to dry ingredients all at once. Add melted fat. Stir until blended. Batter should be lumpy. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake at 400 degrees for about 25 minutes.

Most cookie doughs start out with a mixture of fat and sugar, creamed together until thoroly blended. This cookie is different. The recipe contains no fat except that of the chopped nuts, and the sugar is blended with the eggs.

ALMOND CORN FLAKE COOKIES

(About four dozen)

3 eggs, well beaten
1½ cups sugar
1 cup chopped blanched almonds
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
¾ cup sifted flour
1 6-ounce package corn flakes
Roasted almonds

Beat sugar into eggs gradually. Add chopped almonds, salt, flavoring, and flour. Stir to blend. Add corn flakes and mix. Form in small mounds on lightly greased cookie sheets. Top each cookie with a roasted, blanched almond. Bake at 350 degrees about 12 minutes.

My department's new cookie booklet is almost ready and will be announced when copies are available. Meanwhile new and old cooks who like to experiment with biscuits, rolls, muffins, and other quick breads and yeast breads may like the collected recipes in "Better Homemade Breads and Rolls." This book is 25 cents by mail. Address orders to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

BISCOCHOS

(Mexican Tea Cakes)

1 cup margarine
1 cup honey
½ cup orange juice
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
4½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
½ cup pecans, finely ground
¼ cup granulated sugar

Cream honey and shortening. Add the well beaten egg and the orange juice. Sift flour and spices. Add dry ingredients and grated orange rind and pecans to the first mixture, mixing together well and working last part of flour in with hands if necessary. Divide dough into thirds. Roll out on well floured pastry cloth to about the thickness of pie crust. Cut out with cookie cutter or sharp knife and bake in a 425 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes. Roll while hot in granulated sugar. (These cookies keep for two weeks when stored in a waxed paper lined container. No baking powder or soda is necessary in the recipe.)—MRS. JOHN C. FLATTEN TIN CANS FOR SALVAGE

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée. My husband and a sailor mate of his have an argument they would like you to settle for them. They would like to know what year "Algiers," starring Heddy Lamarr and Charles Boyer, was released.

MRS. MARY GYARMATY.

Dear Mrs. Gyarmaty: The year was 1938.

Dear Miss Tinée: How about a little information concerning a person that isn't a star, that isn't even a well known supporting actor? The man's name is George Chandler. Recently he played the part of a cab driver in the film "Since You Went Away." I have also seen Mr. Chandler in many, many other parts which are second rate. I have often wondered why Chandler's studio hasn't recognized his ability and given him better parts. Could you please print his picture?

JAMES LYONS.

George Chandler

Dear Mr. Lyons: So very happy to print Mr. Chandler's picture, and here's some info on his life: He was born on June 30, 1908, in Waukegan, Ill., has brown hair and eyes, is 5 feet 8 inches tall. George went to local schools in Illinois and also the University of Illinois. During his school days George played in an orchestra, so upon his graduation he became a musician with Fanchon and Marco on the west coast. Later he was known as George Chandler, the Musical Nut, in vaudeville. He made his first picture in 1929, called "The Tenderfoot Thrillers."

Dear Miss Tinée: I am a girl of 13 years of age, and my mother and father always get The Tribune. I always run for the Roto Section, because I always like to see what movie star's picture you have in the paper. To get down to the point, I was wondering if you would please put pictures I will list in the paper one by one. You would be doing me a big favor, because I would like to put them in my collection, which is five years old. I will send you a list of names, and each week I would cross off the name on my list. Then when I see that there are only a few names left I would send you another list. Please make the pictures the size of the paper. The first ones I would like are Harry James, Sonja Henie, Michael O'Shea, Danny Kaye, and Loretta Young.

JOSEPHINE HOWARD.

Dear Miss Howard: Thank you for your letter, and we really would like to comply with your request, but it's quite impossible. We'd like to use pictures of all the stars if we could, and therefore as our color studio takes pictures we use them, and try not to repeat one star's picture too many times. Recently Michael O'Shea appeared on our Roto Section front page and Sonja Henie in the Drama Section. Danny Kaye will be on the Jan. 14 Roto cover: If you just keep watching those front pages I'm sure you'll find most of your favorites appearing there.

Dear Miss Tinée: If it isn't bothering you too much I would like to know if Don Ameche is related to the radio announcer, Jim Ameche. The latter seems to have the same voice as the former. It has me puzzled.

BILL MUSSELLMAN JR.

Dear Bill: It's certainly no bother at all to answer your very simple question. Yes, of course, Jim and Don are brothers, and I've got to admit that their voices sound almost identical. Perhaps you remember Jim when he was Jack in "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy" on the radio.

Dear Miss Tinée: I saw the letter from M. Fleming in your column regarding Private Kelly in "The Gang's All Here." It has been quite a while since I've seen that picture, but I believe the role was played by Dave Willock. He also played with Bob Hope in "Let's Face It" and is Tugwell on the Jack Carson radio show.

HELEN JENSEN.

Dave Willock

Dear Miss Jensen: Dave Willock did play in "The Gang's All Here," but the role he played was Sgt. Pat Casey, not Kelly. Now that we are all straight on that subject, you might like to know that Dave is a Chicago boy. He started acting when in college at the University of Wisconsin. Dave is married to Rae Butler, a Los Angeles girl, and the couple have two little girls. Here's a photograph of Dave. Don't you think he looks something like Frank Sinatra?

"A Girl can't learn about Marriage too Young!"

The younger the better, in fact—because I'm talking about a special kind of marriage that puts us hep to good baking. (And do we want to be good cooks? We're too smart and practical not to be!)

BAKING POWDER · FLOUR · SALT

AND WHAT'S THIS "MARRIAGE"? It's a mixing—but a super-mixing! Flour and baking powder and salt are cascaded through the air 75 times a minute—blended together so completely that they're "made as one." (And mixing's half the trick in successful baking.)

WHY SHOULD YOU BOTHER to drag through the old mixing and sifting routine, when our mill does all that messy work so well that if you sifted a hundred times you couldn't match the perfect marriage of ingredients you get in Presto Cake Flour?

HOW CAN YOU TELL what baking powder to use? You don't have to with Presto Cake Flour—the mill's picked a honey for you. And you know your science well enough to know that any little homemade measuring and mixing job can't be exact. But Presto's measuring and mixing are always perfect—that's its business.

WILL YOU KNOW YOUR STUFF? Watch Bill sink a tooth into that chocolate cake. Pass the muffins again (what if the boys have had four—they're light as the tail feathers of a badminton bird.) And hide your self-satisfied smirk as strong men swoon over your waffles.

TROT YOURSELF OUT to your grocer's for your Presto Cake Flour and get busy. Nine little wonder-recipes on the box will make the crowd (and your dad) goggle-eyed. Or help yourself to your mother's favorite cake flour recipes—just omit the baking powder and salt and pin your faith to Presto.

Presto is self rising

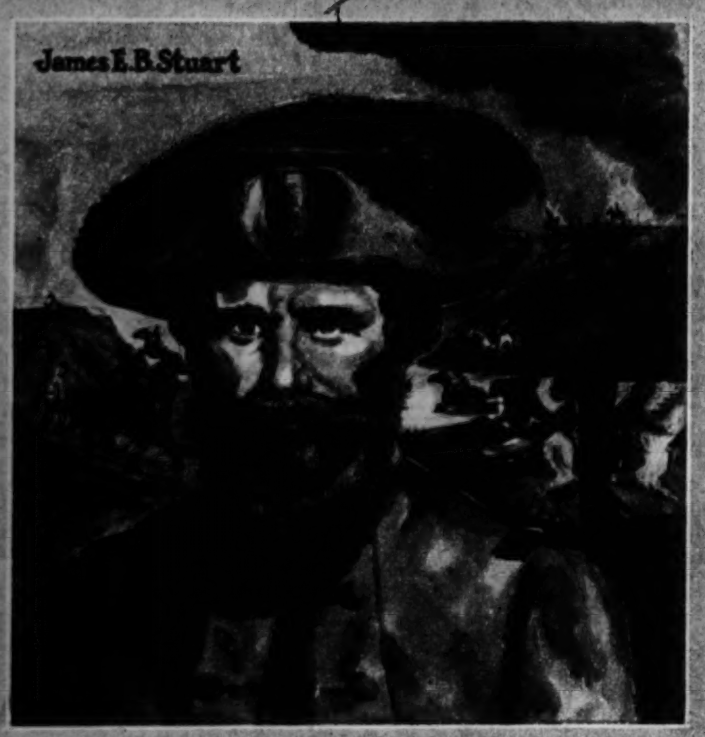
Romantic Figures of American History



The illustration above, by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches.

PHIL SHERIDAN'S Union cavalry, 12,000 strong, was riding straight for Richmond when on May 11, 1864, what was left of Lee's cavalry, 4,500 men on weak and worn-out horses, blocked the way in defense of the Confederate capital. At a place called Yellow Tavern there followed a desperate engagement which turned the Union troopers from their direct sweep on Richmond.

In the battle a dismounted Federal cavalryman shot at close range the leader of the Confederate horsemen, a picturesque figure with a peacock feather in his hat. The man thus wounded, Maj. Gen. James E. B. (Jeb) Stuart, died the next day in Richmond.

Stuart was a brilliant soldier and a spectacular fighter. He was devoutly religious, fond of music and gayety, and possessed of a flair for fine and colorful uniforms. In the south he is one of the outstanding heroes of the Civil war.

He was born in Patrick county, Va., Feb. 6, 1833, and was graduated from the military academy at West Point in the class of 1854. In the autumn of that year he was commissioned a second lieutenant, and thereafter for the most part of the next six years served with troops in Kansas, being elevated in that time, Dec. 20, 1855, to first lieutenant. Temporarily in Washington, D. C., at the time of John Brown's raid on Harpers Ferry, he was ordered to assist Lee, then a colonel, in suppressing the raiders.

When Virginia seceded from the Union, Stuart resigned his commission in the Union army and was made a lieutenant colonel of Virginia infantry. A few days later he was made a captain of cavalry of the regular Confederate army. For his distinguished service at the first battle of Bull Run and the fighting around Harpers Ferry he was promoted to brigadier general and placed in command of the cavalry brigade of the Army of Northern Virginia. Just before the Seven Days' battle he was sent out by Lee to locate the right flank of McClellan's army. He did more than this, however. He rode entirely around the whole Union army.

In the next campaign he destroyed a great quantity of stores of the Union army under General Pope. On July 25, 1862, Stuart was made a major general. He was present at the second battle of Bull Run, and during the Maryland campaign he defended Crampton's gap, a pass in the South mountains, thus permitting Lee to concentrate his forces in time to meet McClellan's attack. At Fredericksburg Stuart's cavalry rendered valuable service in checking the Union attack on Stonewall Jackson's corps, and at Chancellorsville he took command of the corps when Jackson was mortally wounded.

In the Gettysburg campaign the Confederate march to the Potomac was screened by Stuart, but at the crisis at Gettysburg he was absent on a raid, and, altho he tried to rejoin Lee during the battle, he was met and checked some miles from the battlefield.

Shortly after the opening of the 1864 campaign Stuart was drawn away from Lee's army by the Union cavalry under Sheridan. It was in these operations that he was fatally wounded in the action at Yellow Tavern.

FAYE EMERSON

PORTRAIT IN THE PICTURE SECTION

THE NEW Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt got her movie start in a typical movie story way. She had been doing a lot of little theater work when a talent scout from Warner Brothers caught her playing the role of Mary Hilliard in "Here Today," with the San Diego Community Theater Players. He went to her dressing room with an offer of a screen test, and Faye Emerson was on her way to her present position as one of the most striking of the young actresses in Hollywood. Now that she is the President's daughter-in-law, her studio is casting her in big roles—the lead in "Happiness" is the first. Faye was born in Elizabeth, La., on July 8, 1917. She has been married once before, has a 5-year-old son.

The Unpublished Facts of Life

THERE are some things that can not be generally told—things you ought to know. Great truths are dangerous to some—but factors for personal power and accomplishment in the hands of those who understand them. Behind the tales of the miracles and mysteries of the ancients, lie centuries of their secret probing into nature's laws—their amazing discoveries of the hidden processes of man's mind, and the mastery of life's problems. Once shrouded in mystery to avoid their destruction by mass fear and ignorance, these facts remain a useful heritage for the thousands of men and women who privately use them in their homes today.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS By BOB BECKER

AS SOON as wintry weather comes to the northern states, and most dog owners become less active outdoors, the family pets get less exercise in the open. Also in many homes the pet spends much of his time in a warm room, getting a new place to sleep.

The family pet sees a change also in the way he is groomed. During warm weather a pup may get a bath, and there is no need to worry about how he is dried with towels, because the temperature is high enough to take care of that. During the winter he has to be bathed and dried thoroly before he goes outdoors so he won't get chilled.

Evanger's Sylvette is the name of this 4-year-old fawn Great Dane, which was photographed at a recent dog show. It is owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bailey, Pittsburgh, Pa.

We have to watch one of our hunting dogs (a Labrador retriever) during January, February, and March, because she is inclined to put on weight as a result of less exercise and too much food. As our veterinarian says, she is a "doer," a dog that assimilates her food perfectly. We walk this dog nearly every morning before we go to work, and she is taken out several times for a romp every day. Then we take her out after dark for a run in the park. But she doesn't get as much vigorous exercise in midwinter as she is given during the hunting season, so we have to cut down her food allowance a little during the winter months.

There is no need to change the diet of any house dog in the winter. We feed our dogs the same basic foods winter and summer, the principal one being a well made dry dog food. But if an owner gives his dog less exercise it may be necessary to cut down that dog's daily ration.

One of the common dog troubles that we'll be hearing about pretty soon via letters from owners, one that comes up every winter, is this. The dog seems to be shedding all the time, altho it has no skin ailment.

In many cases the cause of this winter loss of coat is simply the fact that the animal is sleeping in a warm room at night as well as spending most of its time in the house during the day. When this happens it's quite natural for the dog to shed. That's why it's desirable for long-coated and wiry-coated dogs, or others well protected with a good growth of hair, to sleep in a cool place at night. Unless owners coddle their pets too much, most long-coated, active dogs (cockers, springers, setters, wire-haired terriers, Scotties, and similar breeds) like to get outdoors in the snow and romp around. And they will be in better health if they can sleep in a cool room at night.

If you bathe your dog in warm soapy water, which removes all the natural oil from its coat, and then keep it in a heated dry, atmosphere, the pup just has to scratch, because his skin is very dry. We keep our Labrador clean and free of odor by using cleaning preparations made especially for the dog's coat and skin.

At left: Altho classed as a nonsporting breed, the popular Boston terrier is a lively little dog, full of sport and play. This good looking 1½-year-old specimen is Our Pin Up Girl, owned by Mrs. H. C. Heitzel, Detroit, Mich. It has 11 points toward its championship.

How to fight a cold

HERE'S WHAT TO DO in addition to any temporary relief measures. These 5 steps actually help your system throw off a cold.

	5 BASIC STEPS ADVISED BY PHYSICIANS	LEMONS HELP WITH ALL 5
1	Get plenty of rest; overcome fatigue; build resistance.	Lemons are among the richest sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue and fights infection.
2	Alkalinize your system.	Lemon juice with water and baking soda forms sodium citrate, an excellent alkalinizer.
3	Insure regular elimination.	Lemon juice and water, with or without soda, is mildly laxative for most people.
4	Eat lightly. Take plenty of liquids, especially citrus juices.	Fresh lemon drinks are favorites.
5	Keep warm; avoid further chill. If cold persists, see your doctor.	Hot lemonade is almost universally prescribed.

TRY THIS NEW COLD ROUTINE WITH LEMON AND SODA

At first sign of a cold drink a glass of lemon and soda. Take another every 3 or 4 hours.

To induce perspiration, take a hot lemonade when you go to bed.

Lemon and soda forms natural sodium citrate. Supplies vitamins and all other benefits of fresh lemon juice, plus an increased alkalinizing effect. Consumed at once, soda does not appreciably reduce vitamin content.

To avoid colds build your resistance! Join the millions who now drink lemon and water daily. Juice of 1 lemon, in glass of plain water, first thing on arising.

To make lemon & soda pour juice of 1 lemon in a half glass of water. Add – slowly – half teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate). Drink as foaming quiets.

YOU, TOO, MAY LOOK FOR THESE SKIN IMPROVEMENTS IN ONLY 14 DAYS!

Less oiliness, Less dryness!

"Less oily," says Virginia Wright of New York. "Less dry!" says Nina Seamans of Minneapolis. Of the 1285 women who tested the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan, 696 had too oily or too dry skins to start, according to examining doctors. But at the end of 14 days, 566 of these women actually showed definite gains.

Finer texture, Better tone!

Sally Maddrill of Hollywood reported finer texture after trying the Palmolive Plan for just 14 days! The 36 doctors reported 63% of all the women gained better texture . . . 65% gained better tone. Reason enough for every woman who longs for a lovelier complexion to start this new proved way of using Palmolive!

Smoother! Fewer blemishes!

"Skin smoother!" reports Ruth Walters of Chicago. "Fewer blemishes!" says Dorothy Thayer of Boston. The 36 doctors found gratifying evidence of increased smoothness in almost two-thirds of the women who tested the 14-Day Palmolive Plan. And over half of the skins had fewer blemishes.

Fresher, Clearer color!

"Skin fresher!" reports Jean Woodruff of Philadelphia, listing her complexion's gains from testing the 14-Day Palmolive Plan. The 36 examining doctors report this same important improvement for 2 skins out of 3 among the 1285 women. See if this Plan won't bring you fresher skin—and in only 14 days!

DOCTORS PROVE

2 out of 3 women can have Lovelier Skin in 14 Days!

14-Day Palmolive Plan tested on 1285 women with all types of skin!

"My complexion had lost its soft, smooth look," says Catherine T. Tilton of New York, N.Y. "So I said 'yes' when I was invited to try the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan—along with 1284 other women of all ages—from fifteen to fifty! My group reported to a New York skin doctor. Some of us had dry skins; some oily; some average. After a careful examination, we were given the Palmolive Plan to use at home.

"Here's the proved Palmolive Plan:
I washed my face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap. Then—each time—for a full 60 seconds—massaged onto my skin Palmolive's lovely soft lather, as you would a cream. Then rinsed. This cleansing massage brought my skin the full, beautifying effect of Palmolive's lather. After 14 days, my doctor agreed my skin was smoother, fresher, cleaner. You must try this wonderful 14-Day Palmolive Plan for your skin!"

Local Business Man Retires Because of Lost Hearing

Edward D. Wilk, well-known sales promotional executive, was compelled to retire from an active business career because of a progressive hearing loss, and remained in retirement for some time.

Today, Mr. Wilk finds himself again an active, energetic, driving executive as of former years. Recently in a talk before a group of prominent Chicago business men, Mr. Wilk said in substance: "Through the miracle of modern science I have regained an amazing part of my life that I thought was utterly lost to me, lost to me for so long a time that I had actually forgotten how much it meant to me. You who are listening to me tonight cannot possibly imagine what a tremendous effect on one's whole well-being, on one's very personality, deafness or even a partial hearing loss can mean.

"When I realized fully that I was becoming progressively deaf, I tried everything in a frantic attempt to regain my hearing—all to no avail. People with normal hearing do not realize how easily they can offend the deafened . . . and often are unintentionally cruel, cutting short their conversation. It is then that the deafened individual usually gives up the effort to listen.

"I found myself making embarrassing or ridiculous comments because I misunderstood others, and felt that I was a kill-joy in a group. I had a tendency to back out smiling, nodding, and pretending.

"A blind person makes no pretense at seeing, yet the deaf are always pretending that they hear and usually grumble at people, saying that all people mumble. Poems and music have been written about the blind, but only 'funny' stories have been told about the deaf. I felt that I had no friend to unlock the door of escape from the soundproof cell of silence. In other words, my whole life was changing; I began to lose interest in business, friends, and even my own family.

"Then, just as I thought that everything was lost, through the help of a dear friend, science came to my assistance. My eyes widened in startled, joyful amazement, then filled with tears, for the first note of a new horizon of hearing burst on my consciousness and I realized with a sweep of emotional ecstasy that I could hear again, and was the Ed Wilk of old. With this realization came a decision to aid the many millions of those who, like myself, have been on the brink of despair, that they might rehabilitate themselves as I did and again be useful to society."

Mr. Wilk has not only regained his lost hearing, but has edited a booklet which he calls HE WHO HATH EARS LET HIM HEAR. This booklet is dedicated to the hard-of-hearing and brings them inspiration and hope. It is free; it will be sent in a plain wrapper to any one addressing E. D. Wilk, Suite 1602, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

WHY QUINTUPLETS use this great rub for SORE THROAT COUGHS due to COLDS

Wonderful for Grown-Ups, Too!

Ever since they were tiny tots—whenever the Quintuplets catch cold—their chests, throats and backs are immediately rubbed with Musterole.

Musterole gives such blessed prompt relief because it's more than just an ordinary "salve." It's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a modern counter-irritant. It not only relieves coughs, sore throat, aching chest muscles due to colds, makes breathing easier—but it actually helps break up congestion in upper bronchial tract, nose and throat.

And Musterole is so much easier to apply than a mustard plaster. White, Stainless. Just rub it on! "No fuss. No muss with Musterole!"

IN 3 STRENGTHS: Children's Mild Musterole, Regular, and Extra Strong.

...Vitamins for our family! He told me that supplementary vitamins help to guard against vitamin deficiencies that can lead to lowered resistance to colds, nervous upsets, digestive disorders, night blindness, certain infections of ears, nose, throat and sinuses—and a general run-down condition. Because daily foods may not supply sufficient vitamins, my doctor says adding supplementary vitamins to daily meals is a wise health precaution for the average family these busy days!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by MILTON CANIFF
THIS IS A RED HOT DEAL, GENTS! ESCORTING A NAVY RADIO CREW INTO INDO-CHINA UNDER LIEUT. COMMANDER PAT RYAN — WITH THE DRAGON LADY AND HER GUERRILLAS WAITING AT THE OTHER END — IT SEEMS LIKE OLD TIMES...
VER-REE INTERESTING, FRIEND TERRY... BUT HOW DID YOU GET SO COZY WITH NAVY GOLD BRAID AND A CHICKADEE WITH SUCH A RUDYARD KIPLING NAME? TELL ALL TO OL' CHAZZ!
WELL, CHARLIE, IT WAS LIKE THIS...
"PAT RYAN AND I LANDED IN CHINA TO HUNT FOR A MINE... PAT HAD BEEN THERE BEFORE, BUT I WAS STRICTLY A DODO...
"...WE NEVER QUITE GOT OUR HANDS ON THE MINE, BUT WE DID RUN INTO A FABULOUS GAL WHO LED A BUNCH OF PIRATES OPERATING ALONG THE CHINA COAST...
"...THIS WOMAN WAS EURASIAN, BEAUTIFUL AND TOUGH AS A HASH-HEAVY TOP SERGEANT... SHE TREATED ME AS IF I WERE TRYING TO BORROW MONEY — BUT SHE TOOK ONE LOOK AT PAT RYAN AND THE AVERAGE MEAN TEMPERATURE FOR THE AREA ROSE SEVERAL DEGREES...
"...THE DRAGON LADY WAS AS TRICKY AS A PAIR OF LOADED DICE ON PAYDAY UNTIL THE JAPS MOVED INTO CHINA — THEN SHE THREW ALL HER SKILL INTO THE WAR AND TURNED HER CUNNING ON THE NIPPOS...
"...AFTER DECEMBER 7, 1941, WE WERE SEPARATED AND I WENT INTO FLIGHT TRAINING, BUT I HEARD THAT PAT HAD JOINED THE NAVY AND THE DRAGON LADY WAS USING HER PIRATE'S KNOWLEDGE OF THE CHINA COAST TO HARASS THE JAPS AT MANY POINTS..."
...SO, YOU GUYS CAN SEE THE LOGIC OF SENDING PAT RYAN, WITH HIS GRASP OF THE LOCAL SCENE, TO JOIN FORCES WITH THE DRAGON LADY AND HER PEOPLE!
THAT I CAN, FRIEND TERRY, BUT THERE IS ONE DANGER IN ALL THIS!
LIEUT. COMMANDER RYAN WILL EXPECT THIS DRAGON LADY TO BE CORDIAL TO HIM — AND WHEN SHE SEES OL' HOTSHOT CHARLES CHARLES FROM BOSTON SHE WILL, OF COURSE, SWOON — AND FORGET WE HAVE A NAVY!
HMMM... I HADN'T THOUGHT OF THAT...
PAT RYAN IS A SMART JOE! — I'M SURE IF YOU POINTED THAT OUT TO HIM HE WOULD TURN COMMAND OF THE MISSION OVER TO YOU SO HE WOULDN'T BE HUMILIATED!
NO — HE MIGHT BE HURT... I'LL JUST CABLE THE NAVY DEPARTMENT TO RELIEVE HIM! — THEN HE WILL NEVER KNOW!
HEY, DENNY, WILL YOU ORDER NEW PIPES FOR TERRY AND HOTSHOT CHARLIE? THE SERVICE IN THIS OPIUM JOINT IS GETTING LOUSY!

BUT YOU CAN'T GO UP THERE, TRACY, UNTIL THE FLAMES ARE UNDER CONTROL! YOU'D BURN TO DEATH IN A MINUTE.
I NO SOONER PHONED YOU FROM THE CALL BOX THAN THIS PLACE WAS UP IN FLAMES.
REMAINS OF VITAMIN'S COAT
RYAN WENT UP THE BACK WAY WITH AN AXE — HE SHOULD BE DOWN BY NOW, CHIEF.
ONE OF 'EM JUMPED, TRACY. HE MUST HAVE GOT PANICKY. — BROKE EVERY BONE IN HIS BODY. HE DIED INSTANTLY.
OKAY, FIREMAN. IT WAS EITHER ME OR YOU. AND SHAKY ISN'T WALKING INTO STIR — YET.
IF ONLY THAT BURNING COAT HADN'T SET OFF THE CURTAINS.
THERE COMES RYAN.
I WANT TO TALK TO THAT FIREMAN TO FIND OUT IF ANYONE'S UP THERE.
HEY, RYAN!
THE SMOKE MUST HAVE DRIVEN HIM NUTS.
LOOK! HE'S STUMBLING.
HEY! THAT'S SHAKY!
WHAT? — AND HE'S DRAWING HIS GUN. GOING TO FIRE INTO THE CROWD.
WAIT, WE'LL FEED HIM THIS 200 LB. STREAM OF WATER. THAT'LL STOP HIS SHOOTING.
THE GUN FLIES FROM SHAKY'S HAND — HE'S HURLED AGAINST A NEARBY CAR.
THIS CAR'S MOTOR IS RUNNING. I SAW THE EXHAUST FUMES.
HE CLIMBED INTO THE FIRE CHIEF'S CAR.
LOOK AT HIM SKID ON THAT ICE.
PLAY THAT STREAM ON THE REAR OF HIS CAR. WE'LL SKID HIM INTO THE BRICK WALL.

Treat the Children to the

"Happy Medium" Laxative

Ex-Lax is effective, but effective in a gentle way. Unlike harsh, bad-tasting laxatives . . .

—It's not too strong!

Ex-Lax can be given to the children with complete confidence. Although it looks and tastes like fine chocolate, its action is thorough and dependable.

—It's not too mild!

Ex-Lax is one laxative that avoids extremes. In other words . . .

—It's the Happy Medium!

As a precaution use only as directed.

AS GOOD FOR GROWN-UPS AS IT IS FOR CHILDREN

INTO A SAUCEPAN

IT was cold and frosty outside and most of the Teenie Weenies were contented to keep close to the Teenie Weenie fireplace. It was tiresome for the Dunce for he liked to be busy and just sitting around didn't suit him. He teased the Lady of Fashion until that little person threatened to jab him with the Teenie Weenie darning needle with which she was mending Teenie Weenie stockings. The Dunce strolled out into the Teenie Weenie kitchen where the Cook and Gogo were finishing with the luncheon dishes. "Come on and let's go over to the shop and see what the Turk is doing," he said.

The Cook and Gogo put away the last of the Teenie Weenie dishes and followed the Dunce to the coffee can which the little men used for a work shop. They found the Turk hammering the kinks out of a woman's hairpin. He was making some curtain rods for the Teenie Weenie dining room windows and the Dunce, the Cook, and Gogo stood around and watched him work for a few minutes. Finally the Dunce became restless and he suggested they go to one of the big houses in the lane. "Maybe we can find something to eat there," he argued.

Teenie Weenies love to visit big folks' houses and the Cook and Gogo followed the Dunce to a house near the Teenie Weenie village. They investigated everything in the kitchen and finally they crawled up onto a table, where they found a stewing pan, a paring knife, and a box of safety matches.

"Say!" exclaimed the Dunce, who had touched the side of the pan. "There's something warm in this pan. I'm going to find out what it is."

The Dunce dragged the box of safety matches to the side of the pan and pulled himself up onto the edge of the pan.

"Say! Jimminie Crooks!" exclaimed the Dunce after he had leaned down and felt the contents of the pan. "There's warm water in here and it's just right for swimming."

Swimming is a favorite sport with the Teenie Weenies and in a jiffy the little chaps pulled off their clothes and dived into the pan. In his excitement the Dunce forgot to take off his hat. It came off when he dived in, sank to the bottom of the pan, and he had to dive a number of times before he recovered it.

The house was warm and no one was at home, so the little men spent the rest of the afternoon diving and swimming in the pan for it is mighty seldom that Teenie Weenies have a chance to go swimming in the wintertime.

Howdy, stranger — walk right in — this is Honest John Calhoun's — where man or woman — we know better than to question you too much about your past! But we can guarantee you the most glittering evening under the brilliant Northern Lights!

Just looking? Why not — that's Gypsy Rose Lee and her 24-karat belles! Gypsy is in love with Honest John (Randolph Scott) from way back in the "States" — when he left her cold with a hot diamond bracelet! Gypsy has a score to even — but her heart's not in it! She's still all for John!

That's not the only romance going on during those long, northern nights! Singing Dinah Shore is singing her love songs to William Marshall who plays the piano at Honest John's—but has played fast and loose in the U.S.A. He's wanted by Dinah — who thinks he's wanted by the police.

When nothing else happens, they bet on the freeze up there. And, of all things, the Alaskan forty-niners select Honest John to hold the stakes! It's real gold — and a big temptation for someone! Gypsy is panicked! Bob Burns is there to panic with his gold-bricking, too!

While you guess what's going to happen next — take a look at those girls! Zero is their boiling point as they dance in beautiful, blushing Technicolor.

Now comes a triple cross — with everyone out after the gold — and Honest John almost certain to get those straight-shooting bullets they pack up there! The Town Marshal (Big Boy Guinn) finds out that even the law can't win easily in a tough joint like this one.

We won't tell you how — but everything comes out two and two in the end. With lovely Gypsy and her John — and siren-voiced Dinah and her Steve! There's never a dull moment — or a safe one — with such brave, bad men and such beautiful girls all around! It's a golden show!

Don't miss your Golden Opportunity to see the Biggest fun-for-all musical show ever!

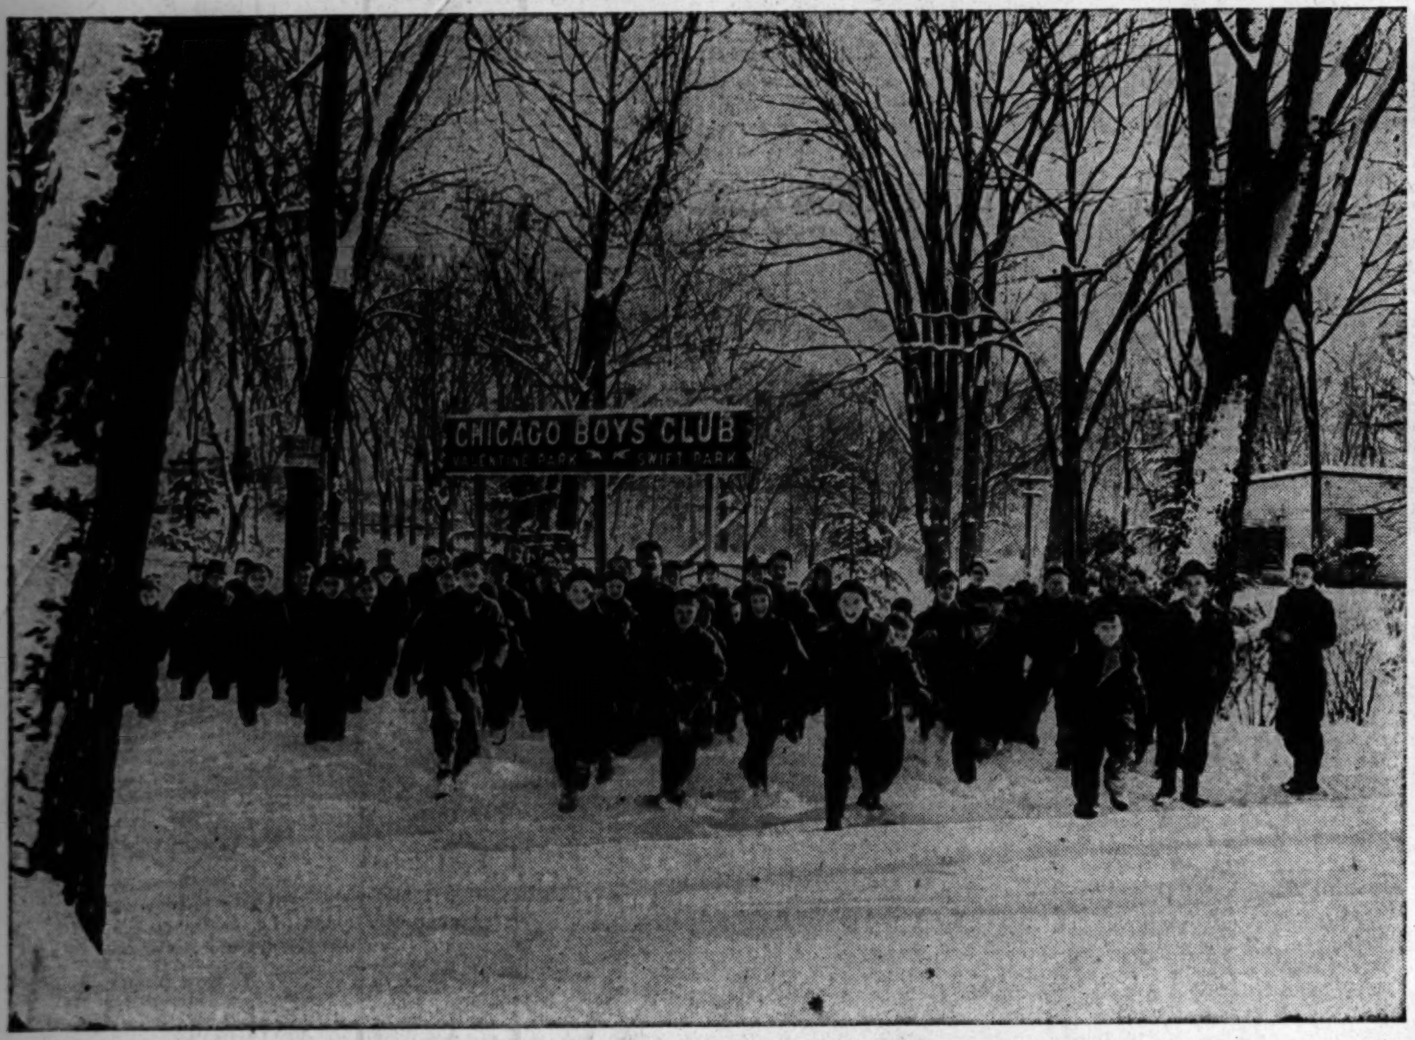
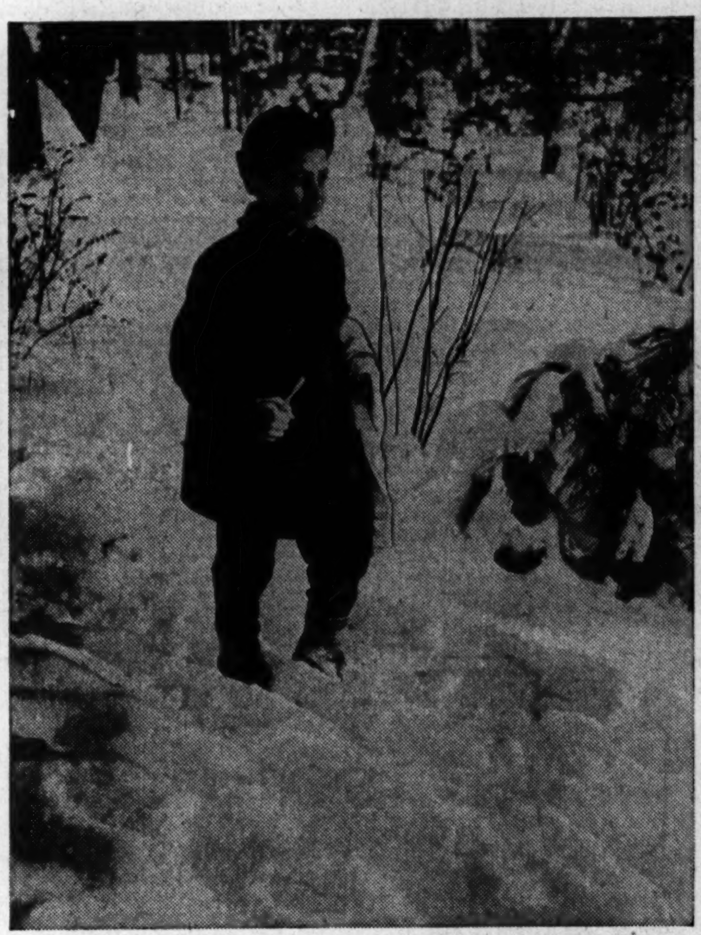
Knee-Deep Snow at Winter Camp Keeps Chicago Boys' Club Members Active



Tucked in by a knee-deep blanket of snow, 52 boys from 10 to 16, from all parts of Chicago bedded down the day after Christmas for a five day stay at Winona lake, Warsaw, Ind. For some it was the first opportunity to trade the soot packed snow of Chicago's streets for the fluffy drifts of open country. The boys were paying guests (some gave a dollar, some more) of the Chicago Boys' clubs at Swift park.

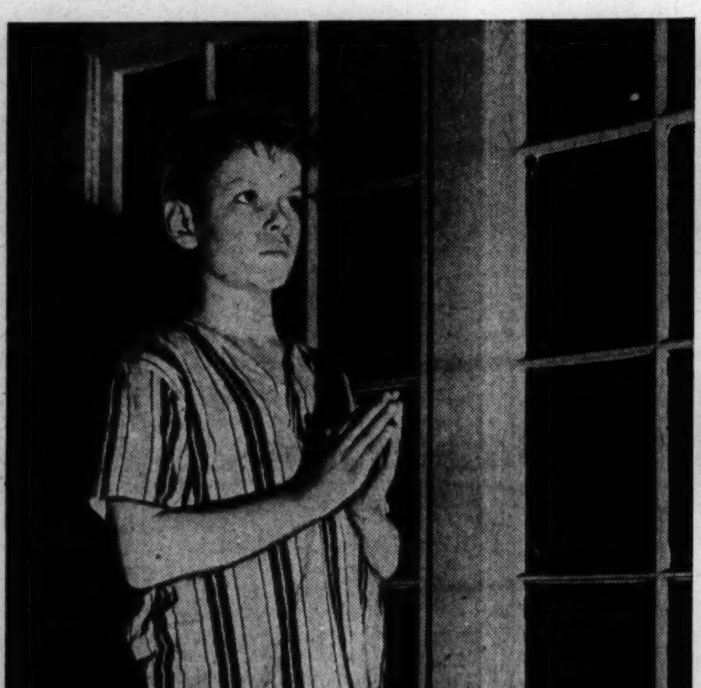
Relishing his introduction to plenty of fresh snow, Robert Pauss, 3035 Southport av., headed for the ski trail as soon as a special coach unloaded the boys at the camp. Skis were a new experience for most of the youngsters, but they soon learned to use them.

The rolling shore of Winona lake is suited to tobogganing as well as skiing. Members of the Sheffield club, accompanied by Harry Clark, manager of the Lincoln club, head for the slide and a possible spill in the snow. Left to right are John Pauss, 3035 Southport av.; Dick Whittington, 1341 Nelson st.; Clark, and Ronald Hunsinger, 875 Nelson st.



It was a period of real roughing it for the boys who did nothing indoors but eat, sleep, and dry out. Paul Schneider, 2875 Clark st., trudges to the spring to bush his teeth and give his face and hands a quick going over.

All was not play at the camp, for cords of wood were needed to keep a roaring fire in the fireplace of the dormitory. Saw on shoulder, Ed Rouzan, 1713 Orchard st., heads for a rendezvous with a fallen tree.



Night came too soon for these neophyte woodsmen, but when it came Louis Bennett, 4626 Magnolia av., knelt in prayer before diving beneath two heavy blankets.

Norman H. Cook, Boys' club camp director and part of the organization for 27 years, stops at one of seven continuously flowing spring fed fountains on the camp grounds. The temperature of the water spouting from the fountain is constant thruout the year and there is no danger of freezing.

Another Boys' club camp veteran is R. Morgan Tucker, who has served thousands of youths as chef at summer and winter periods for 25 years. More than 2,000 Chicago youngsters attend the camp each summer.

Nancy Reid, 1117 Forest av., Evanston, an art student, has painted several self-portraits, but it was a photograph which she had sent to Lt. John Glendinning of New York, confined in a German prisoner of war camp in Poland, which won her first beauty contest.

The unusual competition was sponsored by the Item, a publication by the prisoners. Entries were made by all 1,000 inmates who nominated their wives, sisters, and sweethearts.

News Cabled Via Stockholm.

News of her conquest was telephoned to Nancy by Norman J. Weston, general secretary of the Evanston Y. M. C. A. He had received the report, which was cabled by two neutral representatives from Stockholm, Sweden, to the Chicago Y. M. C. A. offices of the War Prisoners' relief.

Nancy admitted being "quite surprised at the honor; in fact, I didn't believe a word of it at first." She laughed. "When Mr. Weston asked for my picture for forwarding to the New York headquarters of the Y. M. C. A. I kept wondering who it was I had refused a picture who would stoop to such a gag to get it. He finally convinced me and I sent him a photograph."

Wins First Contest.

This is the first contest Nancy Reid ever has won, perhaps because it is the only one in which she has ever been entered.

Lt. Glendinning and Nancy were schoolmates at Rollins college, Winter Park, Fla., two years ago. Jack left to enter service and Nancy came home to enroll at the Art institute, where she is in her second year as a liberal arts student. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Reid, reside at the Evanston address.

B'nai Zion Women.

The last of the series of musical and literary educational programs will be given by the Sisterhood of B'nai Zion, 1447 Pratt blvd., at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Louis Zara, author, will speak on "Destiny Spins a Plot."

SON IN INDIA LAUDS HIS MOTHER'S WORK IN RED CROSS CORPS

Applauding his mother's work with the Red Cross, Corp. George Pappas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Pappas, 425 Oakdale av., recently wrote her to "keep those bandages rolling double time. Tho you may not realize it, you're a soldier, too, and the supplies you make are sorely needed by the men overseas."

Corp. George Pappas.

Recounting the work of the Red Cross in India, where he has been stationed almost two years, Pappas wrote: "They maintain a rest center for us, entertain us, feed us, keep us cheerful. But best of all, they help our morale. When we return from an assignment the Red Cross is on hand with coffee and doughnuts. But the fellows fall in line, not for food, but just to see the girl in the Red Cross uniform."

Pappas is a graduate of Waller High school, and attended the Art institute. He was production manager for the Tempo Art studio befor entering the army in February, 1942.

East Lakeview Is High in Area.

Topping the 6th war loan drive with the largest orders in Chicago, OCD division 6 disclosed a total of $14,937,841 or 149 per cent of the division's $10,000,000 quota was subscribed by north side residents.

The canvass, covering 108,126 of the estimated 178,280 families in the district, was the most successful of any house to house campaign. Lack of complete coverage was due to inability to secure a greater number of volunteer workers. The average pledge amounted to $138.

East Lake View Leads.

Lee Ross, OCD director of division 6, said the leading community of division 6 and of the entire city was east Lake View with a total of $4,577,054 subscribed, which was 378.5 per cent of the $1,310,000 quota. Harry J. Pinter is community commander and Robert Rimmel, war bond chairman. The percentage of homes enrolled was 85.2 per cent.

Next in percentages was the Uptown-Clark community with a total of $589,480 or 214 per cent of quota, and with a coverage of more than 95 per cent of families. A. C. Jeppe is commander and Walter A Grau bond chairman.

Central Uptown Goes Over.

In third place was central Uptown with 205 per cent of quota, and a coverage of 95 per cent of families. The quota was $825,000. Wade Franklin is commander, and Walt R. Rendall bond chairman.

CATHEDRAL BOOK CLUB EXPLORES AUTHORS' MINDS

Why? And How? Eternal Queries of 1,200.

More than 1,200 members of the Cathedral Book club meet monthly at Holy Name cathedral to hear book reviews, discuss current publications, and probe to the core of things.

Even the club newspaper is called The Inside Story, not, as the Rev. Emmett Regan pointed out with a chuckle, because it is sensational or slightly undercover, but because its many book reviews give the stories inside books.

And so far as is possible, authors are invited to speak before the club on the stories behind their novels and not on the novels themselves. "Often people are interested more in how an author happened to write than in the writing itself," said Father Regan, assistant pastor of the cathedral and director of the club since 1940.

Poetry Discussion Failed.

Purpose of the organization is to encourage interest in worthwhile literature and to teach judgment of a book's morality, Father Regan said. The next gathering will be at 8:30 p. m. Jan. 17. Meetings seldom are arranged more than two weeks in advance so as to keep the programs up to the minute.

"We stick to one specific publication and veer the discussion from books as a group. Once we attempted to have a talk on poetry but it was unsuccessful because the subject was too general," the priest said. After their lectures, speakers answer questions from the floor, a practice which stimulates interest in the meetings and occasionally leads to lively discussion of social and economic problems.

Club dues of $1 a year entitle members to use the 3,500 volume club library at 3 E. Chicago av., and to the newspaper. To aid readers in choosing books, The Inside Story publishes a reading list separating books into three groups, unobjectionable, unobjectionable for adults, and wholly objectionable. Father Regan compiles the list with suggestions from club members and public librarians.

Founded in 1936.

The club was organized in 1936 by the Rev. Joseph Wagner to promote the reading of Catholic books. When Father Regan assumed leadership in 1940 he gave attention to reviews of current secular as well as religious books.

Now the group is reputedly the largest Catholic book club west of New York. About 1,200 persons attended the program last June when world peace was discussed, and so many teen-agers attended the autographing parties for Maureen Daly, columnist of THE TRIBUNE after her book, "Smarter and Smoother," was published that the meetings could not be held in the cathedral.

PARISHES TO PAY HONOR TO ARMY AT SUNDAY MASS

A military mass honoring 1,300 members of Evanston Catholic parishes now in service will be said at 8 a. m. next Sunday in St. Athanasius church, Lincoln st. and Ashland av. Servers will be men on furlough.

Following the mass, Bishop Magner will speak at a breakfast in Haven school. Service men, escorted by a platoon of policemen and firemen and preceded by the drum and bugle corps of the Evanston American Legion post, will march from the church to the school.

Committee Plans Mass.

Aiding in plans for the mass, which is the annual All-Evanston Holy Name rally, are Joseph P. Baldez, president of the St. Athanasius Holy Name society, and Bernard J. Nellessen, M. F. McCarty, and John A. Maloney, district officials of the Holy Name society of the Chicago archdiocese.

EX-SERVICE MEN GETTING CHOICE CALLS IN RADIO

Answer Man's Daughter Joins Kyser.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Several ex-service men are getting good breaks in radio and that's a break for fans, too. Bob Graham, now the featured singer on Duffy's Tavern, was "discovered" while in the army. He was singing while on K. P. duty. A sergeant who overheard him told him to keep it up [something sergeants traditionally wouldn't be expected to do].

Dolly Mitchell.

"One of these days," said the sergeant, "somebody will hear you." That "somebody" turned out to be Capt. Glenn Miller, former orchestra leader who was recently reported missing in the European theater. Miller picked Graham to sing with his army band while at Scott field, Ill. He had not sung professionally before. After he was honorably discharged he was brought to the attention of Boss Ed Gardner of Duffy's—and hired.

Benny Grabs Stevens.

Larry Stevens, who was honorably discharged from the army last year and then got a job in a war plant, bought a war bond one evening which entitled him to a chance to sing with Freddy Martin's orchestra. Later Mary Livingstone heard him. Her husband, Jack Benny was overseas at the time but when he returned he concurred in Mary's judgment that Stevens would make a good replacement for Dennis Day, now an ensign in the navy.

Al Helfer, former W-G-N-Mutual sports announcer, recently discharged as a lieutenant commander in the navy after participation in the African and Italian campaigns, was waiting in a New York office for an audition when he was spotted by a 20th Century-Fox talent scout. SHALL WE BUILD WITH NO CELLAR? THAT'S QUESTION

Home Owners Will Study Problem Carefully.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

After the war the question of whether to have a basement in your new home will come to the fore. While basements are not absolutely necessary, this is a problem which should be considered from a number of angles.

There always is the question of storage space and most families want plenty of utility space. Of course a separate utility room for laundry and heating equipment and space for trunks and furniture and garden tools can be built without great expense.

Wants Workshop.

Then, too, many home owners want space for some sort of shop, especially if the man of the house likes to work around the place.

If a considerable amount of storage space is provided above ground the house will have to spread horizontally, which means more foundation and roof, and less space for gardening. All this will cut into the money saved by eliminating the basement.

Some four years ago the trend to houses without basements was established. Reports from FHA's field insuring offices showed that more than 30 per cent of our houses were being built without basements and 14 per cent were built with only partial basements. Most of these houses were one story houses.

Many One Story Houses.

This trend toward the basementless house, noticeable at the outbreak of the war, is due in part because of the desire for one story houses. Then, too, most of the demountable houses in the pre-fabrication field were basementless and one story.

Even our heating systems had begun to be influenced by the decreasing cellar. New units, small in size, were manufactured which could be placed at room level and which worked on the principle of forced circulation.

Lack Storage Space.

In addition to the fact that the basementless house did lack the storage space provided by a cellar, there was another point which many people complained of: That the "floors are cold and the house is damp."

It is claimed by advocates of the basementless house that this does not need to be the case and that such a house can be quite as livable as a house with a basement if proper building methods and adequate insulation is employed. Various types of construction are being studied now. After the war there may be solutions which will eliminate many previous difficulties with basementless housing.

WAR JOB WITH POSTWAR FUTURE

Get Into Aviation. Good Pay—Steady Work
Act Now Before It's Too Late

After the war, aviation will be one of the major industries in the Chicago area. Airlines, aircargo carriers, maintenance and operations shops, and aircraft plants will have good jobs for workers who are properly trained. Prepare for your career in aviation NOW by working in the Chicago plant of Douglas Aircraft Company. No "cutbacks" or "layoffs" in sight here. Douglas employes will work at full capacity building vitally needed military transport planes until Japan is defeated. Then they will build planes for the airlines on orders already booked this far ahead.

You can get expert training here in aircraft skills that could well qualify you for profitable employment building peacetime airplanes or in the huge maintenance and operations plants which the airlines and aircargo enterprises will set up all over the country after the war. And you can be trained in working with the lighter metals such as aluminum and magnesium which will be used in the manufacture of so many postwar consumer goods.

Meanwhile you will be well paid for enjoyable work. Experienced or inexperienced . . . we train you so that you are bound to make good in fabrication, shop, assembly and installation work . . . what we term "beating on the airplanes." As interesting work as you'll ever find.

If you want to serve your country, learn a new business, make good money and really enjoy your job, don't delay. If not already engaged in essential industry, come to

One toboggan run led to another as 52 boys from all parts of the city shared a winter romp at the Chicago Boys' club camp at Winona lake, Warsaw, Ind., during the week following Christmas. Members of the Woodlawn club are starting the trek back up the hill after an uninterrupted trip down. Left to right are Gerald Hanna, Gary Painter, Sid Weiss, Don Mellendorf, and Glenn Brown, counselor for the Woodlawn group.

Clark Painter, 1527 E. 54th st., trudges to the spring for a morning wash. The boys, all between 10 to 16, went indoors only to sleep, eat, and dry out.

Twenty inches of snow and temperatures that froze the surface of the 110 foot deep lake delighted skaters like Clarence Brooks (left), 6644 Maryland av. The boys divided into groups to share the responsibility of providing camping necessities and tidying up. Drawing the task of keeping a supply of wood on hand for the blaze which constantly burned in the dormitory fireplace were Bill Brooks, 6651 Maryland av. and Bill Brennan, 6618 Maryland av.

He served in the marines for four years before entering the army in 1941. His wife, Lillian, lives at the Houston av. address.

Takes Bullet in Chest.

The last thing Marine Pvt. Smith remembers of Saipan is coming upon a clump of bushes which was alive with Japs. About that time he was put out of action by a bullet in his chest. Veteran of Tarawa, he declined to say which was the worst. "They were both tough," he declared. Now convalescing at the naval hospital at San Diego, Cal., he holds a Presidential unit citation. His mother, Mrs. Agnes Smith, lives at the Kimbark av. address.

Pvt. Walker was pinned down by enemy fire in North Burma while attacking a pillbox when a knee mortar shell exploded near-by, wounding him in the back. He has been fighting for more than seven months in that theater where jungles, mud, and insects are second in annoyance only to Japs. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Walker, Gary, Ind., he has been in service almost two years.

13 ENTER RACES FOR ALDERMAN IN 6TH AND 10TH

Special Elections Set for Feb. 5.

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Thirteen candidates who seek aldermanic posts in the elections to be held Feb. 5 in the 6th and 10th wards had filed qualifying petitions with the board of election commissioners when the filing deadline was reached last Tuesday. Candidates have until Jan. 18 to withdraw. The deadline for filing objections to petitions is tomorrow.

In the 10th ward eight aspirants seek the council seat made vacant by the death of Ald. Pieczynski. One of the first to file was Emil V. Pacini, 8607 Phillips av., a construction engineer, former automobile race driver, and a veteran of World War I. He is secretary of the 10th ward Democratic organization and claims majority support of that group.

Republican Attorney Files.

The only avowed Republican to file is Atty. Alfred O'Connor, 9729 Avenue J. O'Connor has been a candidate twice and narrowly missed election both in 1923 and 1927. He calls the support of any nonpartisan groups as well as some Democratic support from those who have broken with the regulars.

Other candidates in the 10th ward are Max A. Pieczynski, 8755 Saginaw av., a tavern owner and nephew of the late alderman; Frank A. Sowa, 13412 Brandon av., a deputy clerk of the Superior court; Albert B. Creswell, 8843 Dante av., a former county highway policeman and now a Municipal court clerk; Joseph M. Wisniewski, 8554 Muskegon av., an undertaker; John M. Szymanski, 8724 Muskegon av., commander of the South Shore American Legion post, and Stanley A. Baczynski, 10628 State Line av., a brother-in-law of the late alderman and a steel company employe.

5 File in 6th Ward.

In the 6th ward five candidates have filed for the place made vacant by the death of Ald Patrick Sheridan Smith. George C. Johnson, 6600 Ellis av., son-in-law of the late alderman and is secretary of the ward Republican organization is considered the favorite. He is an employe of the board of election commissioners.

Other 6th ward candidates Francis J. Hogan, 7014 Vernon av., who claims the support of the regular Democrats; Peter J. West, 818 E. 67th st.; Austin J. Barlow, 6611 Greenwood av., and Woodrow Wilson, 6653 Ingleside av., a 27 year old war veteran who was honorably discharged from the army Nov. 3 after four years service. Wilson is now a war plant employe. He is a graduate of Wadsworth elementary school and Hyde Park High school.

Although aldermanic elections are non-portisan legally all concerned admit that the aid of a ward organization of either party goes far to assure election.

A supplementary election will be had March 5 in case no candidate gets a majority of the votes cast on Feb. 5.

Y IN HYDE PARK SEEKS $20,000 IN FUND DRIVE

A minimum goal of $20,000 has been set by the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. whose annual finance campaign will end Jan. 19. Dr. C. O. Molander, 9137 Morgan st., who has directed the campaign during the last three years, is campaign chairman. Co-chairman is Willis Van Pelt, 4829 Dorchester av.

Altho 95 per cent of the program's activities are self-sustaining, 5 per cent of the budget must be provided thru voluntary contributions. The proceeds will be used to subsidize the boys and girls' program in the building and neighborhood clubs and playground activities. Plans are being developed to expand Y activities in Oakland, Kenwood, Hyde Park, and Woodlawn communities.

Approximately 2,500 boys and girls participated in Y activities last year. Service men's activities showed a 60 per cent increase over 1943, with nearly 2,500 men in uniform using the Y's facilities free of charge each month. Special rates are given sons and daughters of men in service, while those honorably discharged from service receive a 90 days free membership upon application.

Risks His Life to Save Men Cut Off; Wins Star

The silver star has been awarded Tech. Sgt. Frank R. Januchowski, son of Mrs. Bernice Januchowski, 9356 Manistee av., for gallantry in action with the 5th army in Italy. A squad leader, Januchowski exposed himself to engage, with his submachine gun, an enemy force which had cut off two rifle platoons and a machine gun section. His fire disorganized the Germans and forced them to divert their attention from the trapped units, enabling them to withdraw safely to rejoin the company.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Dolly Mitchell.

Several ex-service men are getting good breaks in radio and that's a break for fans, too. Bob Graham, now the featured singer on Duffy's Tavern, was "discovered" while in the army. He was singing while on K. P. duty. A sergeant who overheard him told him to keep it up [something sergeants traditionally wouldn't be expected to do].

"One of these days," said the sergeant, "somebody will hear you." That "somebody" turned out to be Capt. Glenn Miller, former orchestra leader who was recently reported missing in the European theater. Miller picked Graham to sing with his army band while at Scott field, Ill, He had not sung professionally before. After he was honorably discharged he was brought to the attention of Boss Ed Gardner of Duffy's—and hired.

Benny Grabs Stevens.

Larry Stevens, who was honorably discharged from the army last year and then got a job in a war plant, bought a war bond one evening which entitled him to a chance to sing with Freddy Martin's orchestra. Later Mary Livingstone heard him. Her husband, Jack Benny was overseas at the time but when he returned he concurred in Mary's judgment that Stevens would make a good replacement for Dennis Day, now an ensign in the navy.

Al Helfer, former W-G-N-Mutual sports announcer, recently discharged as a lieutenant commander in the navy after participation in the African and Italian campaigns, was waiting in a New York office for an audition when he was spotted by a 20th Century-Fox talent scout. Result: a techni-color screen test and a contract in Hollywood.

Kyser's New Songstress.

That new songstress on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge you've been hearing for several weeks is a Chicago girl—Dolly Mitchell. Proudest papa in the city is Al Mitchell, the Answer man of W-G-N, her father.

One Man's Family, a fixture on NBC longer than Roosevelt has been President, will move to the Blue network on Tuesday, Jan. 30. Eddie Bracken of the movies will head a new comedy show as a replacement Sunday nights on NBC.

Art Linkletter who conducts the NBC quiz, People Are Funny, will introduce a new five a week series Jan. 15 on CBS titled, House Party. Quiz and stunt ideas will be mixed.

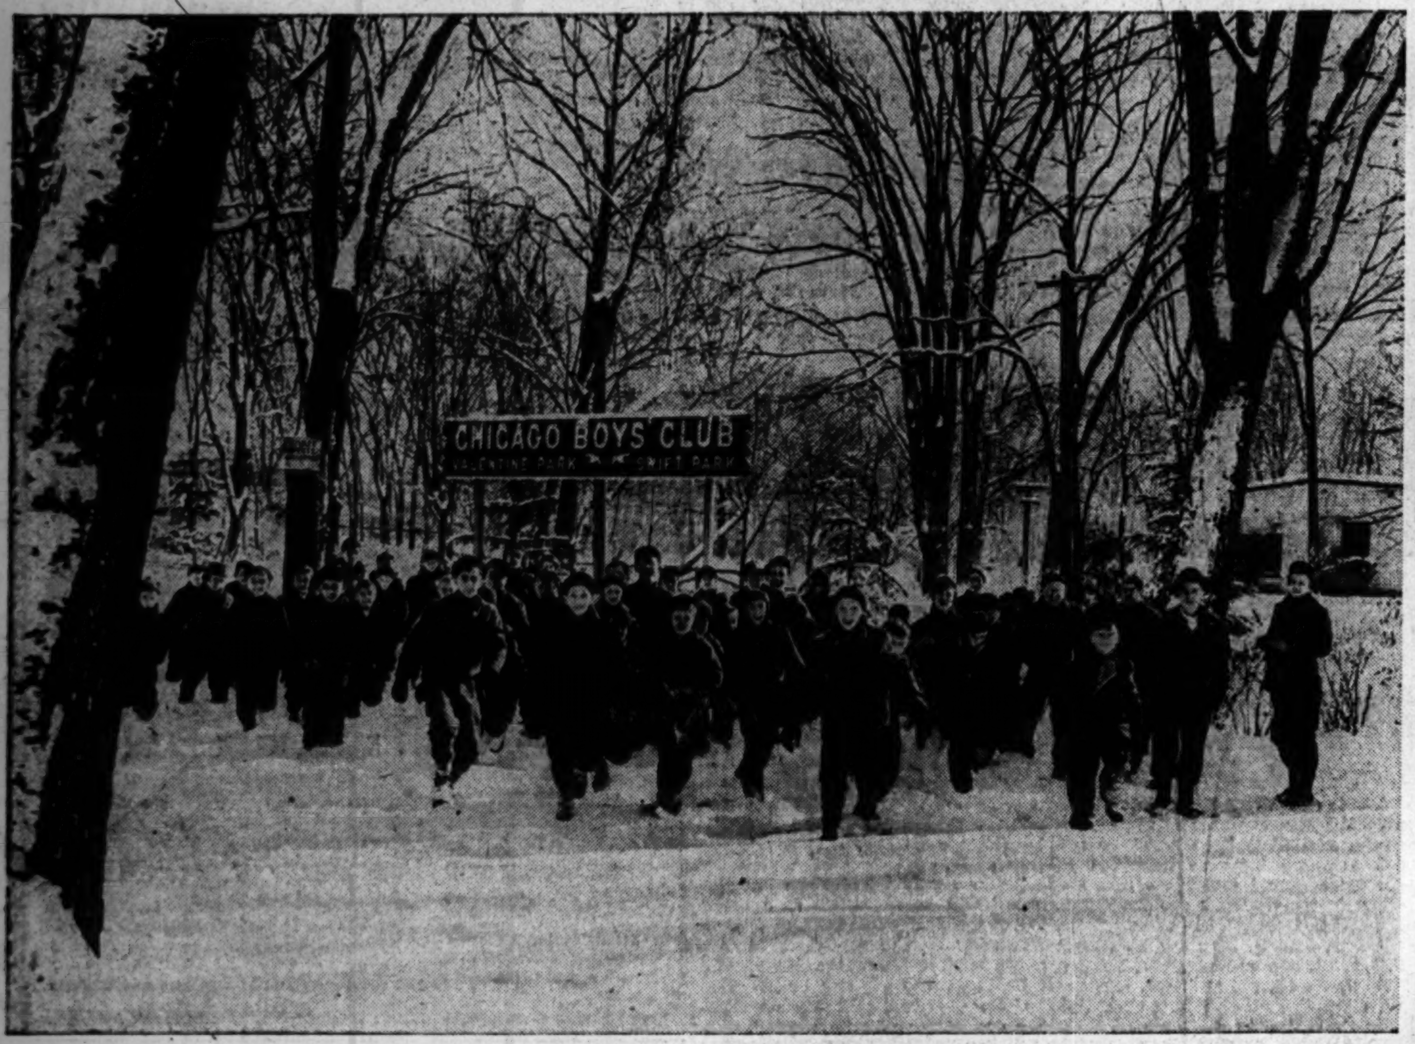
Heavy Snow Makes Winter Camp a Joy to Chicago Boys' Club Members



Tucked in by a knee-deep blanket of snow, 52 boys from 10 to 16, from all parts of Chicago bedded down the day after Christmas for a five day stay at Winona lake, Warsaw, Ind. For some it was the first opportunity to trade the soot packed snow of Chicago's streets for the fluffy drifts of open country. The boys were paying guests (some gave a dollar, some more) of the Chicago Boys' clubs at Swift park.

When they arrived at camp Glen Popper (left), 2302 S. Kildare av., and Bob Konovsky, Cicero, spent more time on their pants than on skis, but soon they were taking the jumps in stride. Temperature and humidity kept the snow perfect for outdoor sports.

Tobogganing captured the fancy of many of the youths. Herding the toboggan back to camp after runs on near-by hills are Bill Ellinger, Park Ridge, and Dick Whitehead, 3042 S. Komensky av. (pulling), and Lawrence Villar, 1304 S. Peoria st., and John Soto, 1236 S. Newberry st. (pushing). Sharing a ride back are (front to rear) George Medrana, 1037 S. Peoria st.; James Dubina Jr., 2501 S. Spaulding av.; Arnold Zicha, 4168 25th st., and Richard Frolik, 2415 S. Karlov av. Walking beside the toboggan is Bob Drtina, counselor for the Marshall square group. Richard Downing, manager of the Lawndale club, snaps a photograph.

It was a period of real roughing it for the boys who did nothing indoors but eat, sleep and dry out. Cleanliness was accomplished with the aid of the constantly running spring near the bunkhouse. Frank Poskovil, 2217 S. California av., dries his hands after a quick wash while Richard Knack, 2867 22d pl., gives his teeth a quick once over.

Veteran of boys' camp periods is R. Morgan Tucker, Wheaton, who has served thousands of youths as chef both at summer and winter camps for 25 years. More than 2,000 Chicago youngsters attend the camp each year.

NAME CHAIRMEN TO PLAN ROTARY CLUB PROGRAMS

Maywood Unit Prepares 6 Months' Sessions.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

With the realization that program chairmen are largely responsible for the success of luncheon meetings, R. Lee Osburn, president of the Rotary club of Maywood, announced at a recent meeting the names of members upon whom responsibility had been placed for programs each Thursday noon—until June 14.

An anecdote told by the guest speaker for the day, Walter K. Greenebaum, happened to fit appropriately into the announcement of men to be held accountable for speakers during the coming half year.

What Now, Mr. Speaker?

It seems that a luncheon club speaker, after finishing his remarks, listened in vain for expected applause. Instead, he saw the entire membership rushing toward him.

"Are you after me?" quavered the timid orator.

"No," came the response, "but we're after the fellow who brought you here."

The program chairman who brought Mr. Greenebaum to the meeting needed to make no apologies, for the speaker provided interesting facts about the Great Lakes which were illustrated with a movie in colors.

OPA Official to Speak.

President Osburn announced that the speaker for Thursday noon would be John J. Ryan, area rent director for the OPA.

Those who will be in charge of future programs are William G. Heidemann, Jan. 18; Leslie W. Remley, Jan. 25; John E. McCullough, Feb. 1; Myron E. Lukey, Feb. 8; Russell W. Cochran, patriotic day, Feb. 15; Francis M. Davie, Rotary anniversary day, Feb. 22; Russell D. Dietrich, Mar. 1; Donald H. Shannon, March 8; Hugo H. Mueller, March 15; William Y. Barber, March 22; the Rev. John H. Tredrea, March 29.

Plan Forum April 5.

Clarence H. Pygman, club forum, April 5; Norman B. Lewis, April 12; Oscar E. Miske, April 19; tour of the high school, April 26; Russell W. Cochran, guest day for secretaries, May 3; Dr. Walter C. Lovejoy, hospital day, May 10; Junior Rotarians, May 17; Edmund W. Klimpke, Boy Scout day, May 24; Russell W. Cochran, May 31; William K. Lauth, June 7; golf party and induction of officers, June 14.

The Maywood club, which recently celebrated its 21st anniversary, has seven charter members who are still active in the organization. They are Henry O. Bosse, William G. Heidemann, Henry G. Kramer, Dr. Walter C. Lovejoy, R. Lee Osburn, Frederick H. Ruhnke, and Paul W. Senne.

Seven Set Attendance Pace.

Seven members with a perfect attendance record are Henry G. Kramer, Ray E. Poplett, Arthur E. Soffel, Paul T. Karr, William K. Lauth, Oliver M. Holliday Jr., and William G. Heidemann.

The regular meeting place of the club is Guild hall, Fifth av. and Oak st., but during the holidays, while the boiler at the Episcopal church has been under repair, meetings have been held at the Maywood Congregational church.

Each member of the Rotary club represents a different business or profession. In his talk, Mr. Greenebaum touched on one of the classifications, funeral directing. He told of the undertaker who approached an acquaintance and asked: "Why go around the way you are when I could bury you for $95?"

Semi-Annual REPORT to the COMMUNITY

During the last six months of 1944 the more than 7,000 firms and families who save and invest and finance homes through Second Federal accomplished through this means much of benefit to themselves, to the community and to the nation.

MORE than $200,000 worth of War Bonds were purchased here during these last few months alone. Think how much this means in terms of equipment for our fighters.

$1,780,000 in savings and investments were placed with Second Federal in these last six months. Thus thrift enabled us to purchase more than a million dollars worth of government bonds and to loan other thousands for home construction or purchase; it builds security for the saver and for the community as a whole.

New accounts were opened here by 850 families and firms and institutions. Number, distinct from dollar-volume, is important because many of these represent the first serious saving in a lifetime. For many families, this is the first time they have embarked on a thrift program . . . a habit of planning wisely and providing well.

350 homes and other residential properties were financed since 1943 by Second Federal's convenient and economical plans, even during these times of minimum new construction.

26 persons from this community worked with Second Federal. Their wages are spent in community stores, contributed to community organizations. And some 5,000 others shared the dividend amounting to more than $72,000 for the last six months.

See how you will benefit by joining those who do business here in person or by mail. Use any of the services reported above or the others too numerous to mention here. Write or come in and let us Serve your financial needs, whatever they may be.

EX-SERVICE MEN GETTING CHOICE CALLS IN RADIO

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Dolly Mitchell.

Several ex-service men are getting good breaks in radio and that's a break for fans, too. Bob Graham, now the featured singer on Duffy's Tavern, was "discovered" while in the army. He was singing while on K. P. duty. A sergeant who overheard him told him to keep it up [something sergeants traditionally wouldn't be expected to do].

"One of these days," said the sergeant, "somebody will hear you." That "somebody" turned out to be Capt. Glenn Miller, former orchestra leader who was recently reported missing in the European theater. Miller picked Graham to sing with his army band while at Scott field, Ill. He had not sung professionally before. After he was honorably discharged he was brought to the attention of Boss Ed Gardner of Duffy's—and hired.

Benny Grabs Stevens.

Larry Stevens, who was honorably discharged from the army last year and then got a job in a war plant, bought a war bond one evening which entitled him to a chance to sing with Freddy Martin's orchestra. Later Mary Livingstone heard him. Her husband, Jack Benny was overseas at the time but when he returned he concurred in Mary's judgment that Stevens would make a good replacement for Dennis Day, now an ensign in the navy.

Al Helfer, former W-G-N-Mutual sports announcer, recently discharged as a lieutenant commander in the navy after participation in the African and Italian campaigns, was waiting in a New York office for an audition when he was spotted by a 20th Century-Fox talent scout. Result: a techni-color screen test and a contract in Hollywood.

Kyser's New Songstress.

That new songstress on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge you've been hearing for several weeks is a Chicago girl—Dolly Mitchell. Proudest papa in the city is Al Mitchell, the Answer man of W-G-N, her father.

One Man's Family, a fixture on NBC longer than Roosevelt has been President, will move to the Blue network on Tuesday, Jan. 30. Eddie Bracken of the movies will head a new comedy show as a replacement Sunday nights on NBC.

OTTO ARMSPACH RESIGNS AS HEAD OF VILLA PARK

Peter Enzweiler Named Acting President.

Members of the board of trustees and other officials of Villa Park recently gave a farewell party to Otto W. Armspach, whose resignation as village president took effect the first of the year.

Armspach has accepted a position with the Carrier corporation, an engineering and contracting company with headquarters in New York City. The firm specializes in air conditioning of large buildings and industrial plants.

During the last three years, Armspach, with offices in the Chicago loop, has been doing consulting engineering work and has had assignments on government projects in the southern states.

Thruout Villa Park, there was regret over Armspach's resignation as president. His four year term would have expired in April. He served as a village trustee in 1939 and 1940, and was made president in 1941.

To fill the vacancy, the village board has elected as acting president Trustee Peter H. Enzweiler, who has served two years of his four year term as trustee.

SEVEN SCHOOLS TO COMPETE IN MUSIC CONTEST

Hold First Meeting Tomorrow.

Choral groups from seven northwest side high schools will compete this week in two contests to choose outstanding groups of singers in each of several classes. There will be competitions for girls' choruses of different sizes, for male choruses, and mixed choral groups. Four contests will be held thruout the city, one in each high school district.

First contest, that for the northwest high school section, will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the auditorium of Marshall High school, 3250 Adams st. Northwest side schools competing include Wells High and Kelvyn Park High. Three groups from Wells will sing, including the girls' chorus directed by Norma Schildknecht, the male chorus directed by Alice M. Figg, and the mixed chorus directed by Hubert E. Nutt. From Klevyn Park, the girls chorus will compete under leadership of Florence T. Love.

Second Contest Thursday.

Five more northwest side schools are entered in the competition at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Roosevelt High school auditorium, 3436 Wilson av. These include Steinmetz, Taft, Von Steuben, Roosevelt, and Schurz High schools.

Three groups from Steinmetz have entered the competition. These are the smaller girls' chorus, directed by Josephine D. Farr; the larger girls' chorus under leadership of Willard L. Groom, and the mixed chorus, also directed by Groom. Taft will enter two groups, the girls' chorus, directed by Ruth B. Lino, and the mixed chorus, under the leadership of Helen B. Scanlon.

The mixed chorus competition will have entrants from Von Steuben, where Clare John Thomas is director, and Roosevelt, with John P. Hamilton as leader. Schurz also will have a mixed chorus competing, a larger group directed by LeRoy Wetzel.

Three to Judge Contest.

From a board of 18 experts in choral music, a group of three judges will be chosen for each contest. On the executive committee for the competition are Superintendent Johnson, Dr. Helen Howe, director of music, and Oscar W. Anderson, assistant director of music.

The high school principals' advisory board for the choral contests includes Peter B. Ritzma of Farragut, Miss May C. Allen of Kelley, William P. Hearne, retired principal of Steinmetz, James H. Smith of Lane, and Olice Winter of Lake View. Ex-officio members of this board are President McCahey of the board of education, and George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of schools.

High school district supervisors are John W. Bell, Oscar F. Fowler, Henry H. Hagen, Harry C. McKinsie, and William E. Poor.

W. H. MANCHESTERS HOLD 50TH WEDDING DINNER, RENEW VOWS

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Manchester, 2323 N. Hamlin av., celebrated their 50th wedding recently with a family dinner. At a ceremony following the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Manchester renewed their marriage vows, with the Rev. William Harry Fetz of Hermosa Methodist church officiating.

W. H. Manchester.

Mrs. Manchester.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Manchester were born in New York, and were employed in the public schools of that state prior to their marriage. In 1901 they moved from Syracuse, N. Y., to Freeport, Ill., and in 1922 they came to Chicago. They have resided on the northwest side since that time. Mr. Manchester is employed by the Groen Manufacturing company, having been with that firm 32 years. The couple are active in the affairs of the Hermosa Methodist church. Mrs. Manchester is an officer in the Hermosa Woman's club.

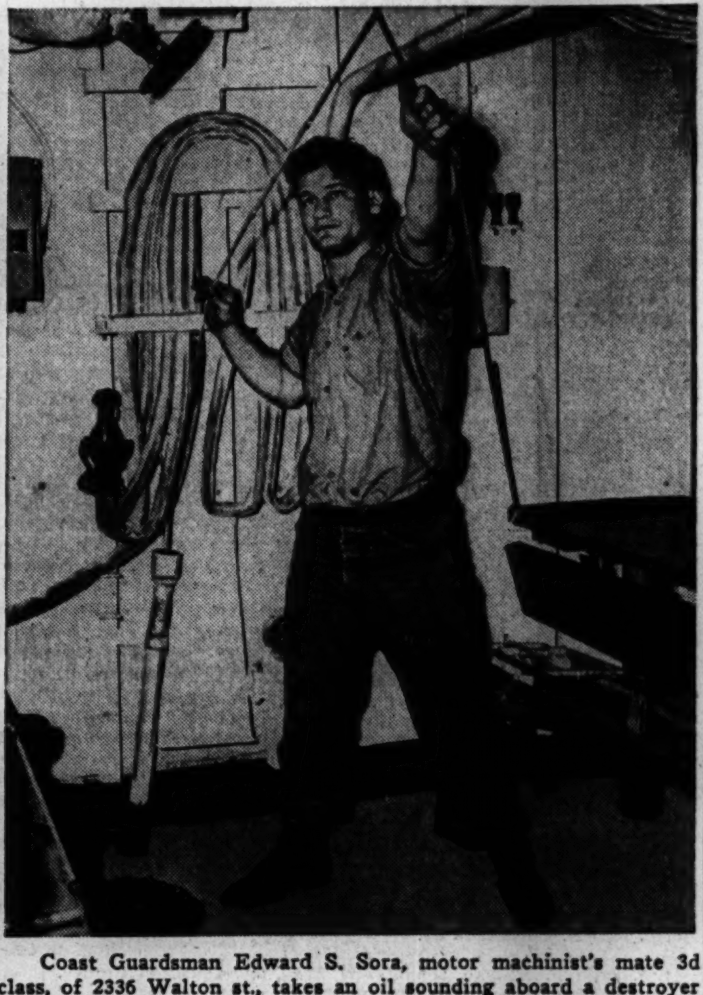
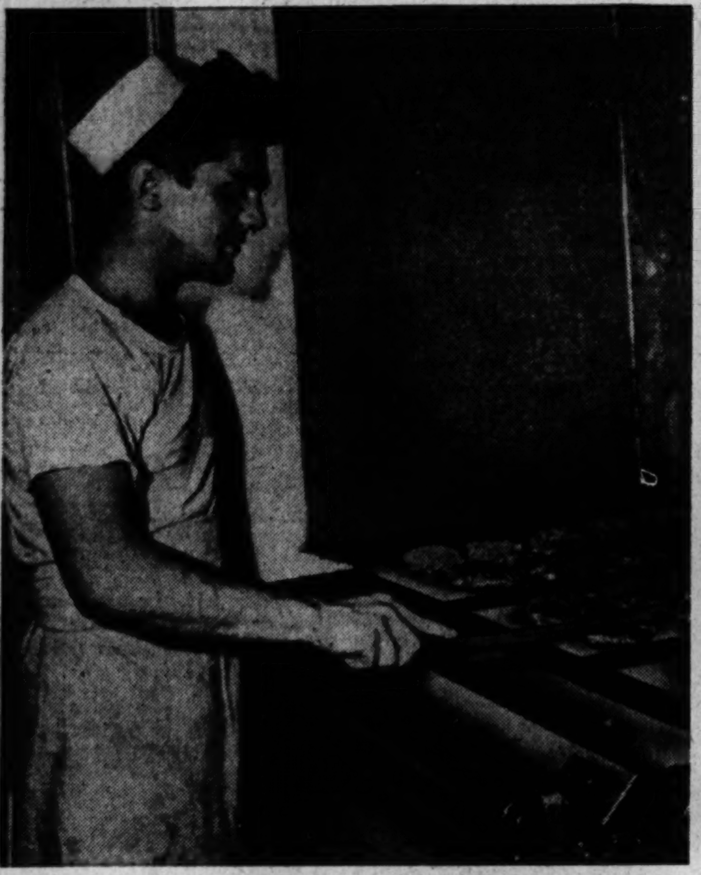
Coast Guard Takes N. W. Side Men to Far-Flung Battlefronts

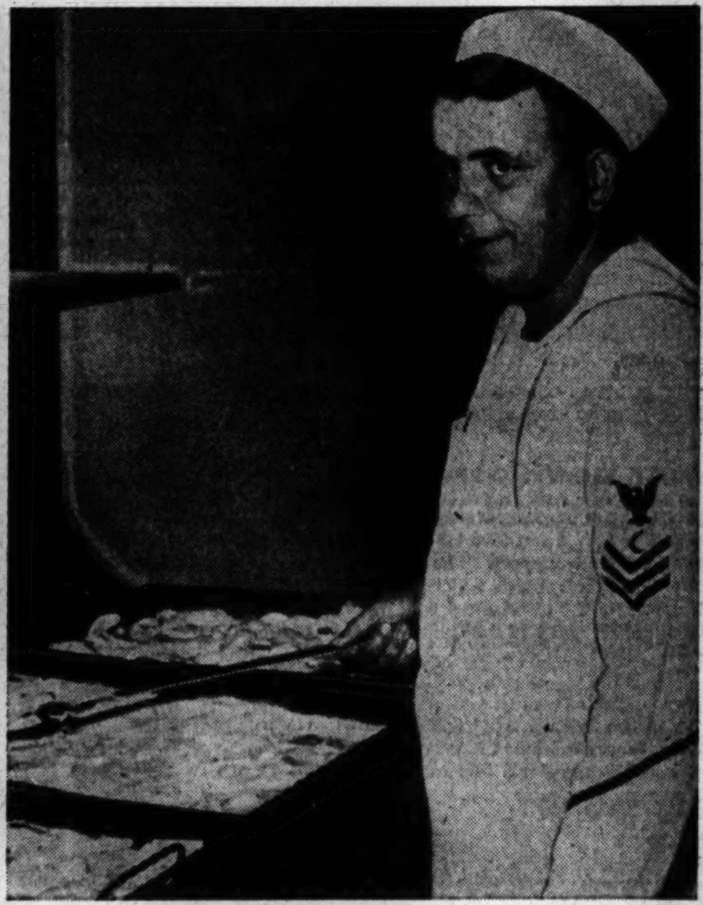
Found fluttering helplessly on the deck of a coast guard-manned troop transport in the Atlantic, a sparrow was adopted by the crew and named Sarge. The sparrow gets its chow from Albin N. Kilian, steward's mate 3d class, of 2423 N. Long av.



Coast Guardsman Edward S. Sora, motor machinist's mate 3d class, of 2336 Walton st., takes an oil sounding aboard a destroyer escort in the Atlantic.

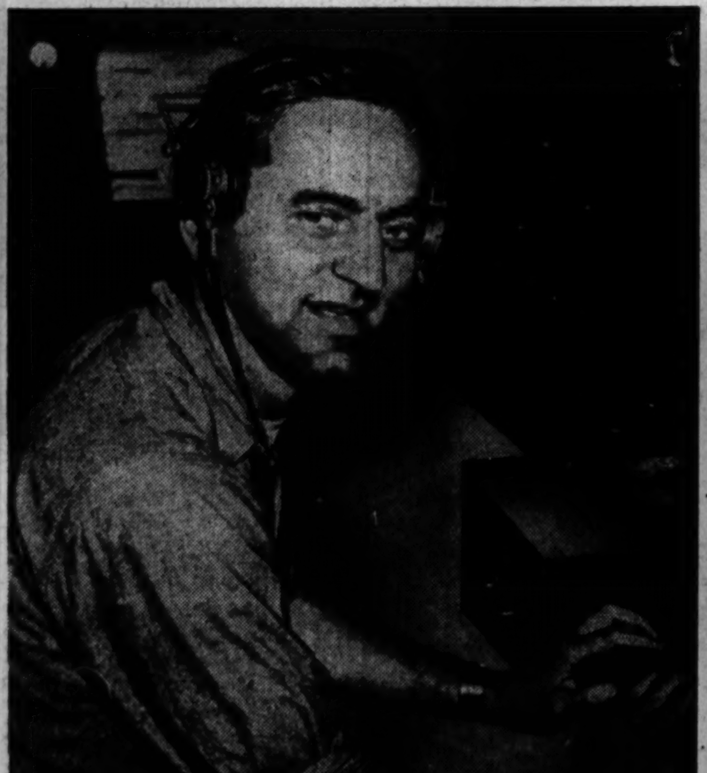


Frying hamburgers for the men aboard a coast guard-manned destroyer escort is a man sized job, but Alex Kmitt, ship's cook 3d class, of 2237 Fullerton av., is used to it. Kmitt's ship assists in ridding the Atlantic of the sub threat, and convoys men and supplies overseas.



Walter (Rocky) Rylko, ship's cook 1st class, is serving on a coast guard-manned LST bound for action in the South Pacific. Rylko, who lives at 1519 Superior st., is a veteran of combat sea duty in the American and European theaters. His four and one-half years of service include 32 months of anti-submarine duty in the North Atlantic.

Veteran of the Marshall Islands invasion, Robert D. Swanson, fireman 1st class, now is serving aboard a cutter in the Pacific. Previously he was attached to a coast guard-manned assault transport in the Marshalls, where he later served with the security patrol. As as engineer aboard a landing craft, he hit the beach with the initial wave. For the first seven weeks on the atoll, they worked almost twenty-four hours a day unloading and ferrying in supplies from the beach. Swanson lives at 5335 N. Christiana av.



Norman Goldstein, radioman 2d class, of 4606 N. Drake av., maintains communications aboard a coast guard cutter in the Central Pacific. Equipped for combat, this ship primarily is engaged in establishing aids to navigation thru islands and reefs.

Shown on the flying bridge aboard a combat cutter is Gustave R. Carlberg, fire controlman 3d class, of 3644 Newcastle av.

3 ENTER 26TH WARD ELECTION FOR ALDERMAN

Three candidates have filed petitions for places on the ballot at the special aldermanic election in the 26th ward on Feb. 5. The filing deadline was Tuesday. The vacancy was caused by the death of Ald. Sobota. A supplementary election has been set for March 5 in case none of the three gets a majority of the votes cast.

The candidates are Mathew William Bieszcat, 2006 Walton street, secretary of the late alderman, who claims the backing of the regular ward Democratic organization; Anton A. Pociask, 1335 Chicago av., an undertaker and a former Horner leader, and Joseph S. Maslanka, 1068 Fry st., an independent candidate.

Bieszcat is a protege of Ward Committeeman Joseph T. Baran and also has served as his secretary. Joseph S. Kobrynski is secretary of the ward organization.

DOES IT SEEM CHILLY? PLAN GARDENS NOW

Park District Will Aid Amateurs.

Northwest side residents have been ardent war gardners since the summer of 1942. But the prospects for home produced vegetables in 1945 look brighter than they did in any previous war year, George T. Donoghue, director of gardens, believes. Stimulated by the prospect that final victory is not in the immediate future, and that many foodstuffs again are rationed, Chicagoans are making plans for growing and canning their own vegetables.

Increased interest has brought many requests for information from persons who will be planting their first war garden. Community leaders are ready to aid the gardening movement, and literature may be had for the asking, Donoghue said. Advice on sites and planting also is available.

Park District Will Help.

The park district, in coöperation with the International Harvester company which furnishes the tractors, plowed nearly a half million square feet of vacant lots on the northwest and southwest sides last fall. Additional requests are coming in for space to be plowed as soon as frost is out of the ground and the park district is planning to provide this service whenever possible.

Leaders of garden groups who wish plowing done should make certain their project qualifies for free service. Requirements are as follows: [1] No project can be plowed unless at least four families are coöperating; [2] written permission of the owner must be secured in advance; [3] no garden space can be plowed that was used as a garden last year, a necessity because of limited man power and equipment; ground must be reasonably level, free from holes, stones, glass or objects that would damage tires of equipment, and weeds and rubbish must be removed, and [5] plots must be at least 75 by 100 feet.

Make Requests Early.

Plowing requests should be filed as early as possible, Donoghue said. "Chicago and suburbs now have upwards of 200,000 experienced war gardeners," he added. "Undoubtedly there will be an increased area in cultivation in 1945."

War garden chairmen within the OCD are ready to aid new gardners find plots, and to raise productive gardens. Northwest garden chairman is Richard Beu, 4445 N. Pulaski rd. For the northwest suburbs, Ernest D. Wurm, 313 S. Clinton av., Park Ridge, is chairman.

List Community Chairmen.

$556,000,000.00
For Douglas War and Postwar Planes!

Douglas now has a $416,000,000 backlog order for war planes . . . and $140,000,000 in postwar orders from major airlines, including huge contracts for C-54 Combat transports. The C-54 is the transport companion to the B-29 Super Fortress which is now starting to bomb Japan into oblivion. The C-54 is the world's largest 4-motor transport in volume production and has the cabin dimensions of a standard railroad box car. Adapted for postwar airline use, it will be designated the DC-4. This is the plane used by President Roosevelt in his flights to Casablanca, Terheran, and Cairo. Now it is carrying munitions and men to the fighting front and wounded back to safety. After the war it will carry millions of airline passengers. This plane is built in the Douglas Chicago plant. You are needed to build it.

If you have read recent War Manpower Commission articles or our advertisements in the last few weeks, you know that additional men and women are urgently needed on a two-year schedule to help us build the giant C-54, companion transport plane to the B-29 Super-Fortress for the war against Japan . . . and then to build the same plane after the war to fill orders already booked with us by the airlines. This means that a great new industry has come to Chicago . . . to stay. Maybe you've said to yourself, "I'll look into that someday."

Someday will be too late. You must join us now if you are to cash in on this opportunity. Don't let lack of experience hold you back. We train you so that you're bound to make good in fabricating, assembly, and installation work . . . what we call "beating on the airplane." As interesting work as you'll ever find. Good pay . . . EX-SERVICE MEN GETTING CHOICE CALLS IN RADIO

Answer Man's Daughter Joins Kyser.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Dolly Mitchell.

Several ex-service men are getting good breaks in radio and that's a break for fans, too. Bob Graham, now the featured singer on Duffy's Tavern, was "discovered" while in the army. He was singing while on K. P. duty. A sergeant who overheard him told him to keep it up [something sergeants traditionally wouldn't be expected to do].

"One of these days," said the sergeant, "somebody will hear you." That "somebody" turned out to be Capt. Glenn Miller, former orchestra leader who was recently reported missing in the European theater. Miller picked Graham to sing with his army band while at Scott field, Ill. He had not sung professionally before. After he was honorably discharged he was brought to the attention of Boss Ed Gardner of Duffy's—and hired.

Benny Grabs Stevens.

Larry Stevens, who was honorably discharged from the army last year and then got a job in a war plant, bought a war bond one evening which entitled him to a chance to sing with Freddy Martin's orchestra. Later Mary Livingstone heard him. Her husband, Jack Benny was overseas at the time but when he returned he concurred in Mary's judgment that Stevens would make a good replacement for Dennis Day, now an ensign in the navy.

Al Helfer, former W-G-N-Mutual sports announcer, recently discharged as a lieutenant commander in the navy after participation in the African and Italian campaigns, was waiting in a New York office for an audition when he was spotted by a 20th Century-Fox talent scout. Result: a techni-color screen test and a contract in Hollywood.

Kyser's New Songstress.

That new songstress on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge you've been hearing for several weeks is a Chicago girl—Dolly Mitchell. Proudest papa in the city is Al Mitchell, the Answer man of W-G-N, her father.

One Man's Family, a fixture on NBC longer than Roosevelt has been President, will move to the Blue network on Tuesday, Jan. 30. Eddie Bracken of the movies will head a new comedy show as a replacement Sunday nights on NBC.

Art Linkletter who conducts the NBC quiz, People Are Funny, will introduce a new five a week series Jan. 15 on CBS titled, House Party. Quiz and stunt ideas will be mixed.

Friday on Tuesday

Pat Friday is the featured songstress on the Roy Rogers show aired over W-G-N-Mutual at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays.

OFFER 'NAUGHTY MARIETTA' NEXT ON AIR THEATER

New Orleans in the old French days will be the setting for the Chicago Theater of the Air production of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" at 9 p. m. next Saturday. The program will be broadcast before 4,500 guests from the Medinah Temple auditorium over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

Marion Claire will sing the title role, and Angelo Raffaelli will sing the part of Capt. Richard Warrington, an American officer in search of a pirate. Ruth Slater will sing a supporting role.

Sondra Gair and William Everett will head the dramatic cast. They will be supported by Laurette Fillbrandt, Cliff Soubier, Arnold Robertson, and John Barclay. The W-G-N symphony orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber, will present the familiar Herbert music.

GEN. J. V. CLINNIN TO COMMENT ON WAR OVER W-G-N

Maj. Gen. John V. Clinnin [Ret.] will give a review of the war situation in the first of a series of weekly broadcasts titled, War Question Box of the Air, to be introduced over W-G-N at 12:15 p. m. today. At the close of his comment on the news from the front Gen. Clinnin will answer questions relating to the conflict sent in by listeners. He will be heard each Sunday at the same hour.

Gen. Clinnin, a veteran of more than 25 years of military service, took part in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives in World War I and was wounded at Consenvoye in October, 1918. He holds the distinguished service medal. He commanded the Illinois reserve militia until his retirement in 1942. He is a member of the state civil service commission.

Tallulah Bankhead Guest.

Tallulah Bankhead, noted actress, will be the guest of Earl Wilson, noted for his column, "It Happened Last Night," over W-G-N-Mutual at 9 o'clock tonight.

POLICE VETERAN 24 YEARS TURNS TO REAL ESTATE

Sergeant Long Known as Civic Leader.

Walter J. Rentfleisz, actor, civic leader, and erstwhile police sergeant, is playing a new role—that of business man. Rentfleisz left the police force last week after 24 years of service. His new interest is real estate and he expects to open a northwest side office soon.

Walter Rentfleisz.

More active in the community than many police sergeants—he was promoted five years ago—Rentfleisz organized the Cragin Citizens' and Improvement club in 1924 and served as its president until it was disbanded shortly before the war started. The club was credited with many major improvements in the area. He has resided in Cragin for 33 years.

Long an Amateur Actor.

The new real estate operator has been an avid amateur actor for the better part of half a century. He was chairman of the dramatic circle of St. Stanislaus Bishop and Martyr church, Lorel and Belden avs., for several years. He has taken roles in almost every Polish community in the city.

Rentfleisz is a veteran of World War I. He served with the 132d infantry, 33d division, and saw action in the Meuse-Argonne and Somme offensives. He was wounded in France and is a member of the Ray Workman chapter of the Military Order of the Purple Heart. He has been active in the Chicago Police American Legion post.

Served as Detective.

Rentfleisz, the policeman, was no less a success than Rentfleisz, the actor and civic leader. He served as a detective during most of his 19 years as a patrolman and received eight creditable mentions and three extra compensations.

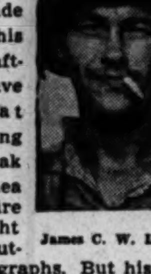
Rentfleisz and his wife reside at 2337 N. Lockwood av., where they reared a son, Chester, and two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Hoyner and Mrs. Evelyn Whitney, both of whose husbands are in service overseas.

North Town Criers Select 1945 Officers

Mabel Mentzel, 3235 N. Oakley av., district manager of the Royal League, has been elected president of the North Town Criers. The Criers include on their membership list 18 north and northwest side councils of the Royal League. Her associate officers for 1945 will be Mary Lenforce, vice president; Mildred Bennet, secretary; Joseph Chalfin, treasurer.

NEXT TIME PHOTOG WILL STICK TO NIPS AND FORGET BEARS

James C. W. Lunde of Park Ridge, a coast guard combat photographer, confesses that a koala bear went the Japs one better in giving him a scare. Lunde returned to his ship recently after a 10 day leave from combat duty. In covering invasions in Biak and New Guinea under heavy fire he had brought back some outstanding photographs. But his visit to an Australian city park left him much more unnerved.



James C. W. Lunde.

"We were going by a cage with a koala bear and her cub in it," he said, "and I asked my friend to take a picture of me. So I climbed in. I don't think they liked it. The mother bear started to chase me around, and the keeper had to shut the gate so the bear wouldn't escape. There I was, running a foot race with a mother bear, her baby on her back, as the visitors rolled on the ground with laughter."

Lunde finally managed to escape, but his friend was laughing so hard he didn't get the picture.

4 SCHOLARSHIPS TO CENTRAL Y WON ON N. W. SIDE

Four northwest side students were among those winning scholarships for 1945 to the Central Y. M. C. A. college, 19 S. La Salle st., it has been announced by George S. Speer, director of student personnel service.

Winners of full scholarships are James Nordland, 5013 Patterson av., and Harold Shafter, 4056 N. Albany av., both of Roosevelt.

Half tuition scholarships were awarded Shirley Muffson, 3044 Leland av., of Roosevelt High school, and Lois Perlstein, 1456 N. Rockwell st., of Tuley High school.

N. KEYSTONE AV. NEIGHBORS SAY HOWDY IN ITALY

They lived across the street from each other in Chicago, but they met for the first time in three years in a small Italian town. Lt. William Davie Jr., 942 N. Keystone av., and Pvt. John J. Oddo, 941 N. Keystone av., are the soldiers who had the reunion.

Davie and Oddo spent their childhood together, attended Orr school and Austin High school together, and later worked together in the Teletype corporation and the A. B. Dick company.

Enlisted with Canadians.

Lt. Davie, Thunderbolt fighter pilot with 87 combat missions to his credit, said goodbye to Oddo in 1941 when Davie enlisted in the royal Canadian air force. In 1942 he transferred to the A. A. F. and came home on furlough only to find that Oddo had enlisted in the ground forces and was overseas.

Subsequently Davie finished his flight training, and last March was assigned to a veteran Thunderbolt fighter group supporting allied ground forces in Italy. He learned that Oddo was in Italy, and he tried unsuccessfully to contact his friend on several occasions.

Oddo Was at Anzio.

After their chance meeting recently, Davie learned that while he had been flying combat missions over the Anzio beachhead, Oddo had been stationed there with a military police battalion.

Lt. Davie arrived home Christmas day to visit his parents. Also visiting the Davies over the holidays was their son, Kenneth, who has been serving with the merchant marine in the South Pacific. A third son, Richard, fireman 1st class with the navy, is stationed on the west coast.

SUBURBS BOOST HOUSE PERMITS IN CHICAGOLAND

The increase in housing permits issued in November was credited mostly to the suburban towns, a survey disclosed. Outstanding new home reports from northwest suburbs put Franklin Park and Palatine at the top of the list.

The number of permits issued in Chicago fell off heavily. In November the city issued permits for 135 homes with an estimated value of $623,900, as compared with 219 in the same month last year valued at $846,950. Apartment construction permits also show a decline. Last month 71 permits, valued at $341,925, were issued, while last year in the same month 111 were issued, with $296,058 value.

Comparative figures on increased suburban building are as follows: Arlington Heights, $6,050 in November, $500 in November, 1943; Des Plaines, $8,610, $7,770 last year; Franklin Park, $69,600, $2,900 last year; Palatine, $118,000, $2,150 last year.

Azaleamum America's Garden Wonder!

HARDY Perennial! Lives Through Northern Winters

EIGHT Brilliant Colors, including White, Bronze, Red, Yellow, Pink, Sunset, Gold

Hundreds OF BLOOMS FIRST YEAR
A THREE-MONTH SENSATION!

ACTUAL SIZE BLOOMS
HARDY, EASY TO GROW!

Just picture this wonder plant in your garden, with a profusion of rich, colorful big blooms like these! All Azaleamums are hardy perennials, bloom right up to frost, stand winters well. One of each color makes yours the outstanding garden. Colors include Magic White, Cameo Queen Pink, Golden Yellow, Bronze Beauty, Red, and TWO BRILLIANT NEW COLORS—Summer Sunset (variegated) and Summer Gold!

KELLOGG'S Azaleamum actually is the world's greatest flowering plant. Just imagine this magic in your garden this year: Azaleamum grows to bushel-basket size, produces 600 or more big, rich blooms, each 2" across, during 3 months' blooming—right up until frost! No wonder those who have Azaleamums say friends and neighbors always stop to admire and envy this color feast.

2,928 BLOOMS ON FIRST YEAR PLANT!

We say that with Azaleamums you get 600 blooms the first year, 1,500 the second year. But many customers report over 1,000 blooms on a first year plant! Some say over 2,000. Wood, Mich., counted 2,928 blooms on a first year plant. Sheehan, N.H., says: "Exceptionally large, measure 8 feet around." Azaleamum is truly a garden in itself, and with one of each, you can transform your garden to new breath-taking beauty and a marvelous color spectacle for 3 solid months!

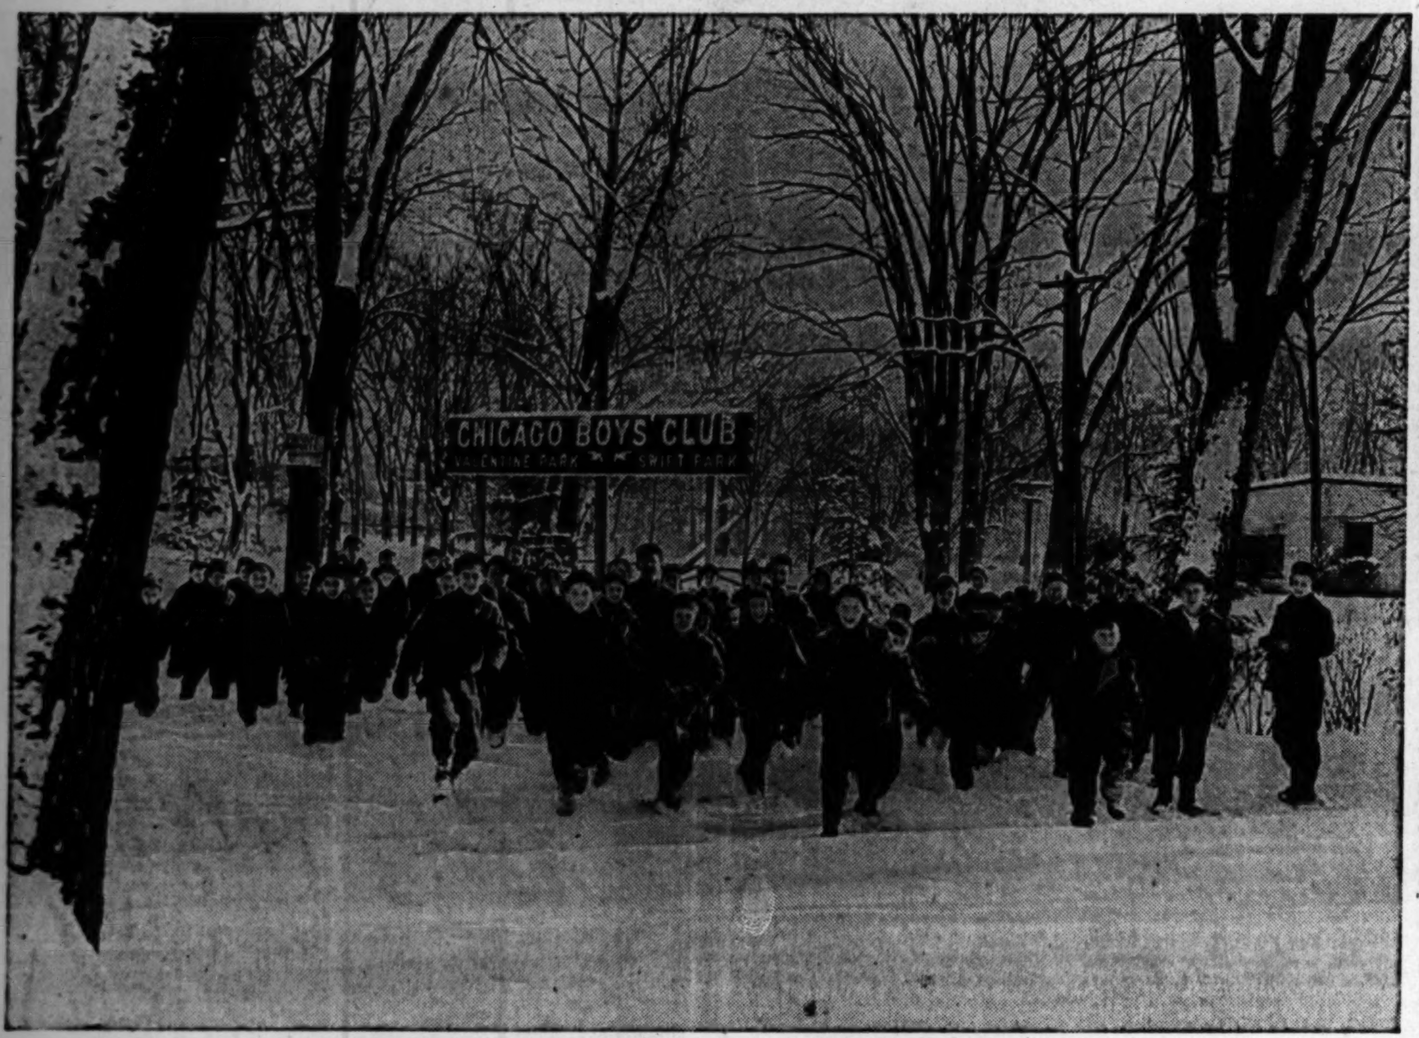
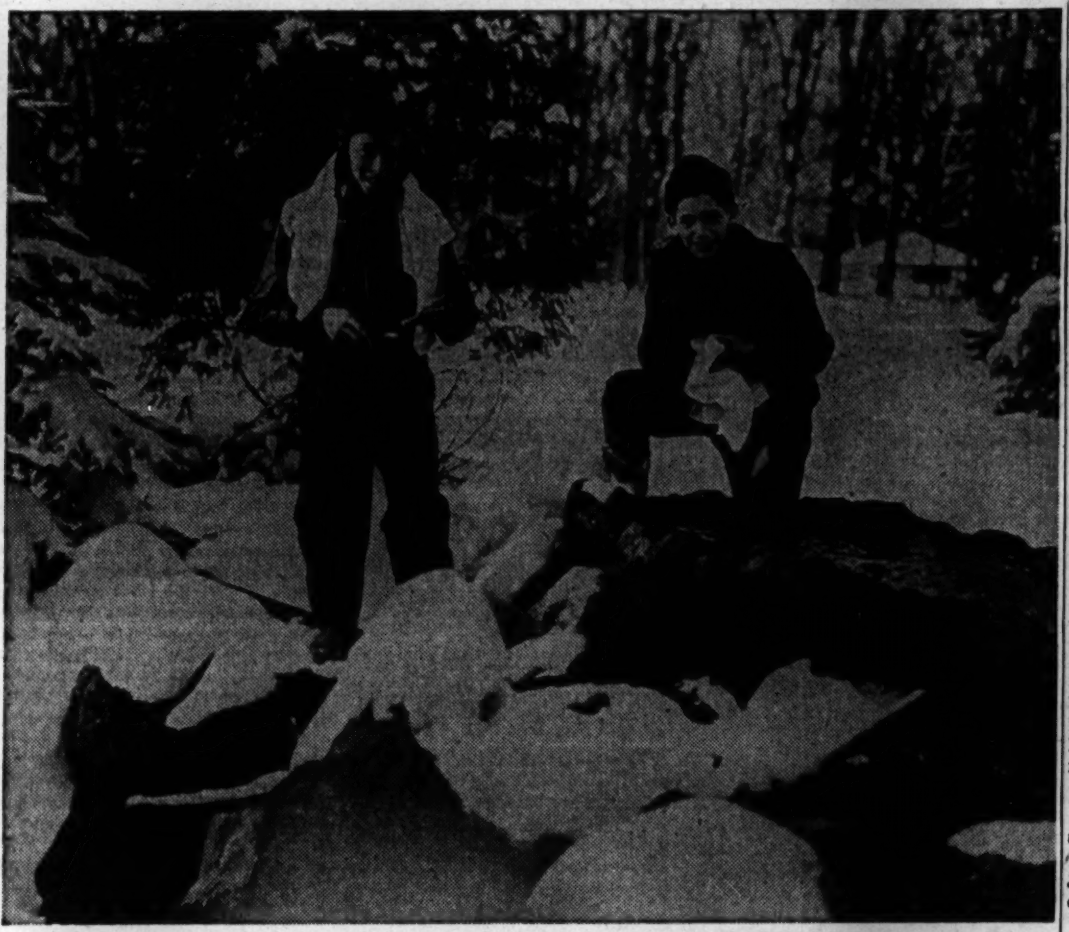
Far from City Streets, Chicago Boys' Club Members Rough It at Winter Camp



Tucked in by a knee-deep blanket of snow, 52 boys from 10 to 16, from all parts of Chicago bedded down the day after Christmas for a five day stay at Winona lake, Warsaw, Ind. For some it was the first opportunity to trade the soot packed snow of Chicago's streets for the fluffy drifts of open country. The boys were paying guests (some gave a dollar, some more) of the Chicago Boys' clubs at Swift park.



It was a period of real roughing it for the youths who did nothing indoors but eat, sleep, and dry out. Cleanliness was accomplished with the aid of a constantly running spring near the bunkhouse. Don Petrolli, 347 W. 37th st., prepares to brush his teeth, and Sam Costanza, 3544 Wells st., dries his hands after washing in the warmer than air spring water.

Tobogganing was something new to most of the boys in camp and the favorite slides were in use most of the time. Headed for the near-by hills are (left to right) Lincoln Kanai, leader of the Valentine club group; Fred Hellmer, 3635 S. Hamilton av.; Donald Joyce, 541 W. Root st.; Tom Smith, 5203 S. Aberdeen st., and Stanley Chapas, 3325 Emerald av.

Norman H. Cook, 6146 S. Honore st., Boys' clubs camp director and part of the organization for 27 years, stops at one of the seven continuously flowing spring fed fountains on the camp grounds.

Another Boys' club camp veteran is R. Morgan Tucker, who has served thousands of youths as chef at summer and winter periods for 25 years. More than 2,000 Chicago youngsters attend the camp each summer.

EX-SERVICE MEN GETTING CHOICE CALLS IN RADIO

Answer Man's Daughter Joins Kyser.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Several ex-service men are getting good breaks in radio and that's a break for fans, too. Bob Graham, now the featured singer on Duffy's Tavern, was "discovered" while in the army. He was singing while on K. P. duty. A sergeant who overheard him told him to keep it up [something sergeants traditionally wouldn't be expected to do].

Dolly Mitchell.

"One of these days," said the sergeant, "somebody will hear you." That "somebody" turned out to be Capt. Glenn Miller, former orchestra leader who was recently reported missing in the European theater. Miller picked Graham to sing with his army band while at Scott field, Ill, He had not sung professionally before. After he was honorably discharged he was brought to the attention of Boss Ed Gardner of Duffy's—and hired.

Benny Grabs Stevens.

Larry Stevens, who was honorably discharged from the army last year and then got a job in a war plant, bought a war bond one evening which entitled him to a chance to sing with Freddy Martin's orchestra. Later Mary Livingstone heard him. Her husband, Jack Benny was overseas at the time but when he returned he concurred in Mary's judgment that Stevens would make a good replacement for Dennis Day, now an ensign in the navy.

Al Helfer, former W-G-N-Mutual sports announcer, recently discharged as a lieutenant commander in the navy after participation in the African and Italian campaigns, was waiting in a New York office for an audition when he was spotted by a 20th Century-Fox talent scout. Result: a techni-color screen test and a contract in Hollywood.

Kyser's New Songstress.

That new songstress on Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge you've been hearing for several weeks is a Chicago girl—Dolly Mitchell. Proudest papa in the city is Al Mitchell, the Answer man of W-G-N, her father.

One Man's Family, a fixture on NBC longer than Roosevelt has been President, will move to the Blue network on Tuesday, Jan. 30. Eddie Bracken of the movies will head a new comedy show as a replacement Sunday nights on NBC.

Carmen Miranda, Haymes Guests on Hall of Fame

Carmen Miranda, the Brazilian songstress, and Dick Haymes, radio star, will join the roster of the Hall of Fame at 5 p. m. today when the show is broadcast over WENR-Blue. Paul Whiteman's orchestra provides the music.

Friday on Tuesday

Pat Friday is the featured songstress on the Roy Rogers show aired over W-G-N-Mutual at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays.

GEN. J. V. CLINNIN TO COMMENT ON WAR OVER W-G-N

Maj. Gen. John V. Clinnin [Ret.] will give a review of the war situation in the first of a series of weekly broadcasts titled, War Question Box of the Air, to be introduced over W-G-N at 12:15 p. m. today. At the close of his comment on the news from the front Gen. Clinnin will answer questions relating to the conflict sent in by listeners. He will be heard each Sunday at the same hour.

Gen. Clinnin, a veteran of more than 25 years of military service, took part in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives in World War I and was wounded at Consenvoye in October, 1918. He holds the distinguished service medal. He commanded the Illinois reserve militia until his retirement in 1942. He is a member of the state civil service commission.

Betty Field, Bellamy in Broadcast of 'Lady Eve'

Betty Field and Ralph Bellamy will be featured in the Preston Sturges play, "Lady Eve" as guests on the Comedy Theater broadcast over WMAQ-NBC at 9:30 tonight. Harold Lloyd is master of ceremonies.

Cunningham on W-G-N.

Bill Cunningham, sports commentator, will begin a series of broadcasts over W-G-N and Mutual at 6 p. m. today. He will speak from Boston.

OFFER 'NAUGHTY MARIETTA' NEXT ON AIR THEATER

New Orleans in the old French days will be the setting for the Chicago Theater of the Air production of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" at 9 p. m. next Saturday. The program will be broadcast before 4,500 guests from the Medinah Temple auditorium over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

Marion Claire will sing the title role, and Angelo Raffaelli will sing the part of Capt. Richard Warrington, an American officer in search of a pirate. Ruth Slater will sing a supporting role.

Sondra Gair and William Everett will head the dramatic cast. They will be supported by Laurette Fillbrandt, Cliff Soubier, Arnold Robertson, and John Barclay. The W-G-N symphony orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber, will present the familiar Herbert music.

Leonard Rose Is Soloist with Philharmonic Today

Leonard Rose, first cellist with the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, will be soloist with the orchestra when it broadcasts Dvorak's B Minor Cello Concerto over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. The orchestra, to be conducted by Artur Rodzinski, also will present Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C Minor.

Beethoven Symphony No. 4 to Be Presented Tuesday

Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 will be played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber on the broadcast of Symphony Hall over W-G-N and WGNB from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m. Tuesday. The broadcast also will feature Turina's "Scene Andalouse," with Robert Dolejsi, W-G-N staff violist, as the soloist. Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutti" also will be presented.

'The Merry Widow' Arrives Jan. 15 for Four Weeks

Jan Kiepura, Marta Eggerth in Star Roles

By Claudia Cassidy.

Back on New Year's eve, 1939, when Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth sang "La Boheme" in a special holiday performance at the Civic Opera house, Mrs. Kiepura was so bewitching to the eye that some of us placated operatic disappointment by hoping to hear her in operetta. So here she comes back, again with Mr. Kiepura, to sing "The Merry Widow" in its most popular reincarnation of many a long season, for a four week engagement opening Monday, Jan. 15.

That the Polish tenor should be singing with his own wife will not astound numerous other sopranos, who are likely to insist no one else would put up with him. Grace Moore would say so, but then Miss Moore is pretty temperamental, too, and Gladys Swarthout still is seething from the time Kiepura landed an unexpectedly realistic punch that "Carmen" night at Soldiers' field. Even in the 1931 days of his Chicago opera début the tenor clashed with the late and lovely Claudia Muzio, so that the Chevalier Herman Devries, dean of music critics, wrote wryly that Kiepura reminded him of an earlier tenor who, when told to be more polite to the rest of the singers, remarked scornfully. "I am the meat. They are only the potatoes."

According to legend perhaps apocryphal, the Kiepuras did a little clashing on their own account when they met on a Paris movie lot as co-stars of "My Heart Is Calling You." They fought so bitterly the producer implored them to refrain long enough to complete the film, whereupon an armed truce melted into love. Equally picturesque are tales of their past, which have the Hungarian Miss Eggerth singing the doll in "The Tales of Hoffmann" at the age of 9 and reigning as the toast of Vienna in Kalman's "The Violet of Montmartre" at a mere 15, while the coruscant Kiepura spurned his family's command to be a lawyer and traveled by sleigh to Polish music halls until a scout commandeered him for the Warsaw Opera.

A prima donna once told me that Kiepura introduced himself to her some years ago, saying, "I am the world's greatest tenor. I sing higher than anybody." His publicity this trip says music critics have hailed him as "being without peer among the tenors of all time," which seems a sizable statement even for a music critic. Anyway, Mr. Kiepura now laughs at people who once said his "strenuous and robust" manner of song would ruin his voice—that being a euphemism for referenecs to the technique that had him scorning everything in a role except its glittering top notes, lovingly cherished far beyond the beat. Having survived, he believes he has made a discovery. "The singer who exercises by singing," he insists, "is doing the same thing for his vocal equipment as an athlete does when he goes into training. Exercise of any kind must bring perfection in development." So, with supreme logic, Mr. Kiepura is happy to be singing "The Merry Widow" eight times a week. If the public wants him to, he will sing it 10.

CHARMER

Billie Lou Watt, who plays the adolescent charmer, Corliss Archer, in "Kiss and Tell," the town's long run champion which closes at the Studebaker Jan. 20.

Aside from the stars, who played thruout the New York engagement, except for the period when Miss Eggerth withdrew to have a baby and Wilma Spence sang the widow, chief curiosity centers around the man who replaced the urbane Melville Cooper as Popoff. He is Karl Farkas, who at the reputed age of 22 wrote and starred in the Austrian musical which arrived in this country as Al Jolson's "Wonder Bar." If you have forgotten how long ago that was, Jolson used to bring down the house by pretending Lindbergh was in the audience.

This seems to be a day of fabulous characters, but no romantic haze mists the life of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The facts are right there for the digging, tho one of the diggers won me two letters of protest for calling Illinois college at Jacksonville Illinois State college. This, you remember, was the taking-off place for Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements, who got immersed in Beecher lore and wrote "Harriet," which brings Helen Hayes to the Erlanger tomorrow night.

I think you might safely call Mrs. Stowe an indomitable woman. Nowadays a lot of people write books, but still a few holdouts mutter, "I haven't the time." Mrs. Stowe wrote 30, starting on wrapping paper or whatever was handy, in odd moments of her life as wife and mother in the impecunious family of Calvin Stowe. She had 11 children, kept house, sewed, made her husband's coats, learned shoe cobbling, did most of the washing and ironing, and is said to have contrived mattresses as well as quilts, tho how, I couldn't tell you. But I wouldn't put anything past a woman who, discovered cutting herself a dress without a pattern, replied to skeptical inquiry, "I guess I know my own shape."

One of 11 Beecher children, Harriet at 7 was being called a genius by her father, the doughty Lyman. At 12 she wrote an essay, "Can Immortality of the Soul Be Proved by the Life of Nature?" At 13, having translated Ovid into English, she was teaching Virgil at Hartford Female academy. She achieved a widely used geography, and when Byron died, speculated on the trouble he must have had getting into heaven.

She was 40 when a vision of Uncle Tom's death, seen in church, set her off on what was to be "Uncle Tom's Cabin, or the Life of the Lowly." It shot around the earth in book and play form with unparalleled rapidity, and earned its author much fame and abuse, and numerous gifts, including a dubious one of 26 volumes containing signatures of half a million British women who disapproved of slavery.

Helen Hayes has lured most of the customers to "Harriet," but some of them are "Uncle Tom" experts. My favorite "Harriet" story in that line is the one about the customer who, when the copy of "Uncle Tom" was hurled thru the Stowe window by the mob, stated succinctly, "That edition was in two volumes." It was, too.

How a Taste for Adventure Leads to Disillusion, Heartache, Danger, and Finally Love Is Excitingly Told.

THE GOLDEN TOTEM

By BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

(Copyright: 1945: By Barrett Willoughby.)

INSTALMENT I.

LYNN CLONARD, 21, stood where passengers were forbidden to stand—in the extreme bow of the Canadian liner northbound up Alaska's inside passage. Her bare head was golden in the sun; her eyes were intent on the narrow channel steadily unfolding as the steamer swung on thru the mountain wilderness. Her little scotty, MacFarlane, was snuggled under one arm.

Tho officers in the pilot house of the Prince Hal were unable to keep from looking at her, none sent to tell her she was out of bounds. Not even when seamen behind her began making ready the block and tackle for unloading luggage at Juneau, a couple of hours away. Every one knew why the girl from California was gazing ahead with such wondering expectancy; and every indulgent eye that rested on her took on an admiring, sentimental softness.

Lynn, oblivious of spectators, tightened her arm about MacFarlane in an involuntary squeeze. She said softly, with a sharp intake of breath that sounded both happy and a bit frightened, "Today—my wedding day. The most wonderful day of my life."

MacFarlane's response was an emotional lunge of such vigor that she set him down on the deck. He lifted a reproachful look, frumped flat, and, with a gusty sigh, rested his black muzzle on his mistress' small foot.

Lynn, in spirit, was already docking at Juneau, where Perry Holloway waited to make her his wife. She was seeing him, tall, good looking, running up the gangplank to welcome her. Seeing his gay smile beneath the dark line of his mustache; the light in his long lashed hazel eyes; his arms reaching out to catch her to him.

Thoughts of Perry could always bring a lingering radiance to her young, delicately tanned face. The faintest puff of wind could stir her fine, dusky gold hair that swept up, shining clean, from a widow's peak and clung to her head in short, natural waves. Her eyes were gentian blue, direct, and touched with the grave wonder of youth, until she laughed or felt some emotion that turned them dark and glowing. People passed her casually on the street, then snatched their gaze back to her for a moment, not because she was beautiful but because she walked with an air of gracious arrogance, as tho the world were hers.

This distinctive posture, unusual in one of her small stature, she owed to her Aunt Julie Vaughn, the gay, improvident sister of her aviator father.

"You shall not grow up to look insignificant, runt of my heart!" Julie had cried the day Lynn, 6 years old and an orphan, had come to live with her. "Now, then, assume the attitude victorious. Like this, darling: Chest up, tummy in. That's it! Stand like a pine tree on a hilltop. A tall pine tree, sun crowned above the fog." In her rare moments of seriousness Julie, sophisticate, philosopher, divorcee, expressed herself in the language of the love stories she wrote for a living.

Little Aunt Julie, lovable, warm hearted, with her short dark curls tumbled above her jade green eyes. . . . Eight months had passed since an automobile accident had stilled forever the click of her busy typewriter. But even now, beneath Lynn's happy expectancy, her heart kept turning back to the pleasant life they had known together in Julie's small balconied house on the slope of a Berkeley hill; sunny rooms lined with books, filled with flowers, and sprinkled with pages of manuscript that were forever escaping from Julie's study. . . . Minor celebrations that marked the completion of each story; people flocking in, music and gayety, and everybody munching sandwiches and trailing Julie about so they wouldn't miss any of the amusing things she said. Major celebrations following the receipt of a story check; new clothes, books, perfumes, and the two of them going off to Yosemite, to Lake Tahoe, to Palm Springs, staying always at the luxury hotel and living the life of Riley as long as the money lasted. It never occurred to Julie to save a dollar; not even after the insurance Lynn's father had left her had vanished in a bank failure.

It had been fun, being reared by Julie. But Lynn had always wanted more from life than Julie demanded. From the horizon of all her dreams beckoned a shadowy young man—an adventurer like her father—who would one day be companion, lover, husband.

Perry had rushed into her life four months ago while she was still unbearably lonely for Julie. She had accepted an invitation to spend the Easter holidays in Carmel-by-the-Sea with Henriette Holloway, one of Julie's friends who wrote for adventure magazines. Henriette, a forthright spinster, had promised complete quiet. "I'm rushing thru a novelette, to make a deadline," she had written. "There'll be no partying, my dear, and you won't even see much of me."

An hour after her arrival Lynn was curled up in Henriette's porch glider reading when a car stopped outside the gate. She glanced up to see a long yellow convertible coupe with the top back. From it leaped a dark young man.

As the stranger sprang up the steps Lynn rose and confronted him with a look of polite inquiry. He paused, his hazel eyes focusing on her face in delighted surprise. Then he raised his hat and held it as men do when they listen to their national anthem. "Well!" Admiration seemed to exhaust nearly all his breath. "Of all the adore—of all the lovel—look here!" His smile was disarming. "Are you, by some heavenly miracle, living with cousin Henriette?"

Lynn was amused. "I am." She flashed her crooked little grin at him. "That is—for 10 days."

He took hold of the brim of his hat with both hands and, with a careful, calculated swing, landed the headpiece on the glider. Turning, he strode back to his car, shut off the engine, and in a moment was back again, depositing two pigskin bags at Lynn's feet. "What a coincidence!" he exclaimed, brightly. "I'm visiting here, too. That is—for 10 days."

"What, ho! profligate and wastrel!" Henriette's welcoming shout came from the window of her study, which opened off the far end of the veranda. She had thrust her gray head out and there was affection in her lean, clever face.

"Cousin Hank, ever tender and true!" declaimed the young man, advancing on her with open arms.

He reached in thru the window, drew his kinswoman to him and, rocking her back and forth, planted kisses on top of her head. "Ummmm, honey pot, am I glad to see you!"

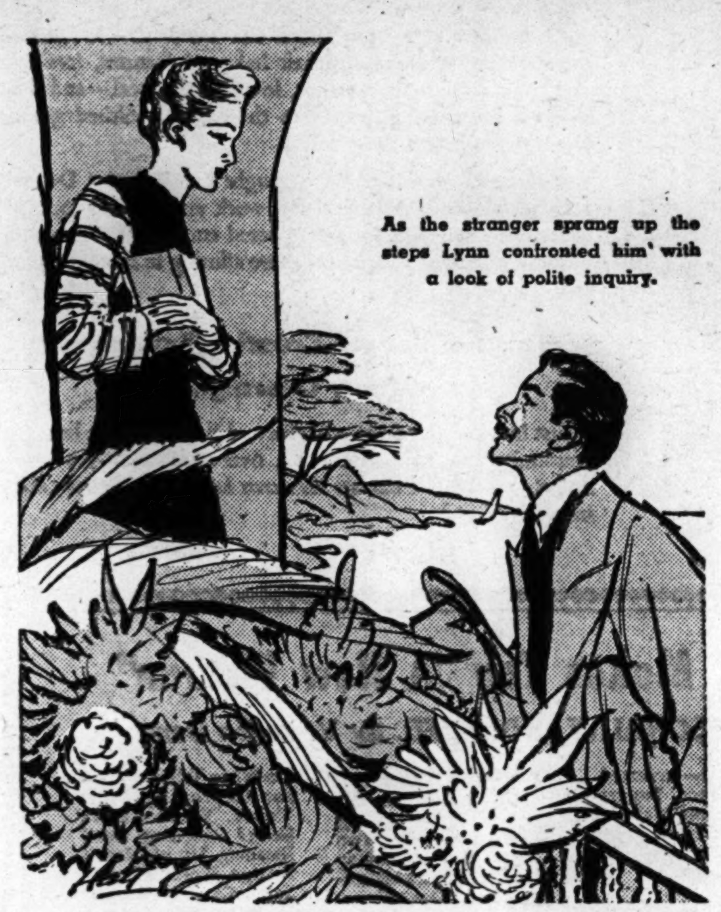
She emerged from his embrace laughing, and pulled his ear. "You can stay without dishing out any blarney," she said. "But remember this, Perry Holloway: No being late for meals. And positively no monkeyshines like the last time you were here. And when I'm working on a story Hulda serves nothing stronger than coffee in this house.

She introduced him to Lynn. "He'll amuse you, my child, but don't take him seriously."

Henriette went back to her novelette, leaving her young guests to entertain themselves.

It was spring in Carmel — sunny days, sapphire seas, miles of wild flowers. Perry, who had a tremendous capacity for enjoying the present moment, made the plans that filled every waking hour: Picnics on the cypress covered cliffs; moonlight drives on mountain roads high above the Pacific; dinner and dancing every night at interesting resorts along the coast. He was a gay companion, brimming over with delightful nonsense.

He lost no time in telling Lynn about himself. His father was a successful Los Angeles attorney. His elder brother was beginning a medical practice in Pasadena.



As the stranger sprang up the steps Lynn confronted him with a look of polite inquiry.

"Myself — well, I'm in the doghouse at the moment with my dad. He's a hound for punctuality, sobriety, the shouldering of responsibilities—that sort of thing. He's always going after me because I'm generally a little late, and often, I'm afraid, I misjudge my—shall I say—capacity for spirituous refreshment." He made a serio-comic face.

Lightly he concluded: "The governor's just banished me from the ancestral hall. I've sold my convertible to a friend in Seattle, and am on my way to deliver it. After that I'm getting clear of cities. They're not so good for a chap like me. I have too many friends who don't have to work. Besides, I'm interested in mining. And so, after I deliver the buggy in Seattle, I'm heading for Alaska."

"Alaska!" cried Lynn. "That's where I want to go some day. My dad worked up there on surveys during his vacations to pay his way thru the University of Washington. Just before he finished, tho, World War I. came along. He went into the army air corps and on to France with the 8th attack squadron."

"So that's where you get that look!" Perry had been watching her eyes darken and glow as she spoke of her father. "You're a war bird's baby."

Lynn proudly enumerated her father's decorations, adding: "But they didn't do him a bit of good when he came home and tried to get a job. In order to make a living the poor darling patched up an old Jenny and went barnstorming. My aunt Julie gave me some of the posters that featured him in big red letters: Daredevil Dick Clonard."

"I'll bet he was good," commented Perry.

Lynn nodded emphatically. "He was stunting at a carnival when he met mother. Julie told me stunting was such a novelty in those days that even convents let their pupils out to see the wonder. Mother was a convent girl. Dad singled her out from 50 others sitting with their nun chaperons in the grandstand." Lynn laughed. "He practically abducted her from under the noses of the sisters. Within three days she was Mrs. Richard Clonard."

"Boy! One look and he knew what he wanted. I'm like that, Lynn." Perry's gaze took on a warmth, a significance. "Have you noticed?"

Lynn held to her subject. "At that time, when dad had a decision to make, he never boggled. He simply followed his natural bent, which coincided with the motto of the Clan Clonard."

"What is the motto?"

"When two roads open up before me I choose the more venturesome."

"Wow! What a motto for a man!"

"But it takes a man of courage to follow it. One who dares to sweep aside all limitations and go forward on his own. He who follows that mottto must do so without compromise. Make his own decisions and act on them. He must lead—never follow—when he takes the more venturesome road. I wish——" The light suddenly went out of her face. "I wish dad had always followed — without compromise."

"Didn't he?"

She shook her head. "Just once he didn't. His great dream was to establish the first air transportation line in Alaska. He finally got a backer. But when he told mother the great news, she—well, she didn't have the Colonard royal disdain of limitations. The prospect of living in a frontier country terrified her. As for dad's pioneering Alaska air lines—she just went all to pieces when he mentioned it. She was a frail little thing. He loved her. And so he turned down his big chance, playing safe for her sake. The ironic part of it is that two months later both of them were carried off in a mild flu epidemic."

Perry looked thoughtful. "Ummm. It seemed to prove something, but I can't tell just what. Can you?"

"It proves that a Clonard should never fall in love with a—a weakling."

"That's it!" His gay smile flashed again. "Thank heaven I'm not one. So—how's about putting the Clonard motto to work right now?"

She looked at him, her brows quirked in inquiry.

"Here's what I mean, Lynn: Two roads are opening up before you at this moment. One—" he held up a forefinger—"You can stick here in California, surrounded by climate, civilization, commonplaces. Two"—he held up the other forefinger—"You can marry me and we'll shove off for Alaska together to seek our fortune."

She broke into a peal of laughter. "Perry, you do think of the most ridiculous things!"

A week later they were engaged. The wedding date was set for Christmas. Perry gave into the postponement with a reluctance he tried to mask with foolery.

"O, all right, put me off. But come December, me proud beauty, and I'll be back from Alaska in me muklucks and parka, with the license in me hand." His grin faded and his eyes and voice took on a rare gravity. "But I wish you could see it my way, Lynn. I'm going to be gosh awful lonely. All those long months waiting and you so far away. But—O, darling—" his hard young arms went about her in sudden emotion—"you're worth waiting for. You're the only one in all the world I want to work for, and cherish, and guard—forever."

For a week after Perry's departure Lynn went about in a happy daze, turning the engagement ring on her finger. It was a sapphire of unusual depth and brilliance. After she had, by sheer force of will, settled down to her studies in Berkeley, she lived only for the arrival of mail from Alaska.

Perry wrote several times a week, letters that were tender, longing, gay, amusing. He was in Juneau, one of the great mining centers of the north, looking for a job. But Alaska didn't seem to realize that the depression was over, because he hadn't found work of any kind. However, he had run into a couple of fraternity brothers, Al and Bill Rodale, and thru them he expected to land something very soon. In the meantime, it was the finest country in the world and he was having a whale of a time, and all he needed to make life absolutely perfect was the presence of his little Goldilocks.

The day after commencement Lynn received an air mail special delivery letter which wiped everything but Perry from her mind.

Lovely and Adorable:

Papa has found work! He's foreman in a mine! Grab the sheepskin, darling, and come a-running. I'll be waiting on the Juneau dock for you. And one half hour later you'll be Mrs. Perry Holloway.

We'll spend our honeymoon at the mine in a log cabin de luxe. And I do mean de luxe. Electric lights from our own power plant. [But we won't need them till winter comes because the days now are nearly 18 hours long.] Bathroom, tiled in orchid and green. [You can sit in your tub, Goldilocks, and look out the window and down the inlet to a mountain with a baby glacier near its top—like a sapphire in a maharani's nose.] Wild flowers everywhere, and the finest hunting, fishing, and canoeing in the world.

You won't have to cook lovely. The boss insists that we eat with him. He's a swell egg. You're going to like him. He already likes you. He came into my room at the hotel one day before he gave me this job and saw your picture on the desk—the cute one where you're fishing in Pyramid lake. He wanted to know all about you. I was lonesome as hell, and I told him, even to the motto of the bold Irish Clonards. He said what this country needs is more gals like you. And, after he hired me, he suggested that we be married up here in July instead of waiting till December.

Lynn read with an up-welling of love and pride. Her Perry, in a frontier country, had always proved himself a man among strong, hardy pioneers. He had secured a position of responsibility; and, most wonderful of all, he had already made a home for her. A log cabin home. "O, Perry," her heart sang. "I'm coming! I'm coming right away."

She spread out the steamer schedules he had inclosed and eagerly began to study them. Then the price of a ticket north sent her mind to her bank balance. Unless she earned some money before leaving, she'd land in Juneau with scarcely a dollar left. Lynn Clonard, a penniless bride! No. She couldn't do it.

Yet the temptation to leave at once was so great she battled her pride for hours before she sent Perry word that she must hold to their original plan — marriage in December.

He countered with a bombardment of messages spaced exactly six hours apart, each one more ardent and more urgent than the one before. Then came:

"Darling are you the daughter of Dare Devil Dick Clonard [interrogation point.] I'm calling you out on the more venturesome road to lead you and laugh with you and take care of you always. PERRY."

Lynn capitulated.

A few days later she was standing on the deck of the Canadian liner Prince Hal watching Vancouver's skyline grow dim in the distance. There wasn't a cloud on her happiness. Perry was only three days away. Nothing else mattered. Not even the fact that, except for a few dollars she'd reserved for tips, her small, but smart trousseau and her one way ticket had taken every cent she possessed.

Alaska bound up the inside passage!

"Frankly, this was written for lazy people —who want to get slim
—who don't like to exercise
—who do like to eat!"

Lose 10 Pounds in 10 Days, Yet Enjoy Glowing Health, 3 Delicious Meals a Day—No Exercise or Drugs!

HERE at last is the pleasant, sensible, scientific way to REDUCE. To see those unattractive bulges of fat "smooth out" and disappear as if by magic, at the rate of a pound a day. To enjoy the frankly admiring glances that a slim figure always attracts. This slenderizing miracle can be accomplished quickly, safely, comfortably—whether you are a man or woman, young or old. And, best of all—

WITHOUT starving yourself! (You'll eat three delicious, satisfying meals a day, including a big breakfast.)

WITHOUT the drudgery of exercise! (You can be as lazy as you please.)

WITHOUT drugs, pills, or compounds! (They can definitely hurt your health and appearance.)

WITHOUT steam baths or massage! (So often they don't work—and they are usually terribly expensive.)

How then? By simply knowing certain newly-discovered scientific secrets of food-selection!

It's Easy—Once You Know THIS Fact!

"Oh, of course," you may reply. "It's just a matter of calories." But IS it? Suppose you had to choose between a large glass of orange juice and half a sirloin steak? You would probably reach for the orange juice. Actually, the steak would give you 15 times as many precious ENERGY calories. Yet the total number of calories in each is roughly the same!

So you see, it ISN'T "just a matter of calories." It's the KIND of calories that makes the big difference!

Calories, Yes—But Which KIND?

Some foods are high in fat-producing calories. Others are high in energy-producing calories. Science has discovered that if you eat the first kind of foods, your body produces LESS ENERGY and MORE FAT. But if you eat the second kind your body produces MORE ENERGY and LESS FAT!

This simple scientific secret explains why most ordinary "dieting" fails . . . and why "The New Way To Eat and Get Slim" (as explained by Donald G. Cooley in his new book) produces such amazing results.

How Much Do You WANT to Lose?

You get a "10-DAY MIRACLE DIET," by which you lose a pound a day for ten days; a diet for losing 10 pounds a month; and a "stay-slim" diet, so when you reach alluring slenderness, you can stay there. You don't have to stick to each day's menus either: Substitution Table gives you dozens of other meats and foods you may eat instead. These diets give you a slimmer figure, and also (for definite scientific reasons) greater health and beauty! Skin becomes smoother, clearer . . . your hair softer, more lustrous . . . you have more pep, "ginger," zest for living! Partial Contents on this page can only suggest a FEW of the many ways this book goes about improving your figure, health, appearance.

Third U. of C. Chamber Music Concert Friday Night

on the Aisle

by Claudia Cassidy

When Every Day Is Christmas —THAT'S the Theater

"WHEN the chefs of true theater serve you, yours is a bountiful portion of an emotional and intellectual feast. The memory becomes a part of your bloodstream, for you don't forget experiences that wrap you in poetry, music, beauty, vitality, and the eternal verities; that arouse your imagination, compassion, nobility, hope, love, or exuberant humor. That's the theater. Every day is Christmas."

Oscar Serlin speaking, roaring in a gale of protest at theater trash in the current issue of Theater Arts, voicing a spirited plea for adult playgoing in an article that winds up with this haymaker, "The spirited young need the nutrition of the theater. We can aid them in the acquisition of joy, hope, and belief in the future, and of the cultural habit of going to the theater, where every day is Christmas. When that new day comes, the Broadway baboons will disappear with the trampled snow, the Lindy landsmans be swept back to their bagels and racing forms, and the young, with dynamite in their souls, courage in their hearts, and juice in their veins, will reflect their world in their theater!"

I see what Mr. Serlin means, tho I wish he wouldn't talk about culture, which isn't, never was, and never will be why people go to the theater or, for that matter, to music. In the long run they go, if they go at all, because they like it, and no more hifalutin reason makes sense. As for Broadway baboons, it's a beguiling epithet, but Mr. Serlin's, not my own. I just consider some producers and their wares a shade enigmatic. I make no attempt to explain such futility as the return of "The Waltz King," which was a turkey the first time, or the parade of dismal little shows that strut their cheap stuff on the bewildered stage, making reviewers yearn to join the paying customers who prefer a good newsreel. I can't even figure out Mike Todd, who pins his producing hopes and his New Year's greetings to "Central Park," newest and in his opinion best of his shows, and at the same time sends Chicago a grimy grab bag like "Star and Garter," which expired not a day too soon.

Eddie Dowling and Laurette Taylor.
[Atwell Photo.]

I was a bit puzzled, too, about Broadway baboons being swept back to their bagels, which sounded faintly disreputable until an expert defined a bagel as a doughnut dipped in cement. But when Mr. Serlin talks about the young with dynamite in their souls, courage in their hearts, and juice in their veins, I know exactly what he means. For purposes of this column he means Tennessee Williams, who wrote "The Glass Menagerie"—as himself, and as a symbol of all the theater young who have something to say if they just can get a chance to say it.

Mr. Williams Speaks Theater's Language.

Maybe Mr. Serlin never heard of Tennessee Williams, but if it's juice and dynamite he wants, Mr. Williams is his man. I never heard of him, either, until Eddie Dowling wrote me about "The Glass Menagerie." I haven't a notion what he looks like or how he sounds when he talks. But when he writes he speaks the theater's language and his play reached out to me in the audience like the best of Saroyan and the visit of the Boston orchestra. Things like this remind you sharply how much of your life you spend in the dreary treadmill of inertia that is the theater's and music's second best. It's harder to accept the shoddy substitute after your eyes and ears have had such rich reminder of the real thing.

Ashton Stevens contends "The Glass Menagerie" could be acted in a barn, which would have saved its backers about $50,000, and I agree. But I'm glad it isn't. For Jo Mielziner's lighting has a probing bewitchment that reveals the play as Koussevitzky's tonal investiture revealed Beethoven. See what it does for the wonderful role so gloriously played by Laurette Taylor. At the beginning, this raddled belle of the old south is sunk deep in frustration pricked only by the nagging urge not to admit defeat. She looks like the scuffed, rundown slipper that outlived the ball. Yet when for a brief moment she knows hope, she leans on the tenement stoop and gazes at the moon that might have been that very slipper, brand new. And over her face flit all the lovely ghosts of girlhood when 17 gentlemen callers came riding to pay her tribute. You won't see a more radiant sight than Laurette Taylor at that magic moment.

Poignant Detail and Haunting Dialog.

I doubt that any one will say "The Glass Menagerie" is pretty good, or not bad, or so so, or any of the other terms of mild disparagement. If you like this play, you love it—and maybe it works the other way around, too. I wouldn't know. I saw it three times in three days, and will be going back, which is risky business in the realm of make believe. But it is an honest, tender, tough, and, to me, brilliant play. The brief prolog warns you it isn't realistic. Maybe not. But it is deeply etched as a sudden stab of memory, as poignant in detail as a dream. It knows people. Some of its dialog haunts you. Taylor at the telephone in gallant attempt to prepare for the gentleman caller by snaring magazine subscriptions from bored acquaintances in the D. A. R. That terrifying description of the genteel spinster, "a birdlike little woman without a nest." The brief, searing sentences, that like so much of tragedy, cling to the precipice of comedy, so that some of the saddest people are the most endearingly ludicrous. This man Williams can write, sharply, revealingly in the vernacular, and if what he writes sometimes soars in the dusk like Mielziner's alley setting, you yourself have helped it take flight. Theater is a two sides of the footlights business.

I meant to write a lot more, about Mr. Dowling's wryly humorous performance, sunk layers deep in the texture of the play; about Anthony Ross' understanding of a role which is a labyrinth back of a hearty facade; about Julie Haydon's strange quality as the crippled girl, brittle thin as the glass she collects. But they will tell you that themselves, and as Mr. Serlin was saying, that's the theater, where every day is Christmas. It's also a tangible, taut, and tentacled play that makes stagestruck an honorable word.

Janet Fairbank to Sing French Solo Cantata

By Albert Goldberg.

With a program divided between compositions by 18th century composers and 19th and 20th century French music, the third of the series of chamber music concerts sponsored by the department of music of the University of Chicago will be given in Mandel hall on Friday at 8:30.

On the classical half of the program Janet Fairbank will present what is believed to be the first American performance of a solo cantata, "Le berger fidele" [The Faithful Shepherd] by Jean-Phillipe Rameau. The work is in three parts, each section consisting of a recitative and an aria, describing the emotions of a faithful sheep herder who fears his beloved is about to be incinerated. His pleas to Diana finally succeed and the young lady is saved from the flames. Hans Lange will conduct the cantata and the harpsichord part will be played by Dorothy Lane.

Janet Fairbank.

Miss Lane also will be heard as soloist in Bach's little known Concerto in F major for harpsichord. This is in reality a reworking by the composer of his fourth Brandenburg concerto, originally for solo violin, two flutes [or recorders] and string orchestra. The two solo flutes —to be played by Harvey Noack and Emil Eck—are retained in this version, but the solo violin is supplanted by a florid and brilliant harpsichord part. Mr. Lange will conduct the orchestra.

The modern portion of the program again will bring forward Miss Fairbank as soloist in Chausson's "Chanson perpetuelle" with the accompaniment played by the Philharmonic String quartet and Rudolph Reuter, pianist, and Ravel's "Chansons madecasses" [Madagascar Songs], with Mr. Reuter, Mr. Noack playing the flute part, and Dudley Powers, cellist. A quintet in C minor, for piano and strings, by Gabriel Fauré, will complete the program, played by Mr. Reuter and the Philharmonic String quartet.

On Wednesday, Jan. 24, at 8:30, in Breasted hall of the Oriental institute, Miss Fairbank will present a recital consisting of many of the new songs heard on her Town Hall program in New York last November. The program, with Irene Albrecht at the piano, will list first Chicago performances of songs by a number of contemporary composers, including Paul Hindemith, Virgil Thomson, Paul Bowles, John Edmonds, and Edward Ballatine.

The Albeneri trio, consisting of Alexander Schneider, violin; Benar Heifetz, cello, and Erich Itor Kahn, piano, will be heard for the first time in Chicago at the next University of Chicago Chamber concert, in Mandel hall on Tuesday, Jan. 30.

Peace Time Jobs Aim of Most College Students

Majority Won't Alter Courses at War's End

By The Rev. John Evans

A national survey of student opinion made by Arthur L. Brandon, president of the American College Publicity association, revealed that civilian students are preparing themselves primarily for peace time occupations. The questionnaire, sent to all types of colleges, showed that the students' post-war educational plans had been interrupted by the war but not diverted.

Student answers, the survey discloses, may seem to contradict the opinion of some educators that a large proportion of students had changed their course of study to prepare for specific war jobs. But Brandon emphasized that 46 per cent of the students included in the survey were freshmen who may reasonably expect the war to end before their graduation.

Asked if they would continue their present course of study if the war ends while they are in college, 82 per cent replied affirmatively, two per cent negatively, and 16 per cent uncertain. Answers covered the entire list of vocational and professional opportunities. War time influences were shown by a large indicated preference for commercial aviation and public service, while many students declared a hope to share in post-war reconstruction work at home or abroad; others desire to get into government service both domestic and foreign.

"Students were asked whether they believed that the post-war college curriculum should offer them principally vocational or cultural training, or a combination of the two," Brandon explained. "They voted 90 per cent for a combination course in 'earning a living' and 'how to live,' and only five per cent for the strictly vocational course." Also, students are interested in seeing colleges return to a pre-war schedule of summer vacations and maximum class loads of 15 hours a week he added.

In an earlier survey conducted by Brandon for ACPA, college presidents were queried on this matter of post-war schedules, particularly as to their preference for either "accelerated" or "concentrated" schedules, both of which have been occasioned by the war. Questionnaire returns showed presidents about equally divided on the former, 54 per cent favoring it, but voting almost unanimously against "concentration" of classes.

The student vote in this latter survey was 67 per cent against "acceleration" and 80 per cent against "concentration"; with the added comment of many students that the concentration program "gave no opportunity for outside reading, extra-curricular activities, part time jobs, or for absorption of classroom assignments."

According to the survey, students seem satisfied with extra-curricular activities now existing in colleges, 60 per cent voting to retain present emphasis on physical education and intramural athletics. The voting was evenly divided on increasing emphasis upon intercollegiate sports.

The earlier survey of college administrators revealed that college loans are not extensively used at present, and that accumulated unexpended loan funds probably amount to 30 million dollars since, out of 143 institutions reporting, only 24 were fully using available funds for student loans.

"However, students are divided," the present survey concludes, "upon what basis scholarships should be awarded. Asked whether they would wish to compete for genuine scholarship assistance [awarded entirely upon ability as a student and not upon financial need], only a little more than half voted 'yes.' Many voting negatively commented that financial aid should be granted in accordance with need, or that financial need should at least be given partial consideration in the granting of scholarships."

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery.

DEPARTMENT OF THE QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

BY CONFESSING I would rather read Ilka Chase than Henry James, and by gleefully betraying the fact that Henry James himself found Henry James unreadable, I have brought down upon my head the full crushing punnage of Mr. Ashton Stevens, the well dressed bibliophile.

"Go ilkachase yourself," he admonishes.

It is a smarting wound, but it will heal, and the pain already is in a degree abated by the anodyne of sympathetic notes from readers who share my jamesophobia. I cite with special pleasure a letter from Lamar Warrick, author of "Yesterday's Children." More than two decades ago she began the perusal of James' "What Maisie Knew," and now confesses that Maisie's remains the best kept secret of the century.

But while James still is to me and to Mrs. Warrick a closed library, I can and do read Stevens, and thereby hangs a paragraph. For last week, dustily foraging in a second-hand shop that specializes in "out of print and scholarly books," I retrieved [in mint condition] a rare old tome, entitled, "Actorviews," a presentation copy from the author, Ashton Stevens himself, inscribed in his hand to a lady whose name wild horses —nor powerful tame Percherons for that matter—shall not drag from me.

Without naming names, however, I must tell you, Mr. Stevens, she's unworthy of the homage of your gift. For it was in 1923, Mr. Stevens, that you autographed the flyleaf, "Faithfully," and it was in 1945, Mr. Stevens, that I, not she, was moved to cut the pages, finding my abundant reward, Mr. Stevens, in being, after so many years, the first to delight in the reading [so far as this copy is concerned] of your nimble tip-toe prose, Mr. Stevens, and why didn't you send it to me in the first place, you jamesaddict?

Made a fascinating literary discovery a few days ago in a volume called "Peace and War: United States Foreign Policy, 1931-1941," published by the government under the seal of the department of state. On pages 718 and 719 there appears what purports to be the text of the Atlantic Charter, with what seem to be the signatures of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston S. Churchill. Since Mr. Roosevelt assures us, however, that no such document ever existed, the natural assumption is that the state department made a mistake. Seeking the cause of such an error, I turned back to see where the state department got its information. Answer: "House Document 358, 77th Cong., 1st sess., being 'Message of President Roosevelt to the Congress, August 21, 1941, Embodying Text of the Atlantic Charter.'" Does the President, like Mr. James, find himself unreadable?

MODERN MOUSTIQUITIES DEPARTMENT.

The light hearted and light headed Moustique, whose contributions accent the "Holiday" end of this column's caption, wonders why any one wants a library when a book of quotations is "just as good for all practical purposes." Her favorite is the Oxford, because, she says, "all I do is look up an author's name, and right under it I find everything he ever said that's worth repeating."

Moustique is concentrating on the one-liners, whose names are printed as big as Shakespeare's, while their works are condensed to a phrase or two—such as Henry Ford's, "History is bunk," or Anita Loos', "Gentlemen prefer blondes." But the author she likes best, based on his Oxford representation, is one Henry J. Sayers, whose output is a single hyphenated word which drove Moustique to moustiquate her muse thus:

O, Chief of Sayers, Henry J.,
Say again your merry say!
Tune it to a roundelay,
Let us dance it if we may
To a rhythm blithe and gay!
Henry, just what did you say?
ANSWER: It goes this-a-way—
"Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay."

WELL SAID DEPARTMENT.

[To be read after filling out your 1944 income tax form.]

I cannot afford to waste my time making money.—Agassiz.

Money is more trouble than it's worth.—Horace Greeley.

Never do anything for money.—Diogenes Laertius.

Money, thou bane of bliss and source of woe.—George Herbert.

Let us despise money.—St. John Chrysostom.

He that hath no money needeth no purse.—Thomas Draxe.

THE JUNIOR BOOKSHELF

By Agatha L. Shea.

TITLE.	SUBJECT.	VERDICT.
"THIS IS THE WORLD," by Josephine van Dolzen Pease. [Rand McNally, $2.50.]	A colorful picture fact book telling about the earth, the people on it, and the similarity of all people's needs for food, etc.	Just exactly the right kind of book to introduce geography to the beginning reader with its attractive pictures and simple text.
"TWO YOUNG CORSICANS," by Anna Bird Stewart. [Lippincott. $2.]	A story of life on Corsica in which the young hero and his pet pony play a prominent part. Sheep herding, sports, and other details of everyday life make an interesting picture.	Altho not a fast action story, this is excellent reading, with good background and better than usual characterization. For the middle grades.
"FUN WITH CHEMISTRY," by Mae and Ira Freeman. [Random House, $1.25.]	A companion book to "Fun with Science," illustrating basic principles of chemistry and suggesting experiments for youthful investigators.	An extremely usable book for home use, as material for the experiments can readily be found there. For 10 to 12 year old group.

University's Role Viewed by Scholar

"MISSION OF THE UNIVERSITY," by José Ortega y Gasset. [Princeton University Press, $2.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark.

Jose Ortega y Gasset.

This little volume of a mere 100 pages [30 of which are given over to a biographical and interpretative introduction by the translator, Mr. Howard Lee Nostrand], composed of material originally presented in lecture form to the Federation of University Students of Madrid in 1930, is a valuable contribution to a subject on which so dismally much is written almost daily, and about which so dismally little is ever done that doesn't actually make things academic worse instead of better.

Ortega, the philosopher, essayist, teacher, and journalist, is best known to American readers for his highly provocative, incisive, disturbingly cogent "Revolt of the Masses," published in this country in 1932. His last book to be made available in English was "Toward a Philosophy of History" [1941].

"Mission of the University" makes up in concentration and slashing candor, in brilliant aphorism and often deadly wit, what it lacks in completeness of detail and adequate elaboration of the book's central theme. Despite a certain amount of dangerously foggy talk about the desirability of modern man's living at "the level of the ideas of his time," and a tendency to overplay, in Spenglerian fashion, the concept of destiny [cf. Wave of the Future], we can honestly recommend this book to all persons who feel, as we do, that where education used to be a simple, but strenuous and effective, matter of Mark Hopkins, the student, and the log, today it becomes harder and harder to find either Mark Hopkins or the student. The log, at last reports, was more than holding its own.

Radio Programs Vividly Illumine America's Story

"THE AMERICAN STORY," by Archibald MacLeish. [Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $2.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn.

The contents of this book is a series of broadcasts known to radio listeners of NBC's University of the Air last spring as "The American Story." Mr. MacLeish decribes their theme as the American experience.

In them Mr. MacLeish, working with his associate, Muna Lee, has done an unusual thing and done it well. He has taken the original narratives and first person accounts of the early voyages, settlements, and wars of the Americas, used excerpts interwoven by a narrator, and made them vivid and alive.

Thus, his first program, "The Admiral," has Columbus himself reading the words he wrote as the long nights and long days over the long expanse of water went on and on. And in one showing the American literature innate in the names of America's rivers, the voyagers themselves, whose names or fancies or loves became the names of the rivers, speak of what they saw.

There is one broadcast on Amerigo Vespucci, and on the Inca gods that betrayed Montezuma, and on the many dead of the Indian wars, and of the wonder and trials and fortitude of the early settlers, south as well as north, and of the fight for liberty of such forgotten Americans as Nat Bacon of Virginia and Jose Antonio Galan of Socorro.

Occasionally Mr. MacLeish's style gets both tedious and horribly precious, but he can't hurt the original source material—or if he can, he has not. In general these 10 sketches are as excellent as the idea behind them—of telling Americans about America.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

HOW the great books of all time are being brought to the attention of Chicago adults was explained last Tuesday by Mortimer Adler, author of "How to Read a Book" and "How to Think About War and Peace." . . . The explaining took place at a luncheon given by Rose Oller Harbaugh and other Marshall Field & Co. executives for a group of literary critics, and afterwards before a crowd gathered in that store's book department.

Last fall, said Prof. Adler, the University of Chicago started, at the University college, 18 S. Michigan av., a course of study and discussion providing instruction in the art of reading, and bringing adults into first hand contact with basic sources of philosophical ideas and literary masterpieces of western culture. . . . Starting tomorrow evening, and lasting until mid-June, a new course will be offered and will include masterpieces of Sophocles, Plato, Milton, Voltaire, Aristotle, Lucretius, St. Thomas, Mill, Tawney, and Thucydides. . . . The main idea will be to examine recurrent human problems and lasting human values, as set forth by writers from Plato's time to the present.

While it isn't yet official, the prospect is that the confusion resulting from separate annual Midwestern Writers' conferences in Chicagoland will be done away with this year. . . . Officers of the competing groups have been conferring for several weeks, and have virtually settled upon a plan for holding a spring session on the downtown campus of Northwestern university, and a summer session on the Evanston campus. . . . The work of the two will be coördinated instead of scattered.

Some weeks ago this column printed a letter from Charles L. Bosson of San Francisco, asking for information about Charles Dickens' brother, Augustus, who, supposedly, came to the United States and died in Illinois, and about other members of the family. . . . The responses have been many and varied.

William Shaw of Chicago writes this department: "Some 45 years ago a Mr. Dickens, who was a descendant of the novelist, lived on Chicago's south side, and later, as recently as 20 years or so ago, at least one of the Dickens line lived in Milwaukee. There may have been more there, and the family may be still represented in that city. These persons, as you can see by reference to the dates in Mr. Bosson's letter, came to America later than did Augustus. One or more of them may have been among the three beautiful children mentioned in the Mackenzie history."

Mary Dewhu[illegible]ames of Mount Carroll, Ill., writes: "I haven't anything on the generation you are looking up, but will give you the address of two Dickens descendants who may know the family history. B. A. Dickens was pastor of the Methodist church in Lanark, Ill., from about 1897 to 1902 or 1903. He then went to Plainfield. He was said to be a second cousin of the novelist. Some said either he or his father was a nephew of Charles. He had five children: Bertha, Rienette, Wiley, Charles, and one whose name I do not know. The son Charles married Nellie Carbaugh of Lanark. He had a furious temper, and shamefully abused his wife on many occasions. I knew her family, and her father several times made arrangements for her to get a divorce, but at the last moment she always refused and went back to her husband. He seemed to have 'had a way' with him; he always talked her out of a separation. Both have long since died. Bertha Dickens' married name is Glasgow, and Rienette's is Mather, and they both live in Plainfield."

And here's another note from Mr. Bosson: "Since my original letter appeared in your column I have heard from a number of persons. Most of them are somewhat vague about Dickens' brother, but one of them, Edmund Holt of San Diego, writes me that a 'black sheep' son of Charles Dickens also emigrated to Illinois, after having lived in Australia and various other parts of the world, and he died in the home of a Dr. Jamieson in Moline, Ill."

"It was news to me," Mr. Bosson adds, "that a brother and a son, Francis Jeffrey Dickens, were both buried in Illinois."

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

FROM England this week have come two interesting letters, one from Staff Sgt. John Storm, who was the Chicago representative of the Houghton Mifflin company, Boston publisher, the other from Frank Swinnerton, one of England's best known novelists.

John Storm, in a two part V-mail letter, told me things I wanted to know about literary England—items you'll be interested in, too, I know:

"Literary England today is a little duller than it has been in peace time. There is little of distinction being done which does not have a direct bearing on the war in one of its aspects. The paper shortage has done more harm to creative publishing than it has in our country. There does not seem to be the slightest incentive to explore. The booksellers are just doling out vast amounts of pamphlets and political tracts, plus the Gollannez monthly shocker from the Left. Nothing has been done about making the books which they do publish attractive in their manufacture—format, design, etc. The English seem to be leaving their literature to the post-war period, as they are leaving everything else to that period.

Reverse Lend-Lease.

"The most important literary event in England seems to be the awarding of the Louis B. Mayer prize to Elizabeth Goudge for 'Green Dolphin Street,' in Hollywood, and in their casual way the British are quite willing to accept the award as something of reverse lend-lease.

"The theater is an amazing revelation of the state of literary production today. Aside from a new [and incidentally very amusing] play of James Bridie's, the entire current season is made up of revivals. Everything from Shakespeare to Pinero and Shaw. But such a thing as a play by a new author or a new work by a contemporary author there is not. Not that I'm relegating Shaw to limbo—I mean, of course, YOUNG authors.

"The American G. I. in England reads modern America. He has no notion of what England is producing these days. The boys in our company stick to Arthur Train, Marquis James, Philip Wylie, and James M. Cain for their literary fare. Just now there is a new interest in Clyde Brion Davis by virtue of the fact that a copy of 'Leo McGuire' found its way into the company. This pleases me, because I've always thought that Davis deserved a far better and larger public than he had in America. But it is sad to think that when all these men are back in America again the last thing they'll do is read a book. They are reading now because it is hard to bear the inertia of garrison life."

"Hunnish Contrivances."

Frank Swinnerton's letter is characteristically British. . . . His lovely house, "Old Tokefield," is two Elizabethan houses cleverly put together to make a commodious, wholly modern house. . . . But the "atmosphere" of the Elizabethan period is intact. . . . It is in a little town in Surrey, on what Frank Swinnerton used aptly to describe as a "clean shaven cricket field." . . . Over Surrey have roared for the war's duration the planes bound for London's destruction. . . . Quite casually [and heroically] he mentions "some narrow escapes from Hunnish contrivances," and tells much more than the words say in: "We have just got rid of a small horde of plasterers who have been restoring us to normal and have been five weeks on the job." . . . No syllable of complaint or even of discouragement in the letter, nor description of the havoc that necessitated the labors of a small horde of plasterers for five weeks. . . . The letter was full of news about his adored little girl, Olivia, whom I have never seen, and the garden which I love and have not seen for too many years. . . . "Already the first tips of next year's daffodils are thru," he wrote on Dec. 11.

Be Sure You Get the MERRIAM-Webster

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY Second Edition UNABRIDGED

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

EVEN though you may encounter some delay in obtaining a copy of Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition, you will be wise if you wait for it rather than accept a substitute. Ask for the genuine Webster—the MERRIAM-Webster—identified by the circular trade-mark; the standard for State Supreme Courts, the Government Printing Office, newspaper offices, colleges and schools. It contains 3,350 pages, illustrations for 12,000 terms, and a total of 600,000 entries—122,000 more than any other dictionary.

Today's demand for the MERRIAM-Webster is heavier than at any time in our history and, hampered by paper restrictions, we find it difficult to supply everyone promptly. So please be patient. Place your order now with your bookseller or stationer and he will get your copy as soon as he can.

Clarence Budington Kelland, whose new novel, "Alias Jane Smith," is reviewed on this page by Kenneth Horan.

These Two Novels Are Escape Fare

"TOMORROW SOMETIMES COMES," by Elizabeth Carfrae. [Putnam, $2.]

"ALIAS JANE SMITH," by Clarence Budington Kelland. [Harper, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

Dedicated to the picturesque idea that love makes the world go round, these two novels are escape literature de luxe. That is to say, they affirm and reaffirm that everything comes out right in the end.

The course of true love runs like a broken-down jallopy in Miss Carfrae's pleasant extravaganza, and then it takes a turn for the better and becomes a fine and handsome racing car. Lilla, the heroine, was tired of her husband, particularly tired of supporting him, and after his accident, when he was entirely dependent on her, she met a young captain who had lost his arm at Dunkirk, and fell in love for the first time in her life.

The previous affair had been something quite different. She dashed off for a little journey with the captain, but returned at once, to continue cajoling the invalid, all the time hoping for a break. And that's what she got. And that's the way things turn out, says the author, if you just keep hoping. Your husband of his own free will insists or your packing up.

Now, "Alias Jane Smith" is of quite another color. It might have been written by McCutcheon and called "Beverly of Graustark." The plot is quite different, but the characters are all of noble birth, great and fabulous people without a kingdom since the war, glamorous and impractical and charming. They have brought themselves and their problem to New York, home of the refugee, and a young American major undertakes to straighten out the tangled skein of aristocracy plus bankruptcy, with love, as usual, finding the way.

New interpretations of the most ancient of themes, both books make light and agreeable reading.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

READERS who are intimidated by the pontifications of highbrow critics, and are misled thereby into distrust of their own taste, are invited to cheer up. Their declaration of independence has been written, their bill of rights established. Their doughty champion is Curt J. Ducasse, professor of philosophy at Brown university, whose militant little volume, "Art, the Critics, and You" [Oskar Piest], is the most stimulating discussion of the old question, "What is Art?" that I have seen in a month of Sundays.

There is no such thing as good taste and bad taste in the last analysis; there is only your taste and mine. We may differ or we may agree, but nothing is proved by either circumstance except—as in the notorious case of pease pudding—that some like it hot and some like it cold. Using an impressive technical jargon, the professional intellectuals wrap the arts in a mantle of mystery and foster the belief that art is created for a species of initiates called critics, not for ordinary people. There are no final authorities in matters of taste, however; in the end the critics depend only on their own. And they are no more right than you are; they are only louder and, in general, more articulate. Don't let them scare you. Your own taste is perfectly respectable and it is to be cultivated by using it, not by letting some one else put it in a straitjacket.

Art Is As You Wish It.

There is much more to the book than that, of course; I have picked out what it pleased me to pick out and I have oversimplified it horribly. I wonder if the professor would stand for the broad assertion that art is what you wish it to be and where you find it. No matter, you had better read the book if you are interested in the theory or criticism of art. It is a reassuring document for those of us who frequently find pleasure in what critics condemn and not infrequently dislike what critics applaud. This old-fashioned department had been confirmed in its unfashionable predilections and will continue, as always, to like what it likes because it likes it.

[Item, this department likes Tschaikowsky, Anatole France, and Orvieto wine and has only contempt for the alabaster snobs whose lips curl exquisitely when these names are pronounced.]

The function of the critic in Dr. Ducasse's perhaps Utopian philosophy of art appreciation is not very commanding. Stripped of his authority over your taste, he is given the humbler role of guide and barker in a great gallery where there are excitements and discoveries for everybody. Your commentator agrees in principle, as the diplomats say, as long as it is understood that he will go right ahead, week after week, in this space, offering his usual sound advice—gratis and copiously—to all and sundry.

Blind Man's Thriller.

There is a delightful paragraph for detective story addicts in Terence L. Connolly's "Francis Thompson: In His Paths" [Bruce], which should be quoted for those who might otherwise miss it. Father Connolly of Boston, in his sentimental pilgrimage to the scenes associated with the poet who wrote "The Hound of Heaven," came ultimately to Newcastle to visit one of Thompson's surviving classmates, Father Adam Wilkinson, then 80 years old and quite blind. He found the old priest sitting before a blazing hearth fire, reading a detective story in Braille.

"When we entered the room," writes Father Connolly, "he rose quickly from his armchair and greeted us warmly as he ran his finger across the page, saying with a smile: 'Just a minute, father, please. I must not lose my place. O, my! They're hot on the trail of the murderer.' As he spoke, he marked the place in some mysterious way, placed the book on the mantel over the fire, and extended his hand in welcome."

A charming episode. It would be interesting to know what book the old priest was reading. And how do you suppose he marked his place in the volume?

Some Notable Christmas Loot.

This department's Christmas loot contains a number of fascinating books and pamphlets, privately printed, including a pleasing new edition of "A Visit from St. Nicholas," done at the Hyacinth Press for Edouard and Elizabeth Diamond—who are, in fact, themselves the Hyacinth Press. Only 75 copies of the bibelot were printed. By a happy coincidence this brochure brought the number of historical specimens of the ballad in my collection to 75.

Henry Dierkes' attractive volume of verse, "Emerge with the Swallow," also arrived shortly before Christmas. He printed it himself and bound it, too, at the Living Poetry Press in La Porte, Ind. It contains, among other pleasant matters, the Stevensonian sonnet, "Christmas at the Admiral Benbow," which was scrapbooked by many readers after its first appearance in the Line-o'-Type column of this newspaper. Mr. Dierkes' Christmas card, it should be added, was a sonnet celebrating another famous literary setting; the poem has to do with the Persian slipper in which Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson kept their tobacco, in Baker st. It was read by the poet at the annual dinner of the Baker Street Irregulars.

Notable Christmas booklets were received from Lloyd Emerson Siberell of Cincinnati, whose Auburncrest Library issued a delightful edition of Lewis Mumford's "Thomas Beer, Aristocrat of Letters," and Lawrence Oakley Cheever of Ottumwa, whose seasonal greeting was an appreciation, with illustrations in color, of the work of Will Simmons, the artist. Two delectable volumes of belles-lettres, "Visitation at Thatchcot" and "No More Dogs at Thatchcot," carried the seasonal greetings of Hal and Violet Trovillion, the well known book lovers and book producers of Herrin, Ill.

Outstanding among Christmas booklets this season is the greeting of the publishing house of Henry Holt & Co., a private printing of a new poem by Robert Frost. That is an item destined for a happy future in the auction rooms some day—say 100 years hence—when it has all but disappeared.

Collecting Christmas booklets [not only when they are by Robert Frost] is a comparatively new development in bibliomania, but the subject has already produced its bibliographer in Walter Klinefelter. Early specimens of this form of greeting are obviously difficult to acquire; indeed, the more interesting ones are of quite desperate rarity, when they are not impossible. Rarest of all Christmas brochures, it may be supposed, are those made by Frank Dempster Sherman for his brother, Frederic, over a number of years—they are reported by Mr. Klinefelter—in an autograph edition of just one copy each.

College Inn Is Jumping to Cab Calloway's Jive

He's First in Sherman's '45 Swing Parade

By Will Davidson.

Cab Calloway.
[Bloom Photo.]

If you've got your boots on, Jack, you dig the mitt pounding down at the Sherman's frolic pad these early dims. The chicks and gates are togged to the bricks and muggin' lightly and politely to the dicty swing of that kopasetic Calloway.

The Cab situation in College Inn, in other words, is in the groove. No trouble going for a long ride there. Ever since New Year's eve the joint has been jumpin' and the Hi-de-ho man has started the self-styled Cradle of Swing off on a policy of "forte jive in forty-five."

The Cab is quite at home in the loop, as he used to haunt the jam sessions there and on the south side long before he became a top ranking swingman himself. For a while he even thought of becoming a lawyer, but toots won over torts and he turned to music as his profession. The story of his "hi-de-ho" trademark—how he ad libbed the meaningless sounds when he forgot a lyric—is well known. So is the story of Minnie the Moocher and Smokey Joe, musical characters indelibly identified with Cab.

This trip Cab is displaying his musical versatility with some arrangements in the symphonic vein—similar to the unforgettable construction he gave "Nain Nain" last time out. He's also sporting the vocals of a new chirp, Dottie Saulter, who was with him last year as a dancer.

Too late for comment, the College Inn models returned to the Sherman Friday night to augment the floor show which features the Marimba co-eds

Calloway's inaugural of the year sets the pace for a swing parade that includes Hal McIntyre on Feb. 2; Boyd Raeburn on March 2; Woody Herman on March 16; Jimmy Dorsey on May 11, Vaughn Monroe on June 22; and Les Brown on July 20. There are several dates in there yet to be filled.

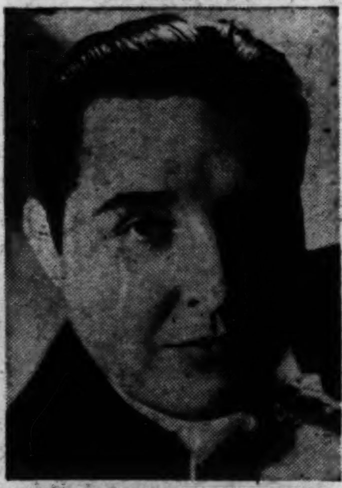
OPERATIC



Robert Fitz-Gerald, who has been heard on W-G-N, is appearing in "Moments of Opera," the unusual show being presented at Colosimo's.
[Maurice Photo.]

Carmen Cavallaro, who is appearing in person at the Palmer House and on the screen in "Hollywood Canteen" is due for a speaking part in a forthcoming film, "The Time, the Place, and the Girl." Whether he goes directly into that work after closing in the Empire room on Jan. 24 depends upon a New York hotel contract that still is in the air.

Carmen has endeared himself to Chicago cafe goers during two happy engagements in the Palmer House's great green and gold room. A superb musicianship, wedded to and warmed by a distinctly charming personality and an unusual modesty, makes Carmen one of those dynamic yet approachable artists that are all too rare in show business. He is a tremendous attraction for the recording companies, too, as his albums are among the best sellers. His 12 inch recording of "Enlloro," the dramatic Afro-Cuban masterpiece he is featuring in the current Empire room show, is one of the really great modern musical performances.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Seems like the days last year when the 30 per cent tax was being first rumored. There's talk that the night clubs will be closed; that they won't be closed; that they'll be closed during mid-week only. None of the talk is founded on anything but rumor, and so far the cafe men aren't worrying too much about it. . . . Tuesday will feature Mel Cooper's arrival at the Pump room. That Cooper booking is one of those mysterious show business moves that every now and then confound the critics by turning out spectacularly well. Carl Sands has been doing what most of us consider a well nigh perfect job in the Pump. He is an excellent musician, has a superb band. His tempos are varied, and to his everlasting glory avoid the stilted mediocrity of those which are usually termed "society" rhythms. Carl has earned himself a good break, and I hope this leads to it. I hope, too, that Mr. Cooper is as good as his friends assure me he is. . . . Word from Charlie Wright and Dawn Roland is that their option at the Bellerive hotel, Kansas City, has been picked up. . . . Ray Benson is at the Muehlebach hotel there. . . . Dorothy Dorben is creating her fifth line of girls, and will soon be giving folks from Texas to Florida to New York to Detroit to Chicago evidence of her imaginative talent. . . . Bert [Abracadabra] Allerton's new stunt smells, you might say. It involves a toy skunk. . . . Best news of the New Year came bright and early Tuesday morning when Al Fuller, the Palmer House publicity and advertising executive called up. After a too risky tussle with illness he's back from Mayo's a healthier and hearty as ever gent.

The new band in the La Salle hotel's Pan-American room is Florian Zabach. He's a violinist you've probably heard on W-G-N. . . . The Stevens hotel's "Rollicking Rhapsody" ends Jan. 25. . . . If they decide finally to draft us defectives at least we won't be branded 4F-er.

No Torrid Love Scenes, Rick Warns MacMurray

HOLLYWOOD, (AP). — Fred MacMurray, writing to Eddie Rickenbacker, whom he is to portray in the film, "Captain Eddie," asked him if he had any special wishes to communicate to him. "Don't make the love scenes torrid; I was a reserved but persistent lover," Rickenbacker wrote him.

Notes of the Theater.

Lois Wilson.
[Vandamm photo.]

"Chicken Every Sunday," due at the Blackstone Jan. 22, blithely says it hopes to outrun "Good Night Ladies," a statement which will cause a hollow chuckle from "Kiss and Tell," which came so near, and yet so far, toward toppling that 100 week record. Anyway, the boarding house comedy was devised from Rosemary Taylor's book by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, who wrote "Casablanca," and are entitled to a rosy outlook. Edward Gross is the producer, Howard Bay did the setting, and leading roles are played by Lois Wilson, Sidney Blackmer, and Suzanne Kaaren. Mr. Gross now wants a dramatization of Miss Taylor's newer book, "Ridin' the Rainbow."

Some brisk revision of the Studebaker schedule sends "Kiss and Tell" on tour after Saturday night, Jan. 20, and shoots in Katherine Dunham's "Tropical Revue" for two weeks opening Jan. 22, which fills the gap before the return of Ruth Gordon in "Over Twenty-One," due Feb. 5. Miss Dunham again invades the equatorial regions of the dance, apparently with those new numbers she was rehearsing and adding last fall.

Jack O'Brian's AP story on Jean Dalrymple, New York theatrical press agent, sounds like a scenario. Seems the blonde Miss D lives in a whole house on 54th st., never lifts her pretty blonde head from her silken pillow before noon, calls a direct wire to her office and dictates letters in bed, then manages to get to "21" in time for lunch with a celebrity. She got her start, he says, playing the market when she was a $50 a week secretary.

Joseph Dunninger, "the master mentalist," will appear at Orchestra hall Jan. 22 at 8:15 for what is described as a full evening of mind reading. Mr. Dunninger has been at this sort of thing for 35 years, since he got along fine in school by getting his answers straight from the teacher. He has read minds at long distance for many of the world's famous, has appeared six times at the White House, and is said to be an ardent crusader against fraudulent toilers in the occult field.

Jane Wyatt has joined the cast of "Hope for the Best," and will co-star with Franchot Tone.

Sgt. George Reeves, late of the Paramount lot and the picture, "So Proudly We Hail," is one of the 300 A. A. F. members of the cast of "Winged Victory" now starting to pack after the longest stop in their limited tour since the show left Broadway. The big musical starts its fifth and final week at the Civic Opera house, then goes on to Detroit, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington, and Buffalo.

Speed your success.. BY KNOWING HOW TO READ BETTER and FASTER

● Stop envying the successful men and women who can "read a page at a time." This new book enables you to read as fast as 600 words a minute, and the results are — more reading for you in less time, more reading with less eyestrain, and more profit and pleasure from everything you read.

SUCCESSFUL PEOPLE ARE WELL READ. They know that the things they haven't time to read may cost them money. They keep up with the latest magazines and the important best-sellers. They read a newspaper every day. They're busy people, but not too busy to read. Reading brings them profit, prestige and pleasure. A WELL-READ PERSON IS POPULAR. The men and women who get around have something to say. They can fit into any group, take part in any conversation. They can discuss the important issues. Others respect their opinions. They are interesting, convincing, witty talkers. They attract people and make friends easily.

9 out of 10 Are Slow Readers.

Those at the top know this. But how many people can read like the wind? Only one in ten. Actually nine out of ten persons read a mere 200 words a minute. Frequently you hear it said, "I can't read more because I don't have time." There is a reason for this. Until very recently Americans were taught to read letter by letter, word by word. Thus many readers who should easily sail along at 600 words a minute are actually plodding — still reading at half speed or worse. Do you yourself go back over sentences? Do you "hear" the words as you read them? Do you move your lips? If you do any one of these things, you can double your speed in a month — and perhaps treble it.

Rapid Reading Is Easy

At Dartmouth College, and other colleges, reading classes were started. The whole art of rapid and efficient reading was reduced to a few scientific principles. Expensive machines like the flash-meter, telebinocular, and ophthalmoscope were installed for special training. Then tests were made. The results were astounding. It was found that in five or six weeks an average person could increase his speed from 200 to more than 600 words a minute. Even more amazing was the discovery that fast readers learned more, remembered more, and got far more enjoyment than slow readers. More and more, such courses were given, but still only a lucky few could learn the new way through this sensational, tested and absolutely scientific method.

At Last Everyone Can Read Rapidly

Now at last these new scientific discoveries are available to all. No longer must you take a college course to find the key to better and faster reading. This book is all you need. Step-by-step you follow its simple instructions. First, it scientifically analyzes your present reading habits. Then it shows you why it is much easier and better to read faster. It demonstrates the way your eyes move when you read, and shows you how to use them to take in more than one word at a time . . . how to pick out groups of words . . . how to "absorb" the printed page. By the time you have finished two chapters you will have improved to the point where you can say that you are reading almost "a page at a time."

Self-Teaching, Self-Testing

Formerly, skill in rapid reading was acquired by a few after long years of practice. But HOW TO READ BETTER AND FASTER changes all that. Now in just five weeks, or less you can become expert. This book is completely self-teaching and self-testing. It is packed with reading exercises and tests which not only make you a better reader, but are wholly enjoyable for their own sake. You learn by doing — quickly, pleasantly, painlessly. Send for this book today — and be among the first to enjoy the pleasure and profit of reading faster and better.

SEND NO MONEY 5 DAYS' FREE EXAMINATION

However, better reading will bring you more pleasure and profit from life. A postage stamp will bring you HOW TO READ BETTER AND FASTER. Examine this book, try it absolutely free for five days. If, at the end of that time, you decide you don't want to keep it, just send it back. Otherwise send a check or money order for $2.50 plus a few cents postage charges. Tear out, sign and mail the coupon at right. Do it today.

Do you read with your lips?

If you move your lips when you read you are making the mistake of saying the words to yourself as you go along. This one bad habit prevents you from reading more than 250 words a minute, a slow rate of speed. This is the wrong way to read.

your ears?

The auditory reader "hears" a page of print. He pronounces the words in his mind, though his tongue and lips are quiet. Unfortunately this type of reader retards his own speed and comprehension. This is the wrong way to read.

or your eyes?

The visual reader has mastered the art of reading. He says nothing, hears nothing, sees all. Swiftly, comfortably, efficiently, his mind absorbs print the way a blotter soaks up water. He can easily read from 400-600 words a minute. This is the right way to read . . . and HOW TO READ BETTER AND FASTER the book that will show you how.

5 amazing weeks that will revolutionize your reading habits!

Double your reading speed . . . Read with more comfort and enjoyment . . . Increase your reading vocabulary . . . Increase your powers of concentration.

1ST WEEK . . . You begin this fascinating course in the art of reading by self-analyzing your present reading habits . . . learn how average readers double their speed in a few days of training . . . Discover the two words that are the whole secret of rapid, efficient reading.

2ND WEEK . . . Now you master the mechanics of reading . . . Train your eyes to pick up "handfuls" of words at a time . . . Begin a series of reading exercises which break any bad reading habits you may have . . . Use the "flash-meter" card, a handy device which does for you what special equipment costing thousands of dollars has done for others . . . Take a check-up test which tells you how you have already improved. The results will amaze and delight you.

3RD WEEK . . . How to build a large reading vocabulary . . . Know the natural way of meeting and remembering new words . . . Here you will find a list of the 500 words most used by well-known writers today in fiction and journalism . . . A method of mastering them all in a few minutes a day for 20 days.

4TH WEEK . . . How to sharpen your intellectual curiosity. Now you begin an adventure in reading that pays profits . . . The twin keys to concentration . . . How to read and enjoy difficult books — the books that increase your knowledge and make money for you.

5TH WEEK . . . How to develop habits of active thinking and sound reasoning . . . This week you discover how it is unnecessary to read everything to be well-read . . . The art of skipping . . . How to find "blueprints" of newspapers, magazines, and books, and how to use them to find the things it will pay you to read.

FASTER, BETTER READING FOR YOU, OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

"A helpful, fascinating, thoroughly practical book. It will show you how to read and remember twice as much as you ever have before and in half the time."
—WILFRED FUNK.

About the author NORMAN LEWIS

There have been many books on reading but none until NORMAN LEWIS' HOW TO READ BETTER AND FASTER told you in detail about the technique of reading — how to get the most out of it with the least time and trouble. Lewis is the author of Power with Words, and co-author of 30 Days to a More Powerful Vocabulary. In his own adult English classes he saw that slow readers were badly handicapped. And he did something about it. His How to Read Better and Faster is based on the scientific techniques the author observed and tested in reading clinics throughout America. Religion Is Viewed from Two Angles

"THE ECONOMIC ORDER AND RELIGION," by Frank H. Knight and Thornton W. Merriam. [Harper, $3.]

Reviewed by Edw. Wagenknecht.

Here is a kind of printed debate between a professor of the social sciences at the University of Chicago and the former chairman of the board of religion at Northwestern. After a brief introduction, written jointly, each advocates his own ideas separately, at some length, then writes again, more briefly, in rebuttal of the other's views.

The title is misleading. Merriam does not confine himself in the main to the "Economic Ideals of Liberal Christianity," but Knight is largely concerned with the question of whether liberalism and Christianity are compatible. He decides that they are not, and he attacks Christianity for its "moralism," its dogmatism, its quietism, its sentimental and undiscriminating application of the principle of "love," and its adherence to unbelievable creeds and an untenable world-view.

In the debate, much energy goes into the definition of terms. Knight insists upon defining the Christian religion in historic and New Testament terms—[his interpretations of these are often questionable and one-sided] —while Merriam interprets it in the light of contemporary faith and practice, frankly scrapping the teachings of its Founder in, for example, the matter of nonviolence.

The discussion is academic in both the good and the bad sense of that term. "Light, not heat" is a good motto, as far as it goes, but important life-matters are under consideration in this book, and men do not commit their lives to a faith until they have been stirred by it. It is probably no accident that the "Christian" Merriam should have more fervor than the "Liberal" Knight; but few readers will be really excited by any of these pages.

A Catholic View of Dark, Hidden Forces of Evil

"THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY," by Paul Hanly Furfey. [Bruce, $2.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil.

The author of this book is head of the department of sociology at the Catholic University of America, and he presents a strictly Catholic view of the dark and hidden forces of evil which, he says, have created the present world condition.

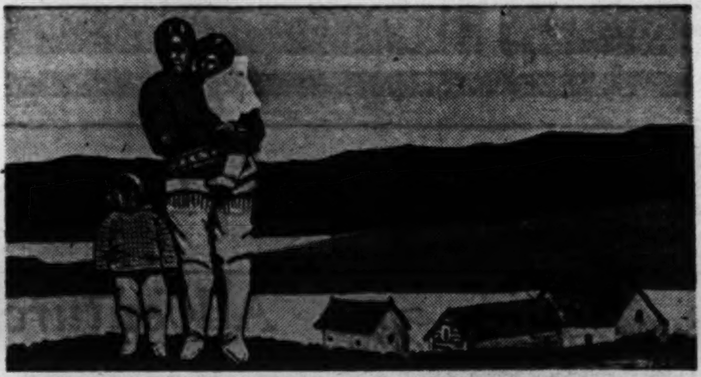
Father Furfey rejects the widely accepted conception of morality as behavior in conformity with the mores, adducing as his argument for such rejection that when morality is based on custom, evil is likely to result. For example, he suggests, when a majority believes in racial discrimination, such an action becomes moral. This, he asserts, is not an ethical viewpoint, but a negation of ethics.

The author rises to a prophetic fervor at times, particularly in his chapter on "The Mammon of Wickedness"—"You cannot serve God and mammon," where he makes it plain that the correct version of the familiar quotation is true: it is not "Money is the root of all evil," but "The love of money is the root of all evil."

Altho readers may disagree with many of the statements made, the book must make thoughtful persons ponder, for the problem of evil is a real problem, to which some treatment must be applied.

Sixth Printing.

A sixth printing of "Earth and High Heaven," by Gwethalyn Graham [Lippincott], brings the total of this best seller to 540,000 copies printed.



Jacket design for "Within the Circle: Portrait of the Arctic," by Evelyn Stefansson, wife of the famous explorer. The book will be published Jan. 15 by Scribner's.

Jordan Omits Some Details in His Picture of Germany

"BEYOND ALL FRONTS," by Max Jordan. [Bruce, $3.]

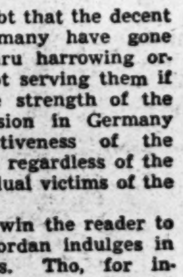
Reviewed by Sigrid Schultz.

A photographer who deliberately takes a poorly focused picture to hide some of the blemishes of his subject may achieve a dreamy, artistic effect, but his work cannot serve as a document for men and women who want to know the truth. A writer who deliberately omits important facts from what is supposed to be a factual report on events which he witnessed is bound to present a hazy picture, possibly even a misleading one. The matter becomes sorely puzzling when you know that the writer is fully aware of facts which he suppressed.

The book "Beyond All Fronts," by Max Jordan, is one of these hazy photographs. It is surprising because Mr. Jordan knew the German situation well in interwar years and after the outbreak of World War II. He started as a writer on the Berliner Tageblatt, then joined the Hearst staff and later became NBC's representative in Europe.

In those days when in Berlin, Mr. Jordan often bemoaned the fact that the forces of peace in Germany were neither numerous nor strong enough to win the upper hand. Nevertheless, in his book, which is a report of events he witnessed, Mr. Jordan seeks to convince the reader that today, after they have been decimated by the Nazis and war, these same groups represent a tremendous power on which we can reckon for the building of a better world.



Max Jordan.

There is no doubt that the decent elements in Germany have gone and are going thru harrowing ordeals, but it is not serving them if you minimize the strength of the forces of aggression in Germany and the ineffectiveness of the forces of decency, regardless of the heroism of individual victims of the Nazis.

In an effort to win the reader to his theory Mr. Jordan indulges in glaring omissions. Tho, for instance, he refers to "his friend" Von Ossietzki and other men who denounced German secret military activities in the days of the Weimar republic, he sidesteps that very important question of military preparations carried out before Hitler came to power. Because it is hard to fit the events and conversations he reports into the theory he has picked, his book is studded with contradictions which are bound to be confusing to the person in quest of information.

Max Jordan even echoes one of the pet claims of the professional pro-Germans agitating and fomenting confusion in our country, when he asserts that Hitler never secured a majority in the fateful elections of 1932. The truth is that the system of party coalitions prevailed in Germany under the Weimar republic. Tradition had it that the strongest party formed the cabinet with the help of parties in sympathy with its aims. The Nazis developed into the strongest party in Germany, and furthermore they enjoyed the coöperation of the Nationalists under Hugenberg and a good part of the Catholic Centrists led by Von Papen. Ever since October, 1931, the sundry Nationalist groups of Germany were openly allied with the Nazis in the "Harzburg Front."

After Von Papen became chancellor in 1932 he rescinded anti-Nazi measures. From then on any one who could read in Germany—and the Germans are highly literate—knew that to vote for either a Nationalist or a Centrist group meant voting for coöperation with Hitler. This gave Hitler the mastery in Germany. Therefore it is misleading to refer only to the votes for the Nazis. That kind of juggling with facts is typical Goebbels or pan-German technique and definitely harmful to a clear understanding of the forces which led to war.

Tax Guide Written for Retailers' Use

"FAIRCHILD'S INCOME TAX GUIDE FOR RETAILERS," by Harold Gold and Louis Harinoff. [Fairchild, $3.]

This is a sensible guide for the average retailer to assist him in filing his tax return. It covers in detail corporate, partnership and individual return. The retailer should have no difficulty in following its logical presentation of all the elements involved in the form that he is required to file.

The authors illustrate with working examples every phase of the tax return which may possibly puzzle the retailer. Its thoroness not only will serve the immediate occasion but will act as a year around guide on questions which involve a consideration of potential tax liabilities or economies.

ARTHUR BERGHOLZ.

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAYOFF.
"MURDER HAS AN ECHO," by John Notley. [Mystery House, $2.]	Murder of Dr. Starke in chalk quarry followed by revelation that supposedly reputable physician had been deeply engaged in collecting blackmail. Suspects so numerous that local police and Scotland Yard have field day debating clews.	Thoroly baffling puzzle pleasantly set up and narrated. Neat job of arriving at solution. Variety of police characters taking part give tale happily entertaining flavor.

New Steinbeck Book a Best Seller Before Publication

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

JOHN STEINBECK became the first author with a best-selling novel in 1945 when "Cannery Row" appeared Tuesday in a first edition of 100,000 copies. A log jam of additional advance orders awaits the pleasure of printers, whose presses are running right thru the night. Such instantaneous popularity is based on past performances and not on the merits of "Cannery Row," which was read chiefly by booksellers before publication. The consensus of critical opinion is that it is one of Mr. Steinbeck's minor works and that his confessed attempt to let the characters "crawl in by themselves" will confuse some of his admirers. But an author who has so many facets, who can turn from patterned books like "Of Mice and Men" and "The Moon Is Down" to a loosely flowing narrative of day to day activities among half-literate men, is a versatile man.

Time was when Willa Cather and Joseph Hergeshimer would sell 30,000 copies of a novel and led the van, but today that is the total for what is obviously an unsuccessful and scarcely known novel, "It's Always Tomorrow," by Robert St. John. Mr. St. John, who is one of the most modest and unassuming of authors, told me so himself; he also said he didn't think he had been successful in the writing. Several critics who faced him on a radio program reiterated that with such vehemence that the bookstores had calls for the novel the next day, and in two instances friends remarked to me: "The way you people panned the book made me want to read it." So even unfavorable reviewing must stimulate sales.

An Unreal Reality.

Mr. St. John is the war correspondent who wrote "The Land of the Silent People," which won golden opinions. He has a flair for characterizing little people, and altho he lacks John Steinbeck's sureness of touch he knows what he wants to say. Just now he suffers from being so literal in describing people that they do not ring true. If you happen to read "It's Always Tomorrow," which is the tale of a war correspondent's inconclusive wanderings and loves, you may find Polly, the Cockney waitress, either captivating or a bore. And the charge was that she wasn't real. "But I know her personally," protests Mr. St. John. "I saw her again only five weeks ago in London. I tell you she's there, and she's exactly like that."

He tells me that writing is not his immediate aim—at least not writing novels. Just now he is lecturing.

Wanted—A Translator.

George Joel, of Dial Press, tells me that getting books translated is a hard task these days. He has had two writers working on the autobiography of George Grosz, the artist, and both have had to give it up in the middle on account of other activities. One took a job with the OWI and was sent to Africa. He had the translation half done and in the haste of travel lost it. Nothing is probably harder than doing a translation a second time, so he begged off. Now Mr. Joel has to start all over again. "Do you," said George, with a note of hope in his voice, "know a good translator?"

Well, Samuel Putnam is a good translator, especially of French, Italian, and Spanish, and Mr. Joel already has him tied up for a translation of the Italian Taddei's novel, "The Mole in the Pine Tree." Mr. Putnam is also editing Rabelais for the Portable Library of Viking Press.

Sgt. Thomas R. St. George, who wrote "C/O Postmaster," which followed in the wake of "See Here, Private Hargrove" and sold half a million copies, calls his new book "Proceed Without Delay." It is scheduled for publication April 23 by the Thoma sY. Crowell company.

Who Lives in the Village?

Altho Greenwich Village is no longer filled with the literary ferment of 20 years ago, it still shelters many authors and artists, even tho Floyd Dell lives in Washington and "Bobby" Edwards, the minstrel of the Latin quarter, now lives up in New York's 70s. Margaret Carpenter, author of the mystery novel, "Experiment Perilous," which has just been filmed, still lives there and says she has occupied th esame apartment for seven years.

Latest activity of the Writers war board is a dramatization, "The Myth That Threatens America," at the Barbizon Plaza theater Jan. 11. It will be narrated by John Mason Brown and those taking part are Lillian Smith, Christopher La Farge, Eric Johnston, and Rex Stout. The text was arranged by Paul Gallico, Earle McGill, Oscar Hammerstein, and Robert J. Landry.

John Farrar, until recently editor of Farrar & Rinehart and now with OWI, and Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, are beginning a course on modern writing at Town Hall Jan. 9.

Anachronisms Galore.

When "The Late George Apley" was put on the stage and it was announced that the action takes place in 1912—with the epilogue in 1924—the sharp-eyed critics began looking for anachronisms. They found plenty, especially in the text, and now speak of the book as by John P. Marquand and the play as by George Kaufman, who may, or may not, have read the book. At any rate one of the principal topics of discussion is Freud—the daughter of the Apleys talks Freud glibly and the elders are profoundly shocked. The stuff is good theater, but Freud's works had not reached this side in 1912 and were not common talk. Another anachronism was a reference to Felix Frankfurter, teaching at Harvard, the only excuse for which was to carry further the mystification of a Boston Brahmin over an unfamiliar name, which he approves when he learns that Frankfurter is on the Harvard faculty.

Burton Rascoe objected to Apley's use of one copy of Emerson's essays; there is such a copy available now, but in 1912, apparenly, they were still in sets. But the most interesting discovery was that the Atlantic Monthly shown on the stage had the wrong cover design. This was spotted by an employe of the Atlantic's circulation department named Rosie, who sat in the second balcony but had good eyes. The stage manager was not coöperative at first, suspecting a demand for free tickets, but when the Atlantic supplied copies with the right cover he yielded, saying, "What'll they object to next?" Well, the next objection is mine. I don't believe that the giant size brandy glass was in use in the United States in 1912. [Certainly not by me.]

DECEMBER'S BEST MOVIES.

"The Woman in the Window."
"My Pal, Wolf."
"Frenchman's Creek."
"Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo."
"Can't Help Singing."
"Irish Eyes Are Smiling."
"The Great Mr. Handel."

"The Woman in the Window." "'Laura' and 'Double Indemnity' were topnotch yarns dealing with this most fascinating of human defections [murder], and now comes 'The Woman in the Window' to make three of a good thing. . . . The performances of the principals [Edward G. Robinson and Joan Bennett] are peacherino, as is Dan Duryea's crackling impersonation of a blackmailer."

"My Pal, Wolf," starring Sharyn Moffett and Grey Shadow, is "a pleasant, heartwarming interlude between Hollywood murders and technicolor orgies that bluff the sunrise. Sure, take the kids. It would be a shame not to."

• • •

"Frenchman's Creek" is a "17th Century flourish in technicolor, a picaresque romance of a lovely lady who runs away from a dull husband and the amorous rakes of the Restoration and falls headlong in love with a piratical Robin Hood. . . . Supporting cast is hardly the name for some of the experts who keep the tale skimming." It stars Joan Fontaine and Arturo de Cordova.

• • •

"Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo." "You don't think of actors in this picture until it is over—then you realize that Spencer Tracy and Van Johnson have done a splendid job. . . . This picture should be a must and on the way out there should be a bond booth immediately available."

• • •

"Can't Help Singing." "Here, for nearly the price of a battleship, is a big, bulging package right off the Hollywood Christmas tree, containing, if perhaps not the things you most fervently wished for, at least such acceptable gifts as Deanna Durbin and vast panoramas of western landscape, and a tuneful, brand new score by Jerome Kern." Robert Paige has the romantic lead.

"Irish Eyes Are Smiling," is the life story of Ernest R. Ball, composer of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "Mother Machree," etc. The picture "has, in fact, everything you could ask for except the one and only, unforgotten and unforgettable, John McCormack."

• • •

"The Great Mr. Handel," "seemed a bit long, but with stately music to please the ear and handsomely colorful settings to please the eye, discriminating people undoubtedly will enjoy it."

'IRISH EYES ARE SMILING'

Dick Haymes, June Haver and Monty Woolley are starred in "Irish Eyes Are Smiling." At the Garrick.

IN AIR FILM

Van Johnson and Phyllis Thaxter, who play Capt. Ted Lawson and his wife in "30 Seconds Over Tokyo," at United Artists. Miss Thaxter had the title role in the Chicago company of "Claudia."

Oriental theater. Ina Ray Hutton, "queen of the name bands," leads her all-male orchestra in the stage revue. Featured with the band are Bob Alexander, the Harris Trio, and Danny Riccardo, "Romantic Baritone." Augmenting the bill are Coley Worth and Marcia, comedy team; and Carlton Emmy and his Madwags, who engage in hilarious canine capers. Miss Hutton returns to the stage after her recently completed movie, "Ever Since Venus."

Chicago theater. The solid jiving trio of radio, the Dinning Sisters, bring their version of "Don't Fence Me In," "Tabby the Cat" and "You Always Hurt the One You Love" and other songs to the stage show. Lou Breese and his orchestra return with new arrangements of popular numbers, and held over for the third week are Bob Evans and his heckling dummy, Jerry O'Leary; the Chords, musical imitators; and the Five Taylorettes, juvenile tumblers.

• • •

Regal theater. Erskine Hawkins, "Mr. Tuxedo Junction," headlines the show with his new band. Featured with his trumpet solos, Hawkins dominates a revue which includes Jimmie Mitchell and Effie Smith, vocalists; Dod Dodson's "Jungle Jitterbugs," Ralph Brown, Tim Moore, and Crackshot and Vivian.

Notes of Music and Musicians

With another all-Beethoven program as Désiré Defauw's selection for his Thursday-Friday concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, three members of the orchestra will be heard as soloists on the Tuesday afternoon and Saturday night "Pop" concert. For the third concert of his Beethoven cycle Mr. Defauw again has placed two entire symphonies on his list—the Sixth, the "Pastoral," before the intermission, preceded by the "Fidelio" overture, with the Fifth, currently dubbed the "V" for Victory symphony, to conclude.

John Weicher, concertmaster, and Franz Polesny, leader of the second violins, will join forces in the Bach concerto for two violins, in D minor, at the Tuesday afternoon concert. Mr. Defauw will offer a belated novelty in the form of a "Fantasie on Two Popular Walloon Christmas Carols," Opus 24, by Joseph Jongen, a Belgian composer who at last report was director of the Brussels conservatory. Altho some of Jongen's later compositions have been performed at various festivals of contemporary music, the work to be presented by Mr. Defauw dates from 1902. Other music on the Tuesday program will be Haydn's Symphony in G major [No. 13 in the old B. and H. system of numbering still used on Chicago Symphony programs] and selections from Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust."

Hans Basserman, the orchestra's new assistant concertmaster, will make his first appearance as soloist on the orchestra's programs when he plays Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 3, in B minor, at the Saturday night "Pop" concert. Mr. Defauw will conduct, and the orchestra will play Chabrier's "Bourrée Fantasque" and Chausson's Symphony in B flat major.

Mildred Dilling, harpist, will give a joint recital with her sister, Charlene Dilling Brewer, Chicago violinist, at Kimball hall tomorrow night at 8:20. Harry Sukman will be the accompanist. Miss Dilling will play an "Impromptu" by Fauré, a "Bourrée" by Bach, the first movement of a Concerto in C minor by H. Renié, "Prelude" in C major, by Prokofieff, "The Forest Pool" and "Gray Donkeys on the Road to El-Azib" by Tournier, and "Légènde" by Renié. Mrs. Brewer will play Bloch's "Nigun," "March" by Prokofieff-Heifetz, "Pantomime" by De Falla-Kochanski, and Novacek's "Perpetuum Mobile." The two musicians also will be heard in a group of duets which will include a movement of Mozart's Concerto for flute and harp, with the flute part played on the violin.

AT McVICKERS

Teresa Wright shares honors with Gary Cooper and a baby in "Casanova Brown." At McVickers.

Owen Berger, Chicago pianist, whose previous recitals have largely specialized in the works of Beethoven, will be heard in Kimball hall this afternoon at 3:15. The only Beethoven on his program will be the Sonata in E major, Opus 109. He also will play a Passacaglia and Sonata by Handel, two Intermezzi and two Caprriccios by Brahms, Debussy's "Claire de Lune," and Rachmaninoff's Prelude in B flat major.

• • •

Patricia Travers, now 17 and graduated from the wunderkind class, will give her only Chicago violin recital of the season at Orchestra hall next Sunday afternoon, Jan. 14, at 3:30. Miss Travers was for a number of years one of the foremost prodigies of her instrument. Born in Clifton, N. J., of American parents, she began her studies at the age of 4 and two years later made her first public appearance. Her studies were pursued for three years with Jacques Gordon, former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and later with Hans Letz of the Julliard Graduat eschool. Miss Travers has had two appearances as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra and will appear again with the organization at the concert in Milwaukee on Monday, Jan. 15. Her recital program, with Hendrik Endt at the piano, lists Mozart's Sonata No. 15, in B flat major; Wieniawski's Concerto No. 1 in F sharp minor, the first Chicago performance of Walter Piston's Sonata in F major, a group of five dances: Satirical Dance from Shostakovich's "The Bolt," three "Danses Fantastiques" by the same composer, and "Yemaya" by Reyes Camejo, and, to conclude, "La Streghe," by Paganini-Kreisler.

Patricia Travers.

Mischa Elman, violinist, will give a recital in the Temple Sholom concert series on Wednesday at 8:15.

• • •

Pierre Luboshutz and Genia Nemenoff will give a recital of music for two pianos in the Sinai Temple Forum series at Hyde Park High school, 6200 Stony Island av., tomorrow night at 8:15. The program will include Brahms' Variations on a theme by Haydn, Prokofieff's arrangement of Schubert waltzes, Mendelssohn's "Allegro Brillante," Chopin's "Rondo," Shostakovich's "Polka," Glinka's "The Lark," and Stravinsky's "Russian Dance." Single admission tickets are available for this event as well as season tickets for the series.

Grace Moore, famous American lyric soprano of the movies and the Metropolitan Opera, will give her only Chicago recital of the season in the History and Enjoyment of Music series at the Civic Opera house next Sunday afternoon, Jan. 14, at 3:30. Her program lists an "Air de Venus," from Lully's "Thesée," "Serenade de L'Amant Jaloux" by Gretry, Cleopatra's aria from Handel's "Julius Caesar," "Air de Lia" from Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," the same composer's "La Mort des Amants," "Valse" by Medtner, "Que deviennent les Roses?" dedicated to Miss Moore, by Paulin, Tschaikowski's "Toi seule," "I Know My Love," and "None But the Lonely Heart," Quilter's "Spring Voices," also dedicated to the singer, Victor Young's "Red Rosey Bush," and Carpenter's "Serenade." Otto Herz will be the accompanist and play Chopin's "Berceuse" and Mozart's "Turkish Rondo" as piano solos.

In his recital at Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30, Zino Francescatti, distinguished French violinist, will play his famous "Hart" Stradivarius violin. The violin dates from 1727 and is said to be one of the best examples of the art of the great violin maker of Cremona. Francescatti's program will include Tartini's Variations on a theme by Corelli, arranged by Francescatti; Vitali's Chaconne, Brahms' Sonata in D minor, a Tarantella and Mazurka by Chopin, Debussy's "Minstrels," "Short Story" [Gershwin-Dushkin], Polka [Shostakovich], and Ravel's "Tzigane."

Zino Francescatti.

The winter series of concerts in the public parks, sponsored by the Choral and Instrumental Music Association of Chicago, will be resumed this week with four concerts. Students of the Chicago Musical college will appear in Kelvyn park on Monday and Independence park on Friday. The Paula Zwane Concert Ensemble will appear at Hamilton park on Tuesday, and the Calumet Civic chorus at Austin town hall on Wednesday.

SUMNER WELLES PENS GUIDE TO PEACE

An Admirable Book on New World Order

"AN INTELLIGENT AMERICAN'S GUIDE TO THE PEACE," edited by Sumner Wells. [Dryden Press, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Walter Trohan.

Sumner Welles.

In the turbulent '20s Karl Haushofer, general and scholar, had a vision of a gigantic combination of Russia, Japan, China, and Germany, with the latter in the central role. With the promulgation of his vision he became the prophet of geo-politik, haranguing in an assortment of umlauts for control of this great power center by the fatherland and ultimate domination of the world. While Dr. Haushofer was no member of the Nazi party, he regarded the dictatorial machinery as the ideal means of bringing his dreams to realization, and gained access to the inner councils of Adolph Hitler thru a mutual friend, Rudolf Hess.

What happened to the dream and Hess is not in the province of this review, altho it may be noted that tall oaks grow from little acorns and little acorns from tall oaks. Geopolitics of Dr. Haushofer contributed to the present conflict and world political crisis, and this in turn has brought out the guide to peace under the editorship of the distinguished if somewhat austere former undersecretary of state.

In many respects the guide is an admirable work. It is a historical geography which gives much enlightening information on 80 lands—the physical nature, economy, and the history between 1919 and 1944. It explains what nations have and what they have not and what the tin of Bolivia, the cattle of Argentina, the wheat of Russia, the wool of Australia, the rubber of the East Indies, and the like mean to these nations and to the world.

It is in the discussion of "The Stake for Peace" of each nation that the volume vaults for the visionary geo-political level of Dr. Haushofer. At a time when Greeks and British are whistling American bullets at each other around the columns of the Parthenon, the volume says Greece "should have no enemies" and "can hope for nothing spectacular." For the United States the stake is to lead the world to democracy and lift it to a higher scale of living.

Of Russia it is said "the soviet union can scarcely need more territory," at a time when the Reds are gobbling up almost everything within reach. Finland is urged to shake off "her neurosis of insecurity" by looking forward to a world organized for peace and security. Poland is urged to look toward closer cooperation with her natural market, Russia. Britain is asked to give up financial domination of the world and the outmoded balance of power guiding principle to blossom under world organization.

In these incredibly naive sections the new world order boils down to getting along with your neighbor, while the historical and geographical and economic sections offer much information on why it is difficult if not impossible for some neighbors to get along.

A Great Picaresque Story Told in Classic Tradition

"CAPTAIN FROM CASTILE," by Samuel Shellabarger. [Little, Brown, $3.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

The popular historical novel, which of late has been more concerned with the amorous adventures of dashing heroines than with the martial doings of doughty heroes, returns to its classic pattern in "Captain from Castile." In the tradition of the great picaresque tales it paeans high adventure in the service of the king, deathless friendship, and revenge sought round the world. And, altho the love of woman is a large factor in the lives of the adventurers, it is not the motivating force. Also in the tradition of the classic picaresque tale, the long arm of circumstance in "Captain from Castile" has the qualities of octopus tentacles, reaching into and clutching lives with the most unbelievable adroitness.

This long, always exciting, vivid tale begins in Spain in 1518 when its hero, Pedro de Vargas, was 19, the son of the highly respected Don Francisco and Dona Maria. With his little 12 year old sister he is sitting beside his parents in church, if not in complete devoutness, while his eye rests upon the beautiful daughter of a grandee, Luisa de Carvajal, to whom on the spot he vows eternal devotion.

The DeVargas destiny seems happily set, but the fates have other plans. The reader is promptly plunged into the intrigues and the horrors of the Spanish Inquisition, which catch up the happy De Vargas family, not only because young Pedro acts as an intermediary and bribe bearer for a proscribed giant whom he meets in a tavern, but who has returned from the new world to find his mother a victim of the auto-da-fe, but Pedro is also suspected [and rightly] of helping an Indian slave to escape from his master, the cruel De Silva. That same De Silva covets the De Vargas land and has been unable to buy it and hopes to get it thru his familiar, the local head of the Inquisition. No detail of those intrigues or those horrors is omitted and since the author is a well known historian, they have authority as well as hair-raising interest.

From the moment that the De Vargases are arrested [falsely] until the book closes some 600 pages later, every page is filled with tense excitement, and with calamity just about to spring upon young Pedro until the very end of the tale. It does spring, with terrible cruelty, on his little sister who is unable to bear the torturings of the Inquisition. There are few hours in the book's record of a few years when young Pedro is growing to man's estate that death is busy enough with others to forget him. But those octopus tentacles of the long arm of circumstance always manage to rescue him as they keep the pattern of the tale tight even tho it wanders from old to New Spain, follows Cortes thru his defeats and his conquests in Mexico, darts into Italy, returns to the little Spanish town of its beginning.

Nobody has written more stirringly, more spine tinglingly, more blood curdlingly about the conquest of New Spain than has Mr. Shellabarger in "Captain from Castile." There are descriptions of epic battles written with such vividness that they seem to draw the reader into the thick of the blood-slushing and the sword swinging. They are masterpieces of historical recreation.

The characters are, as is customary in the classic picaresque novel, less important than what they do.

Even if they don't revise their beliefs, persons [most of them males] who think that nobody has written a good story since Dumas pere turned out his romances a century ago will be delighted with "Captain from Castile."

Book About Russia for Young Readers

"THE LAND OF THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE," by Alexander Nazaroff. [Lippincott, $2.]

This newest volume of the portraits of nations series makes a timely appearance that will please both young people and adults. The author, born in Russia but long a citizen of the United States, writes geography and history in such picturesque language that the reader lays down the book marveling at the yet untouched resources of that vast land of Russia and its people. Forty photographs illustrate the book. FRANCES DUNLAP HERON.

Adventures of a Georgian Boy—in the Russian Style

"ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN," by George and Helen Papashvily. [Harper, $2.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

There can be no better way of starting the new year right than reading about this amiable and sprightly Caucasus Georgian start of a new life in America. This is a very, very amusing book and if it doesn't make you forget everything from the European war to the Pacific war, I'll eat all the shashlik eaten in this book. That, as the author would say, is a mighty many shashlik. For the book is written in George Papashvily's own version of the English language, including the kind of literary creation involved in arriving at the word "bankrupture" when he is losing money in his business.

The book is a loose succession of incidents about one man's coming to America, "where anything can happen," his making a living at trades other than those he brought with him from his native Georgia mountains, swordmaker and decorator of riding crops, his Detroit period as a mechanic, his great trip across America to California, his marriage and final settling in Pennsylvania.

His encounter with the Navajos when he is stuck in a Colorado river is terrific—his excellency the old Russian admiral, traveling with the party, gets out his imperial sword and prepares to defend the honor of the women. It turns out that no defense is needed, the car is pulled out, and Papashvily buys a sheep and makes shashlik for the whole tribe. This is a very touching scene indeed, and shows that, if all men aren't brothers, at least Caucasian Georgians and American Navajos are.

You have to read how Uncle Vanno, 85 and expecting to live until he is an old man, buys 144 pairs of red satin ladies' garters, and has little bells hung on all of them. When asked why he bought so many, he answered, "I don't know quite so many ladies yet, but I'm certainly gonna make more acquaintances all time."

George and Helen Papashvily.

Now we leave George Papashvily out on the western desert, beside his broken down Ford truck, all alone, thinking: "If you're not father or husband, son or brother, neighbor or friend to somebody, who are you then to yourself?"

What Russia Has Created Is Analyzed

"THE REAL SOVIET RUSSIA," by David J. Dallin. [Yale University Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi.

Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose—the more it changes, the more it is the same thing. The soviet system remains true to its fundamentals, tho it has to adjust itself to changing circumstances. "We are realists," states a leading bolshevik, quoted by Mr. Dallin, "but realists with a principle." To safeguard their great social experiment against capitalism, the Communists are ready to make compromises, whether it is Lenin's alliance with Ludendorff, Stalin's with Hitler or with Churchill. It is the fourth time, Dallin points out, that the soviets relax on their persecution of the church, each time to the benefit of communism and without altering their basic trend.

This is interesting enough, but what makes this extremely brilliant little book a unique contribution to the understanding of sovietism is the analysis of the social stratification brought about as a logical sequel to the economic policies of Stalin. The emergence of a new burocratic hierarchy on the top and of a new slavery [forced labor] at the bottom of the social ladder, each of a good dozen million souls; the fate and inefficiency of the old and still predominant peasantry under a system of forced collectivization and mechanization; the structure and position of a new urban labor class; all of them in various conflicts with the thin layer of "idealists" who constitute the ruthlessly ruling party—it is the most fascinating and penetrating story of the world's greatest social experiment, which we have grown accustomed to take for granted, whether we like it or not. But does it really "work"? And is the price mankind pays for it worth the candle?

Dallin's book comes closer to answering the question—the most significant social question of this age—than did any one before. It is written with the logical incisiveness, intellectual honesty, and technical matter-of-factness with which a great surgeon carries out a difficult operation that cannot wait.

The Walter Paepckes Introduce Daughter Anina to Society

By Thalia.

The most nostalgic Christmas holiday debut party of many years was the one given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Paepcke in honor of their daughter Anina. It had the charm, the dignity and the friendliness of days when the word hospitality had both an intimate and an open-hearted meaning. And unlike most of the debut parties my memory records, it was more of a party for the older generation, for I heard that the lovely young "Nina" had told her parents she wanted them to invite all of their friends because she liked "older people better anyway."

Your Thalia remembers Nina's mother "Pussy" Paepcke when she was a debutante herself—like an exquisite golden tipped shaft of light out of a fairy tale—and sees her today silver tipped but no less fragilely lovely. And the word "older" seems slightly incongruous. Most of the guests were frankly "older." They were received by the entire Paepcke family, Mr. Paepcke, the debutante, Mrs. Paepcke, Miss Paula, who will be a debutante in two years, and "Tony," who is only 9.

Just inside the tall reseda doors of the lounge of the Arts club they stood. Between the pillars which form the delicate little semi-circular end of the room mimosa colored tarleton was draped, to echo the color of the two graceful bouquets of mimosa which flanked the stage at the other end of the room.

Such a cosmopolitan group is too seldom assembled in Chicago. Leaders in society, art, music, business, education, Chicagoans, north siders, south siders, Lake Foresters, and other suburbanites happily met. Most of us see the same people everywhere we go, over and over, because we're absorbingly busy these days in our work—war or life. Mr. and Mrs. Paepcke gave all of their friends the added pleasure of seeing every one they knew and had hoped to be able to see.

Dinner in the chic rococo dining rooms of the club was followed by music, an all Mozart program. The performers were the cosmopolitan Lener quartet from Budapest, who barely finished their part of the program before they had to catch their train back to New York. From Chile via New York came the popular soprano, Rayan Quitral, whose powerful voice more than completely filled the Arts club lounge and made ear drums tingle. One of our town's most dignified gentlemen confided to me that he'd wager Senorita Quitral could shake a mean rhumba, as she came onto the stage in a lilting South American amble. France was the home of the flautist, Rene Leroy, who completed the cosmopolitan musical bonquet.

In the most violent contrast to the charm, the dignity, the beautiful formality of that evening was a party which I attended only second hand. It was in the home of a famous Hollywood star. It began, like this one, as a large dinner but progressed not into Mozart but into a more mairzy doats art, if anything so fluid could be called art at all. My informer, a house guest from the soberer midwest, who had, like the stag at eve, drunk his fill of refreshment and humankind, went to his room and to bed. Came the dawn and he woke up to find the other bed occupied by his host [also still fully garbed], and to hear some one beating at the door.

When the door wasn't opened instantly, the beating became more violent, the door finally crashed in and the hefty wife of the great movie star converged on the innocent scene. The detail which fascinated the narrator's listeners was that, in preparation for such events, apparently not unusual, one whole section of the movie star's garage was filled with spares—not tires, but duplicate doors—and it was a matter of only a few moments for the houseman to install a fresh door to the bedroom. My informant watched the procedure speechless—but he regained his powers of speech, and his recent experiences in the wild if not woolly west make him an extra popular luncheon and dinner guest these days.

There were many New Year's days at home, quieter this year, most of the guests conspicuously of one generation instead of the two [and sometimes three] that used to give New Year's day home parties an atmosphere of family solidarity, an atmosphere, incidentally, seldom to

Phoebe Aronie, Corp. H. Spierer Wed on Nov. 14

When Miss Phoebe Aronie and Corp. Harold Spierer of the army were married Nov. 14 in New York City, their wedding almost was a duplicate of her parents' wedding ceremony 26 years ago. During the last war Mr. and Mrs. Edward Aronie of 2150 Lincoln Park West were married in New York City by the Rev. Yale Howfberg. At that time Mr. Aronie was serving as a corporal in an army band, a post which his new son-in-law now holds at the Welch Convalescent hospital in Dayton Beach, Fla. Miss Aronie and Corp. Spierer were married by the same minister, now 85 years old, who officiated at her parents' wedding.

The bride was graduated from the Francis W. Parker school and from Northwestern university. Corp. Spierer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Spierer of New York City, received his degree from the City College of New York. He and his bride will live in Daytona Beach.

Study Course for Parents to Begin Jan. 10

By Irene Steyskal.

There comes a time in every parent's life, we are told, when he feels a kinship of spirit with Old Father William, the "Alice in Wonderland" character who had a predilection for standing on his head. Doubtless he had a teen-aged son or daughter.

A parent needs no psychologist's word for it that a certain resiliency for quick shifts in viewpoint is needed in dealing with that confusing young changling in the family circle—that complex and baffling young person who suddenly is evidencing strange new streaks of maturity. Wasn't it only yesterday that she was a pig-tailed tomboy who walked off with all the agates in the neighborhood youngsters' marble-shooting sweepstakes? That he was a vociferous tornado in miniature, rocking the house with his protests every time he was sent back to wash as high as his elbows and to the full circumference of his neck?

This is the parents' side of the story. But the Association for Family Living contends that fathers and mothers can be fully as trying to their adolescent sons and daughters. Hoping to help both toward achieving a smoothly working relationship, the association is starting a new six week course of lectures and discussions for parents and youth leaders Wednesday morning in its headquarters at 209 S. State st.

Mrs. Sora Barth Loeb, who is the educational coördinator on the staff, promises that the association is prepared to shed light on problems of personality development and the social and emotional adjustments of the teen-agers which have mystified their parents. The course of study is based, she explains, on studies made in youth discussion groups where questions have been put squarely to the boys and girls themselves. "The findings are out of life situations," she asserts, "and they give us insight into what youngsters want out of life; how they feel about themselves, their parents, and their leaders; what they expect from us and what we reasonably may expect from them."

Presented under the general title, "The Timeless Teen-Age," the course will follow such specific discussions as "Signposts and Dangers as Growth and Development Take Place," "Helping Boys and Girls to Understand Each Other," "Changing Attitudes Toward School and Family," and "The Adolescent in the War Effort." Meetings are scheduled from 10 to 11:30 o'clock on consecutive Wednesdays.

At the Loop center of the Y. W. C. A., Miss Dorothy Middleton and Miss Lucille B. Fitts have had a busy week working out a winter term of classes for the education workshops and the health education department.

"Blueprint Your Post-War Hopes" is the slogan adopted for the new term beginning next week. Several of the classes deal directly with problems rising out of the war. One, specifically designed to show wives how they may help husbands returning from military service readjust to family and community life is offered under the title, "So He's Coming Home!" For the newcomer in the city there is a "Know Your Chicago" lecture series.

Back on the schedule are the perennial favorite classes in folk and square dancing, but augmented with the conga and rhumba, and those who prefer more strenuous exercise even will find a class in jitterbug. English, Spanish, public speaking and dramatics, creative writing, and music appreciation are some of the academic subjects listed, and one of the craft classes offers to teach the person interested in interior decoration how to reupholster ailing chairs.

After a mid-year holiday, classes will be resumed this week at the Shell School of Social Studies, free adult education center housed at the

Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Ozark Girl

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CHARLOTTE has four loves in her life, music, horses, dogs, and Edward. Perhaps it's hardly fair to put Edward at the end of the list, but Charlotte has been loving music, horses, and dogs for all of her 20 years and Edward only since Aug. 15, at 4:35 p. m. when she first laid eyes on him.

Charlotte is a true daughter of the hills just as her songs are true folk music. Charlotte's great-grandfather was an herb doctor. He gathered the tansy, catnip, mule's tail, jimson weed, and other medicinal plants where he could find them, in fields, woods, and stream. Then he dried them or mashed them whichever brought out their relief qualities to the best advantage, and made lotions, teas or salve to afford relief to the maimed and the sick. On the side, strictly as an avocation, he played the fiddle. He must have loved music very much, for even today, the love of music is as strong in Charlotte's family as their love for the hills and right living.

This herb doctor, like so many other Arkansas pioneers, came from Tennessee. Perhaps he homesteaded a place, or maybe he just made his home on a pleasant hillside and called it his own. About this time, a strain of Indian blood entered the family, so it is possible the girl he married was one of the pretty Indian girls of the region, or a girl with an Indian grandmother, for Indian girls knew their herbs as well as cooking and crop planting. The bride must have been an Indian princess, no less, for Charlotte could well be any one's idea of true royalty. Even when she is sweeping a floor of the Curlee Hotel Double-cabin, which the Jedge, Judy and I always occupy when we are in Mountain Home, Ark., or asking us how we want our breakfast aigs.

Charlotte's grandfather, son of the herb doctor, was a preacher. He was tall and straight, with definite traces of his Indian blood, and a speaker of extraordinary ability. A good preacher, says Charlotte. Of course, he never made any money, for, as Charlotte says, preachers never get rich. And her grandfather's whole mind centered on helping some one. One man has said: "All the trails of the hills were made by people coming to let Charlotte's grandpa save their souls."

Sometimes the congregations before which he preached paid him money. But more often, they didn't. Charlotte's grandfather didn't care. He would farm thru the week, his mind more intent on sermons than the stones in his cornfield, then after the chores were done on Saturday morning he would saddle his horse and ride 40 miles or more to some preaching spot. There he would preach Saturday night and a couple of times on Sunday, then ride back home thru the night. If the preaching assignment was farther away, then he would be gone longer. Once he even got clear out to California.

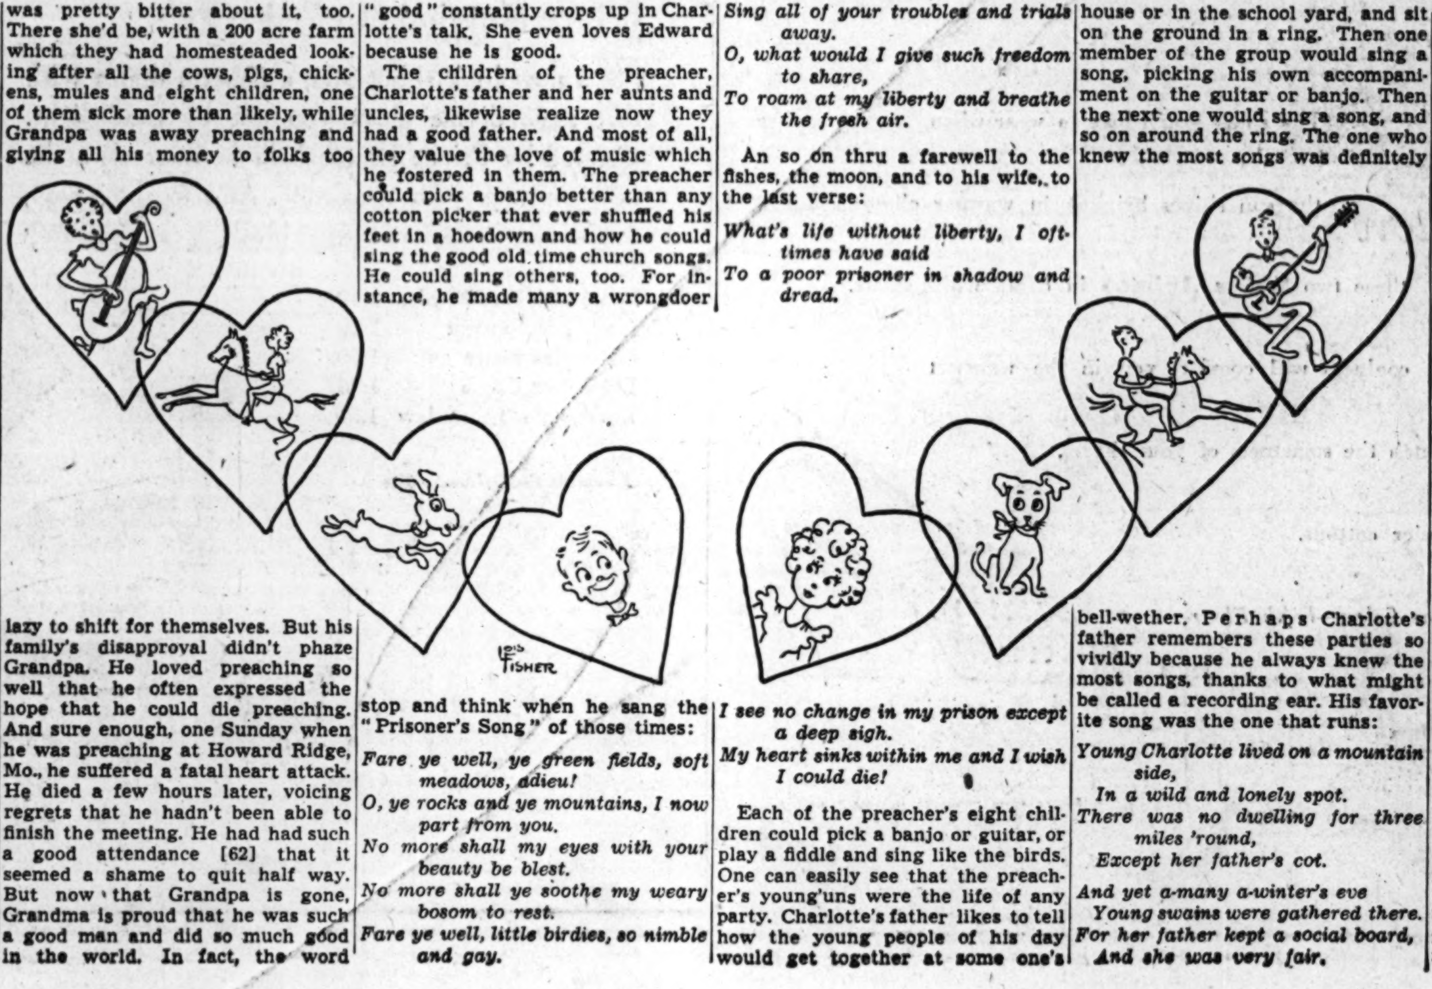
In those absences, Charlotte's grandmother and the eight children that had come along like little stair-steps, would have the care of the farm on their hands. The oldest boy [destined to father Charlotte] began plowing at the age of 9, and about that time he became pretty much disgusted with preachers. Grandma was pretty bitter about it, too. There she'd be, with a 200 acre farm which they had homesteaded looking after all the cows, pigs, chickens, mules and eight children, one of them sick more than likely, while Grandpa was away preaching and giving all his money to folks too lazy to shift for themselves. But his family's disapproval didn't phaze Grandpa. He loved preaching so well that he often expressed the hope that he could die preaching. And sure enough, one Sunday when he was preaching at Howard Ridge, Mo., he suffered a fatal heart attack. He died a few hours later, voicing regrets that he hadn't been able to finish the meeting. He had had such a good attendance [62] that it seemed a shame to quit half way. But now that Grandpa is gone, Grandma is proud that he was such a good man and did so much good in the world. In fact, the word "good" constantly crops up in Charlotte's talk. She even loves Edward because he is good.

The children of the preacher, Charlotte's father and her aunts and uncles, likewise realize now they had a good father. And most of all, they value the love of music which he fostered in them. The preacher could pick a banjo better than any cotton picker that ever shuffled his feet in a hoedown and how he could sing the good old time church songs. He could sing others, too. For instance, he made many a wrongdoer stop and think when he sang the "Prisoner's Song" of those times:

Fare ye well, ye green fields, soft meadows, adieu!
O, ye rocks and ye mountains, I now part from you.
No more shall my eyes with your beauty be blest.
No more shall ye soothe my weary bosom to rest.
Fare ye well, little birdies, so nimble and gay.
Sing all of your troubles and trials away.
O, what would I give such freedom to share,
To roam at my liberty and breathe the fresh air.

An so on thru a farewell to the fishes, the moon, and to his wife, to the last verse:

What's life without liberty, I ofttimes have said
To a poor prisoner in shadow and dread.
I see no change in my prison except a deep sigh.
My heart sinks within me and I wish I could die!



Each of the preacher's eight children could pick a banjo or guitar, or play a fiddle and sing like the birds. One can easily see that the preacher's young'uns were the life of any party. Charlotte's father likes to tell how the young people of his day would get together at some one's house or in the school yard, and sit on the ground in a ring. Then one member of the group would sing a song, picking his own accompaniment on the guitar or banjo. Then the next one would sing a song, and so on around the ring. The one who knew the most songs was definitely bell-wether. Perhaps Charlotte's father remembers these parties so vividly because he always knew the most songs, thanks to what might be called a recording ear. His favorite song was the one that runs:

Young Charlotte lived on a mountain side,
In a wild and lonely spot.
There was no dwelling for three miles 'round,
Except her father's cot.

And yet a-many a-winter's eve
Young swains were gathered there.
For her father kept a social board,
And she was very fair.

One winter's eve as the sun went down,
Far looked her wistful eye
Out from the frosty window pane
As the merry sleighs passed by.

At the village 15 miles away
Was to be a ball that night.
Altho the air was exceedingly cold,
Her heart was warm and light.

How brightly gleamed her laughing eyes
As a well known voice was heard,
And dashing up to the cottage door
Her lover's sleigh appeared.

"O, daughter, dear," her mother cried,
"This blanket round you fold,
For it's a dreadful night abroad,
You'll get your death of cold."

"O, nay, O, nay!" young Charlotte cried,
As she laughed like a gypsy queen,
"To ride in a blanket muffled up,
I never would be seen!"

Many, many more verses must be sung before the song is done, and the listener learns that Young Charlotte froze to death for her silly pride. Our Ozark Charlotte was named for the wilful girl.

Perhaps Charlotte has some of that stubbornness, too. Last June she decided she had had enough field work to last her the rest of her life. As the oldest child, she had begun to plow at the age of 11 and by the time she was 14, she could do a man's work with a turning plow. In addition she could stack hay on the wagons, milk, clean barns and do all the chores of a farm. When she graduated from the 8th grade, it was out of the question for her to go on to high school. She was needed on the farm. But last June, she just up and came into town and got herself a job at the hotel.

Charlotte likes everything about the hotel except the radio. She can't get used to made music. Her father has never allowed a radio in their home because he was certain the children would let it make their music and they would stop singing and "picking." But I'm sure making music is so much a part of the lives of those six youngsters nothing could take its place.

In the evening at the hotel, after the supper dishes are washed and the tables are set for breakfast, the guests congregate in the dining room and Charlotte gets out her guitar. As the evening hours pass, the hills seem to crowd closer to this little mountain town, and even the moon dips nearer to hear Charlotte singing the songs that were popular before the herb doctor left Tennessee. Most of the songs have a doleful theme of lost or false love. And Charlotte puts a world of feeling into such songs as this one:

There's a little rosewood casket
Resting on a marble stand,
There's a package of love letters
Written by a cherished hand.
Read them gently to me, brother,
Read them till I fall asleep,
Fall asleep to wake in heaven;
O, dear brother, do not weep.
Last Sunday I saw him walking
With a lady by his side. . . .

But Charlotte needn't worry! Edward has four loves, too. They're music, horses, dogs, and, most of all, Charlotte.

be found in the more public observance of the New Year's eve at the city's clubs. Of them all none was, or could have been, more nearly in the spirit of the traditional than the New Years at home, whose invitation this year bore the names of William S. Monroe and his sister Mrs. William T. Calhoun.

Before Mrs. Monroe's death they were usually issued in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe and only on rare and rarely happy occasions did Mrs. Calhoun visit her native Chicago from Peking where she made her home, when her husband was in the diplomatic service and after his death, and was gracious hostess to every one who was fortunate enough to visit China.

Since life in China has been impossible, Mrs. Calhoun has been living in Chicago. Around the bowl of literally the best eggnog in America and in the living room of the Monroe apartment gathered pillars of our city, to whom for a generation it has been one of the happy rites of New Year's day to "go to the Monroes." There were fewer people than usual and, as everywhere else, one generation was conspicuously absent, the one to which belongs Henry Monroe, for whom the service flag in the window hangs. But as one guest said with real feeling and voicing the sentiment of all, "That was a sweet party."

Traditional too, and happily bringing together the citizens of the true democracy of work was the 24th annual New Year's party which Col. Robert R. McCormick gives to the employes of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and their families. A total of 814 men and women were absent this year doing the work of their Uncle Sam, but many of the 80 or more returned veterans recently honorably discharged from service gave added color to the afternoon. Unlike many "office parties" the annual Tribune party is a family affair. Tribune children start early in life looking forward to the Sunday afternoon between Christmas and New Years and pensioners long away return for it.

The first after New Year's event to bring out the newest hats and the best Christmas ties was the tea on Tuesday afternoon at the Arts club opening an exhibition of the work of Hans Moller and Marc Chagall. After the bitter cold outside more than one guest said it seemed like walking into a flower garden to look at the brilliant Chagall canvases. Two of them had been loaned by prominent members of the club, "Spirit of Music" by Mrs. Charles Swift, who is chairman of the club's music committee, and "Circus Rider" by Mrs. Charles Barnett Goodspeed, who was for many years its brilliant and efficient president.

Stage for Action has as its objective the awakening of citizens to major issues involved in the news of the day thru the medium of dramatization. Identified with the new movement in the theater are such famous actors, producers, and playwrights as Frederic March, James Thurber, Paul Robeson, Dorothy Parker, Norman Corwin, and Oscar Serlin.

The women of the Jewish council will see an Arthur Miller play, "That They May Win," and "All Our Tomorrows," by Harry Granick and Gerald Savory.

The first play presents problems faced by the returning war veteran and his family. In the cast will be Norma Jean Ross, Hildred Price, Steve Hill, Hal Sims, and Jeanne Juvelier. "All Our Tomorrows" is a story bringing home to the average citizen his responsibilities toward society and the future. It will be performed by Stanley Gordon, Paul Hughes, Sunda Love, Catherine Payne, Kathryn Icely, and Artie Kay.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 2, 1897.

Dear Julia: New Year's day is past! We didn't celebrate as we used to by keeping open house. That custom, pleasant in many ways, grew to be a nuisance, for men who made many calls and imbibed freely at each house, became rude and noisy, and every refined hostess dreaded to see them arrive. Now the day is marked by small luncheons or dinners and these are often for the young set. Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer gave a beautiful ball for their niece, Miss Julia Dent Grant, and their son, Honore Palmer. The young married set and the young unmarried people were the guests. Sandy and Martha were there and said Mrs. Palmer looked too lovely in a heavy white satin brocaded in green threads. The tables were decorated with garlands of roses and laurel. The dancing was in the art room, which is admirably adapted to the purpose.

Matthew J. Steffens.

I have persuaded Will to remain home from his office this morning and to go with the rest of the family to Steffens, the photographer, for a group photograph. Such a large group as we are—eight, which St. Peter calls a "few!" I never agreed with the apostle on that point. Eight seems quite a large number to get together at one time. Many a photographer would be daunted by so many, but Mr. Steffens won't be. Our twins are lovely and he has taken their pictures before, so he was enthusiastic about the group picture when I telephoned for an appointment. I also reserved time for a sitting for Will alone. He hasn't been feeling quite well lately, and I thought that if, well, I won't put my thought into words, but I just wanted a good photograph of him. One must be sure to get an appointment, or Mr. Steffens will not take your picture. A story is told of Lily Langtry who strolled into his studio when she was in Chicago, thinking, I suppose, that he would be delighted to have a picture of her on any terms. She had to get an appointment like any one else, even tho she was then at the height of her success as a beauty and an actress.

Mr. Steffens doesn't need to seek patronage, for the most exalted people in society are his subjects, and Mrs. Potter Palmer refuses to be photographed by any one else. He made a lovely picture of her at the time of the World's fair.

A German by birth, Mr. Steffens came to Chicago in 1867 and his fame has been made here. He has a scientific mind and has patented many inventions, and he has built several boats, for he belongs to many yacht clubs and is called "Commodore" by every one. The children love him and don't mind having their pictures taken, if he will promise to play the zither for them afterward. O, here they come now and I must stop! I'll finish this evening.

Evening.

Well, we have had our "counterfeit presentments" made, and I think they will be good. I got Will to "sit" and Mr. Steffens suggested that Sandy might be taken, also. Sandy protested loudly, but when Mr. Steffens showed him photographs of Marshall Field, P. D. Armour, and Chauncey J. Blair, he subsided, feeling that at least he was in good company. Then Sandy wanted Martha Jr. to have her picture taken, and Will insisted on mine, and Mr. Steffens posed the twins together. So altogether, we shall have no lack of likenesses of ourselves. If they are good, I shall send you mine, and I do want to ask if you won't send me a copy of that one Sarony took of you recently, I have had no picture of you for years.

Will is reading the real estate news for the year and interrupts me to tell me of the terms of a lease of part of the land which was once the site of the Grand Pacific hotel. This land, 186 by 178 feet, at the northeast corner of La Salle and Jackson sts., has been leased to the Illinois Trust and Savings bank for 99 years. The rent is to be $50,000 for the first 10 years; $60,000 for the next decade, and $70,000 for the remainder of the 99 years.

This means, says Will, that the land is valued at more than a million dollars, and he wants me to tell you that P. F. W. Peck bought the entire site from the government in 1834, paying $381 for it. Northwestern university bought the west half [the part leased by the Illinois Trust and Savings bank] in 1854 for $8,000. In 1885, L. Z. Leiter bought the east half of the site from Mr. Peck for $577,000.

"Can any other city in the world show such a record of increase in real estate values?" Will bids me ask you. Now I must close. Your loving friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

P. S. Look in I. Peter, 3:19, for the definition of a "few."

FOOT NOTES.

Matthew J. Steffens [1852-1928] will be remembered by many Chicagoans. His studio building on 22d st. near Prairie av. was torn down when the street was widened. He patented no less than 35 inventions, one of which was a device for taking photographs by means of a slot machine.

Proceeds, earmarked for Eastern Star homes for dependent aged and ill persons, will be presented to Mrs. James Breedlove, worthy grand matron of the Illinois O. E. S.

Mrs. James Breedlove.

Composed of present and past patrons of Chicago and vicinity, the host group each year changes its name to that of the worthy grand patron in office. Dr. William E. Kendall, formerly of Oak Park, who heads the club this year, recently received a lieutenant colonel's commission in the medical corps of the United States army and has been assigned to the veterans' hospital at Dwight, Ill. Col. Kendall has two sons in service—one a lieutenant in the navy and the other a corporal with the army engineers.

During the last year 18,248 immigrants residing in Chicago became citizens of the United States, and thruout the country 441,979, an all time high, took out their papers. The numbers give special interest to a talk on "Immigration Program and Naturalization" which Mrs. A. P. Crabtree, educational officer of the department of immigration, will give Friday at a joint fourth division meeting of the Americanism and national defense committees of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The division embraces all chapters of the society in the Chicago vicinity. Members will assemble at 10:15 o'clock in the tearoom of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.

Mrs. Crabtree will be presented by the Americanism chairman, Mrs. Dan Pagenta. Mrs. Len Young Smith heads the national defense committee in the 4th division. This week her department will award its annual R. O. T. C. medals at all high schools, and Mrs. Smith will report on the project at the Friday meeting. A regents' round table will be held after lunch.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

Mrs. Bradley Eben. [Frank Photo.]

The men had their innings on the first day of the new year when neckties took over the spotlight at a gay breakfast party at the Key club, but decorative feminine figures were the motifs that won the awards bestowed both by a team of feminine judges, and of masculine judges. The ladies, Mrs. John W. Root, Mrs. Paul Walker, and Mrs. Helen Leigh bestowed their prize of a gold key upon a much decorated marine officer, Maj. Richard L. Blain. The part of his tie that showed was strictly regulation, but a bathing beauty twinkling with rhinestones decorated one end, safely tucked inside his blouse. A dancing girl, pictured in a strip-tease, enhanced the dark tie which won Roy L. Flannery a gold key from the men judges. Lt. Hawley Smith, Preston Boyden, and Hugo Vogel. The tie worn by Bradley Eben received much attention, as did his wife's hat. The tie was a dark red silk one printed in black figures. His wife's pretty hat, a heart shaped one of black felt studded with small blue shells, was the result of an election bet on whether Gov. Green would be returned to office. Her dress was a simple, short sleeved, low necked one of black crepe. The Ebens and the Flannerys, Mrs. Flannery in bright scarlet, were members of a large Dutch treat breakfast group which occupied the main floor of the club. Mrs. Root, making her tie inspection rounds, was clad in a smartly tailored gray suit and a "halo" hat of black felt, so tiny that it was visible only from the front. Mrs. W. Denison Dunning pinned three candy pink carnations to one shoulder of her simple black frock, and Mrs. Walker displayed her usual New Year's corsage of lavender orchids. Her black gown was trimmed across the short sleeves and around the hip line in diagonal gold sequin stripes. Mrs. Andrew Berkey, in a pretty frock of beige and black, brought along a stunning crystal and red centerpiece holding five large white candles, which burned brightly on the bar. Another gaily decorated "G. I." tie was worn by WAC Jeananne Smyth.

Mrs. Jefferson Caffery. [Tribune Photo.]

Having luncheon at the Camellia House one day recently were Mrs. Jefferson Caffery, who soon will go to Paris to join Ambassador Caffery, and Mrs. Paul Wilder, the former Lolita Armour Mitchell. Both women were in black. With her high pompadour headdress, Mrs. Mitchell was wearing a little round doughnut of a hat which she fastened in place with a tortoise shell comb. A pretty young woman who has been seen about town lately is Mrs. Kevin McCarthy of New York, whose husband is appearing in "Winged Victory." On a zero day she was wearing a warm wool suit of gray-blue wool, a lovely color under her beaver coat, and she wrapped a bright scarf around her head. On her hands were white knitted gloves. Mrs. Robert E. Cantwell Jr. has a pretty brown winter outfit, a solid color dress which she brightens with a gold bow-knot pin. She sometimes wears a bracelet to match it, and a giddy little skull cap trimmed with gleaming black coq feathers which swoop down at one side of her face. Mrs. John T. Pirie Jr. has a warm frock for these cold days, a black wool one trimmed with a fluffy bow of black satin right under her chin. With the dress she often wears a gay little hat of flaming red felt. The lovely gown which Miss Ann Cornelisen wore for her debut tea recently at the Racquet club was of white satin, deeply v-ed at the back and front of the neck line. Crystal cobweb bowknots, of which the knots were seed pearls, were embroidered around the skirt and on each of the short sleeves. She carried an armful of peach-pink roses. A hint of spring in contrast to the snowy streets outside was wafted thru the club by the fragrance of the jonquils, iris, calla lilies, and white spring flowers in which the rooms were decorated.

Several Fine Art Exhibits Now on View

By Eleanor Jewett.

Several attractive exhibitions opened last week. At the Arts club, Wrigley building, is an intriguing collection of the colorful fantasies of Marc Chagall and, in the smaller gallery, a group of 20 line drawings by Hans Moller. Chagall is the Russian modernist whose pictures often look like illustrations to the most exotic of children's fables, and always like glimpses into a dream world peopled by flying horses, lambs, and cherubs. His people are angelic and no one has his feet on any less prosaic a ground than clouds. There is a little of the naivety of the Duannier Rousseau in Chagall's work, a little of the mysticism of the early Russian religious painter, and a great deal of the story teller. He is a romanticist and a poet; a very pleasant pause in the tale of contemporary art.

Hans Moller has a more direct message with few flourishes. His work is interesting and well done.

The 40th annual water color exhibition opened last week at the Palette and Chisel Academy of the Fine Arts, 1012 N. Dearborn st. It is a brilliant show with extremely attractive pictures on practically every wall. Karl Brandner, a notable Chicago painter whose landscapes are outstanding, with, perhaps, the greater emphasis on his winter landscapes [a favorite season with him] has a delightful "Summer Day." "Peter the Hermit" by Nicola Veronica is unusual and well handled.

J. Jeffery Grant, whose superb one-man show last summer in the Room of Chicago Art at the Art institute will long remain the finest of those monthly samplings of Chicago painters, offers the beautiful "A Bit of Rockport." "In the Hills" by Oscar B. Erickson is a pleasant study in color. "Backwoods Road" by Ted Foerster is remarkably good. N. P. Steinberg has struck an interesting note in "Along the Kalamazoo" and Max Herzog offers a colorful "Autumn." "Collie" introduces a nice dog study by Bruno Beghe and "Barbara Jean" by Edwin Terwilliger is charming.

The exhibit will continue thru January and is well worth seeing.

The Art Section of the Musarts club of Chicago opened its 10th annual art exhibit last Tuesday at the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, to continue thru Jan. 20. The exhibiting artists are June Cannon Brown, Fannie Fremmel, Lucile Leighton, and Jane Steiner. Yesterday afternoon A. Raymond Katz, well known Chicago painter, gave a lecture demonstration on creative art.

Leonard Rodowicz is showing a group of landscapes and marines in the Tea Room galleries, Mandel Brothers, thru Jan. 20. Rodowicz was born in Poland where he received his early art training and rose to fame. That fame followed him across the Atlantic and he is considered a painter of distinction among the Chicago group of Polish-American artists.

Good news is reported by the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, in the item that there was a sale of 110 etchings during the November exhibition of the Chicago Society of Etchers. The works of the late Bertha E. Jaques, John Taylor Arms, James Swann, R. H. Palenske, and Leon Persheret apparently were most in demand. Twenty-five of the etchings sold were large prints and 85 were the exquisite little miniature prints. Mae B. Alshuler followed up the popularity of the etching show and sale with her December exhibit of little landscapes in oil—she sold out her entire exhibit, a marvelous record.

One of the nicest Christmas cards of 1944 was from Kenneth Shopen, whose paintings now hang in the Room of Chicago Art at the Art institute, a delightful, colorful landscape in water color, a tiny miniature that has sparkle and brilliance and demands a frame instead of the trash basket.

• • •

Louis Kronberg, well known for his paintings of the ballet and of scenes in Paris and on the French coast, opened a January show at the Findlay galleries, 338 S. Michigan av., last Friday to continue thru the month. His exhibit is well worth seeing. Kronberg is a brilliant painter. He is exhibiting figure studies and landscapes from the New England coast.

• • •

Erwin G. Kummer, Chicago musician and painter, had a successful exhibit in Green Bay, Wis., during December. Sales were made, which always seems to be the final word in popularity. Mr. Kummer is represented in the two current All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts exhibitions, the one at the Stevens hotel and the other at the Drake.

• • •

The Chicago Camera club, 137 N. Wabash av., is showing work by Moholy-Nagy of the Institute of Design of Chicago, and by Rabinovitch of New York, and their students, thru January. It is a display of experimental photography that is of particular interest to camera fans. The art possibilities of the photograph are still limitless.

Woman's Club Will Hear Two Talks Next Wednesday

Mrs. Ethel M. C. Brazelton.

Proving one of the most popular series of programs at the Chicago Woman's club is the current events talk and book review given periodically by Mrs. Ethel M. Colson Brazelton, a member of the club. At her next program, to be presented at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in Curtiss hall, Mrs. Brazelton will review Gwethalyn Graham's novel concerning racial prejudices, "Earth and High Heaven," and the current events topic will be "What Lies Ahead."

At 2 o'clock the club will have as guest speaker Dr. Hans Kohn, professor of history at Smith college. A native of Prague, Czechoslovakia, Dr. Kohn is widely traveled and has lived in Paris, London, Jerusalem, Siberia, and Asiatic Russia. He has held posts in several American colleges and universities, and is author of numerous books dealing with the philosophy of socialism and nationalism, international politics, and recent history, among them, "Force or Reason," "Revolution and Dictatorship," and "World Order in Historical Perspective." Mrs. Henry Barrett Chamberlin will preside at the meeting. Mrs. Victor Munnecke is program chairman.

Social Welfare Workers to Be Feted at Teas

Two groups of volunteer social welfare workers will be given teas this week. Wednesday afternoon child care aids serving in the city's war nurseries will attend a tea at 2:30 o'clock in the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund headquarters, 848 N. Dearborn st. The women's division of the Salvation Army will entertain its Doughnut day taggers at 2 o'clock Friday at a party in the North ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

In charge of arrangements for the OCD child care committee tea are Miss Mary E. Murphy, the chairman, and Mrs. Evelyn S. Byron, director of the OCD volunteer office. Miss Murphy is director of the McCormick fund and Mrs. Byron, of the Council of Social Agencies.

More than 200 women have assisted professional staffs with the care of 2,000 children during the last year, serving from 9 to 3 o'clock one day each week. The guests at the tea will be those volunteers who have 200 hours to their credit, and the gathering will be the occasion for conferring OCD regulation stripes upon those who have given 500 hours of service.

With the present need for more workers in war industries, the child care centers in the Chicago area must plan expanded facilities for the care increasing numbers of workers' children. Mrs. Byron's office has appealed for 300 more volunteers, some to help at the present centers and others to assist in new centers which are to be opened as soon as sufficient staff can be procured.

Plans are under way for the starting of a new child care training course on Feb. 5 at the University of Chicago, Hull House and the National College of Education in Evanston. The course, directed by Miss Edna Dean Baker, president of the National College of Education, will consist of 30 hours of lectures and observation and 48 hours of practice teaching. Full information may be procured at the OCD volunteer office, 53 W. Jackson blvd. [Wabash 0528].

Mrs. Charles S. Clark will preside at the Salvation Army tea. The taggers will hear a talk by Lt. Commissioner John J. Allan, central states territorial commander of the Salvation Army, on the army's world-wide work in war service.

Many assignments are being turned down each day by the Chicago metropolitan unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services because of lack of volunteer workers, it has been disclosed by the organization's placement department. Particularly thru the holidays was there a reduction in registrations, and Mrs. Roy Junglas, who heads the placement division, is making an urgent appeal for women to register now at headquarters, 160 N. La Salle st.

It is pointed out by AWVS that the vital shortage of nurses may be met in large part by women able to spare just a few hours during the day as assistants in hospitals. Help is needed in the therapy departments, diet kitchens, and serving rooms. There also is pressing need for all types of clerical workers.

The organization will coöperate in the annual drive of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis Jan. 15 to 31, and is asking for volunteers to staff downtown department store booths.

Woman's City Club to Hear Report on Bartelme Group

This season the Woman's City club has been holding a series of survey study meetings focused on Chicago's social services. Particular interest is centered on the program for tomorrow afternoon, which will bring Mrs. Roy L. Davis to speak on the work of the Mary Bartelme club.

Mrs. Roy L. Davis.

Mrs. Davis is president of that organization, which supports three homes for teen-aged girls. There is a link between the Woman's City club and Mrs. Davis' organization, for it was Judge Mary M. Bartelme, first woman to sit here in the Juvenile court, who founded the club which now is identified by her name. Judge Bartelme was once an active member of the Woman's City club, and altho she has retired and now lives in California, she still continues as a member of the advisory board. She also retains an active interest in the Mary Bartelme club.

Also speaking before the City club women tomorrow will be Miss Jessie Veeder, vice president of the Eleanor association. The meeting begins at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Harry M. Mulberry will preside.

New bureau of standards regulations will be discussed at a meeting of the food and merchandise committee at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, and at that session a report will be presented on an inspection of weights and measures in Chicago. Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley is chairman, and Mrs. William A. McDowell, vice chairman.

Ivriah Organization to Hold Tea Tomorrow

Marking the opening of its 1945 activities, the Ivriah organization will have a dessert tea at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow in the home of Mrs. Meyer Weiner, 749 Independence blvd. A program of piano music will be given by the hostess' son, Arnold Weiner, and Mrs. David Wilk, cultural chairman of Ivriah, will talk on current events. Mrs. David L. Weiss is president of the society, and her assisting corps of officers includes Mrs. Irving Meisel and Mrs. Leonard C. Mishkin, vice presidents; Mrs. Maurice Marrit, Mrs. Samuel Shulman, and Mrs. Louis J. Shapiro, secretaries, and Mrs. Benjamin Cohen, treasurer.

TO WED ENSIGN

Miss Donna Hofstetter's engagement to Ensign Robert J. Baker of the naval air forces is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hofstetter of Juneway tr Ensign Baker is the son of Mrs. C. W. Butts of Oklahoma City.

St. Augustine, Miami, Argue Over History

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

The mayor of Miami said to the mayor of St. Augustine: "This hurts me more than it does you, but Ponce de Leon did not land at St. Augustine. He landed at Miami and never was within 200 miles of your city. And I can prove it."

And so has started a friendly argument which probably never will be settled, unless perhaps the two mayors should grow serious over their suggestion to lead a delegation to Italy after the war to study the Freducci map in the royal archives at Florence, Italy

David C. True, historian and Caribbean treasure hunter, came upon a copy of the map in the Congressional library at Washington, and writes in Tequesta, the annual journal of the Historical Association of Southern Florida, the article that has started the argument. The Freducci map, he says, was drawn one or two years after Ponce de Leon's 1513 voyage in search of the Fountain of Youth, and indicates that the explorer landed at the Indian village of Tequesta, where Miami is now located. He says maps indicating St. Augustine as the landing place were drawn about 100 years later from sketchy information.

The question of St. Augustine's claim as the landing spot of Ponce de Leon first arose 10 years ago, when another historian sought proof. However, the mayor of St. Augustine will wait for corroboration of Historian True's claim before he follows the Miami mayor's suggestion that the Ponce de Leon plaque in St. Augustine be transferred to Miami.

With racing gone, the week's accent is heavy on the cultural side. Altho sportsmen welcome the opening of the annual fishing tournament today, the week begins and ends with opera. The Miami Opera guild is presenting "Il Trovatore" in several performances this weekend, and on Saturday the Civic Music association will present a national operatic quartet.

Tuesday will find James R. Young and John Goette debating "We Must Accept China as an Equal" at Miami Beach for the Committee of One Hundred members and guests, and John Erskine speaking in Coral Gables on "No Ivory Tower" at the opening of the University of Miami's 12th annual Winter Institute of Arts and Sciences. Mr. Erskine is resident director of the institute, whose speakers include Dr. Warder Clyde Allee, professor of zoölogy at the University of Chicago, who will appear Jan. 29. The Century club of Coral Gables will hold its January meeting and program tomorrow, with many new arrivals among winter residents expected.

The De Lido Island colony of Chicagoans is settled for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gould Hutchins arrived in time for the holidays, and Mrs. George F. Barrett Sr., after spending the holidays in Chicago, is here for the remainder of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Dreis arrived in time to celebrate New Year's at their home on Di Lido, accompanied by their daughter, Patsy.

Miss Julia E. Russell of Chicago is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilber C. Russell, at their home in Coral Gables. She came here to complete the family circle at a New Year's reception honoring the 55th wedding anniversary of her parents. All seven daughters of the couple were here for the open house attended by more than 100 friends. Mr. and Mrs. Russell came to Florida many years ago from Middleport, O., and Mr. Russell was mayor of Fort Pierce, Fla., before they came to Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Sampson are veteran winter visitors to Miami. They are now in their 27th season here. They always returned to Chicago for the summer until transportation difficulties developed and have spent the last three summers here, at Clyde court.

Mrs. Harry P. Ehle has opened her home in Coral Gables and expects Mr. Ehle to arrive from Evanston soon.

Your point of view is changing

So long, you have felt crisp, sophisticated . . . because you have looked that way. Not this spring. For now, your point of view is changing Changing because your suit is the color of May wine. Because your eyes are misted with veiling. Because your waist looks a mere circlet. Because tip to toe, an exquisite, gentle look is yours. It's a look . . . and a feeling . . . we know you'll like. Because it's been done with great care . . . by us, for you. And, by that token, you know it is right. Because spring is coming . . . and gentle is the word for spring.

GENTLE, the high, draped neckline of the blouse, $39.95. Gentle, the jeweled clips, especially chosen for this costume. $175 each, plus federal excise tax. And gentle, oh gentle, your pink lips, your well-groomed hair.

GENTLE, but saucy, the contour of the hat. Gentle, the veil caught taut about your face. This hat, an original by Hattie Carnegie, $39.50

GENTLE, the wider shoulder of a suit, the narrowing near-nothing waist. Gentle, the color, here, May wine. Gentle, the controlled fullness of the skirt. As in this original by Pauline Trigere, $125

DOMESTIC TRAVEL

Arizona Is Proud of Its Elbow Room

TUCSON, ARIZ.

Passing the midpoint in this exciting decade in American history, the union's baby state has established itself as the fastest growing one in the nation. The 1940 census gave Arizona less than half a million people. Now it has passed the three-quarters mark and considers itself pretty adult. Of course the state's population is fairly well spread out; it averages something less than seven head of folk per square mile, but that's more than has, for example, Nevada with but one inhabitant for every square mile of territory.

Still and all, the spread-out life of Arizona is vastly different from the piled-up life of Chicago. West of the Old Pueblo lies the Papago Indian reservation. It is home to a few thousand Indians and is practically all inside Pima county. On a map it looks modest enough. Yet that one reservation is larger than the whole state of Connecticut. Farther north, those who live in the scattered settlements on the north rim of the Grand canyon, in Mohave county, have to travel thru parts of Utah, Nevada, and California just to reach their county seat at Kingman.

There's elbow room and fresh air in Arizona; neighbors are few enough to be appreciated. Your destination is at least a day away, so why hurry? The air is fresh; breathe deep of it. The sun is shining; rejoice. So people are coming to Arizona to live, to find the good life if not the goods of life. And those who cannot stay are at least making longer and longer visits and talking about the post-war day when week-end commuting by air will be possible. The Hon. Hugh W. Cross of Jerseyville, lieutenant governor of Illinois, has been spending a vacation at the Desert Willow ranch near the old pueblo. Mr. Cross recently made a trip to Nogales, where he visited an old Illinois friend, Robert Sands, who has been down by the border some 20 years now. Mr. Sands operates the popular Border club in Nogales.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Orton of Chicago are at Rancho Santa Cruz, a few miles north of the border in the valley of the same name. The ranch, one of the newer guest resorts hereabouts, is not far from the storied Spanish village of Tubac where live Ramon and his burro. Ramon boasts the only contract with the United States postal service providing for delivery of the mail by burro, and the contract provides specifically for the burro's keep, "out of the public trough."

The winter season is in full swing at Howard Miller's Wild Horse ranch, near Cortaro. Riding and outdoor excursions are on the daily agenda at the ranch, with evenings being given over to convivial entertainment in the main ranch house. Host Miller has been practicing up on his prestidigitation during the fall, and now puts on mighty exhibitions of magic which astound every one, including, apparently, himself. Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bundy of Oak Park recently arrived at the Wild Horse, as have also the James Housers of Oak Park.

Up in Phoenix, Mr. and Mrs. Blair Keyes of Chicago, accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Richard Murdock, have arrived this week at El Chorro lodge. Mr. Keyes is an able practitioner of photography as a hobby and already is engaged in putting the desert on spools of 35 millimeter film for the delectation of friends upon his return home. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kline of Chicago, stopping at the Westward Ho in the capital city, were dinner guests of the Keyes' several times during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic W. Chamberlain of Chicago and Lakeside, Mich., have left the Camelback inn in Phoenix after a month's stay. Mr. Chamberlain has returned home; Mrs. Chamberlain is stopping for a few weeks longer at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph D. Kerby, on Coronado rd. in Phoenix, before returning home.

• • •

Philip Harrington of Chicago won the annual holiday putting contest on the green at the Camelback inn. He received as trophy a year's subscription to Arizona Highways, the state's famous magazine of scenery and history. Mr. Harrington is returning home this week; Mrs. Harrington and their children, Anne and Michael, will stay on until March. The children, together with Leona Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Griffin of Chicago, and Patricia and Bob Redfearn, daughter and son of Harry Redfearn of Highland Park, took an all day pack trip the other day and hunted Indian relics. Miss Griffin soon returns to school at St. Mary of the Woods; her parents will stay on another month.

Also at the Camelback these days are Dr. and Mrs. Frank Kraft and Galen V. Knight of Chicago, and Miss Amelia Sharkey of Glenn Ellyn.

Mrs. William Burry of Lake Forest has returned to the Jokake inn on the south side of Phoenix's Camelback mountain, where she takes daily horseback rides across the desert and participates in shuffleboard, square dancing, and other diversions of the resort. George Brog and William H. Greenleaf of Chicago also are at the Jokake, where a "hoe down" western dance was on the program last night. Mr. and Mrs. George N. Diederich of Golf, Ill., are arriving at the Paradise inn early this week, according to Host Bob Evans. This is their first visit to Arizona, having been sold on the Sunshine state by Norman Jones of Golf, who used to winter with Bob Evans at the Jokake.

Artist Norman MacLeish of Chicago and his mother, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish of Glencoe, have recently completed a vacation at the Arizona Biltmore. The talented artist is brother to the poet and politician, Archibald MacLeish, recently appointed assistant secretary of state in Washington. Mrs. Andrew MacLeish has taken a house at the foot of Camelback mountain for the balance of the season.

Miss Elizabeth Woodworth of Glencoe also has been a recent guest at the Arizona Biltmore. Others there are the James G. McMillans of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Woodruff of Joliet. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McMahon of Chicago are arriving at the Biltmore this week, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Joyce of Chicago. Edward Despres of Chicago recently returned home after an early season vacation at the Ingleside inn near Scottdale.

Nevada Canyon Beauty Post-War Travel Attraction

CARSON CITY, Nev.—[Special].—Where once there were only sandy roads and desert wilderness there is today Boulder Dam national recreational area of Nevada. The area, now under the auspices of the national park service, is being programed as a Nevada post-war attraction. It contains the largest artificial lake in the world and man created fjords that vie with those of Alaska in beauty and size.

The project includes 2,700 square miles and extends along the Colorado river from the Grand Canyon national monument in Arizona to the mining Searchlight area in Nevada. Lake Mead, largest artificial lake constructed by man, has a shore line of over 500 miles. The area will have three centers of diversified recreational development. They will combine all modern facilities for sports, fishing, bathing, scenic drives, and sightseeing cruising.

New Angle in Southern Salt Water Fishing

By Bob Becker.

If a salt water fisherman should visit Florida, North Carolina, and other southern states this winter and want to use his tackle, he'll find that the popular sport of deep sea fishing has a new wrinkle at some of the ports.

This year hooking such hard fighting and edible species as the bluefish, mackerel, kingfish, etc., isn't 100 per cent sport. If you can get a ride with some captain of a deep sea fishing boat you have to work with the rod and line, catch as many fish as possible, and turn over the surplus to the skipper, who sells them in the market.

There is nothing surprising about this procedure considering the need for fish for food and the prices that deep sea species bring on the market. With the common sea bass and sea trout selling for 40 cents per pound and the delicious ocean snapper in the same bracket, the question of catching fish for food as well as having an outing becomes important. So this winter anglers who can park themselves in the stern of a fishing boat sailing out of some southern town have a chance to do an extra bit for the war effort by haulin' 'em in fast.

Fishing guests this winter will practically be members of the crew on boats down south, according to a report from one Florida east coast city in the sunshine belt. The rule is fixed: A fisherman guest has to do his best with rod and reel, gets a few fish to keep, but the majority go to market with the captain.

The fresh water fishermen who visited Munising, Mich., last summer to see if they could catch lake trout in Lake Superior won't be surprised at this system which Florida follows during the winter months, for that's exactly how the trout fishermen operated last summer. You made a reservation on a lake trout trolling boat, let out a spoon lure, and fished for the boat. The deal came out even, for the angler had fun and got food, and the skipper got practically all the fish to add to his commercial catch.

Illinois Parks Drew 2,100,000 Visitors in 1944

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. [Special].—A total of 2,100,000 visitors were registered at the state's 55 parks and memorials in 1944 season, according to a report by Maj. Walter A. Rosenfield, director of public works and buildings.

While the attendance represented an increase of 10 per cent over that for the preceding year, the park attendance is running about half of pre-war annual totals, Maj. Rosenfield said.

Starved Rock State park recorded the largest attendance of approximately 300,000 visitors. Others in the upper brackets were Black Hawk, 200,000; White Pines Forest, 200,000; Lincoln tomb, 135,000; Pere Marquette, 85,000; New Salem, 80,000, and Fort Massac, 75,000.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Double	2 spades	Pass
4 spades	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead, king of diamonds.

Have you ever discarded a trump? This would appear to be a contradiction in terms, yet it is sometimes a plausible play and indeed, as in today's case, the only way to defeat the contract.

The bidding proceeded along more or less normal lines. South's jump to game was somewhat aggressive in view of the fact that partner had shown no particular strength. However, with his favorable distribution, the bid could not be criticized. Don't get the mistaken notion that North's bid necessarily denotes weakness. A bid over a double shows that your hand is not strong [else you would have redoubled], but it does show that you are not particularly weak or you could have passed.

West led the king of diamonds and shifted to the king of clubs, which was won in dummy. The declarer must apparently lose two diamonds, a heart and a spade inasmuch as the double of the game contract suggested that West held the guarded queen of trumps. Declarer therefore decided to play the hand in an abnormal way. He returned the deuce of clubs and ruffed, then a diamond which West won with the queen.

The shift was to the nine of hearts, forcing declarer's king. A diamond was now ruffed in dummy and another club ruffed in the closed hand. Declarer then cashed the ace of hearts and led the last diamond, ruffing with the 10 of spades. As dummy's last club was led the complete holding was:

NORTH

♠Q 8 3
♦None
♣None

EAST
♥Q J
♦None
♣J

SOUTH

Declarer trumped the six of clubs with the ace of trumps. West discarded the apparently useless six of hearts, and with it his hope to defeat the contract. Declarer now led the eight of hearts which West was forced to trump with the three of spades, compelling him to lead from the queen and one trump into declarer's king, jack.

Note that if on declarer's ruff of the last club with the ace of spades West had discarded the useless three of trump, declarer could not have won the hand because the six of hearts would have been a card useful as an exit. Declarer would have been obliged to lead the eight of hearts, which East would now win, and West could not be prevented from making the queen of spades for the setting trick. Would you have thought that the six of hearts was more valuable than a little trump?

A cracked egg can be boiled if it is rubbed with salt before putting it in the water as this will seal the crack.

Designs for Needlework

The "Poppy" quilt is a favorite applique pattern which is colorful, yet simple to sew. It may be created of print or plain materials, or a combination of both. The applique blocks are set together in an alternate arrangement with plain blocks and finished with a border to match the flowers.

This cunning crocheted dress is for baby's first party. It is a dainty, lacy model which is not difficult to make, and is as durable as it is effective. The dress is crocheted in sizes from 6 to 18 months. A delicate pink or soft blue may be chosen for party wear.

For the "Poppy" quilt pattern, No. 1095, and instructions in crocheting the child's dress, No. 896, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Plentiful Eggs Help Replace Rationed Meat

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Eggs always are in peak production between January and March, and a real egg surplus seems to be on its way. More chickens have been raised to meet the needs of a nation at war, and these chickens are laying more eggs.

To avoid wasting any of this precious food, consumers will want to eat more eggs when eggs are plentiful, letting them take the place of other foods which are in shorter supply. If you eat more eggs, you can safely reduce your meat consumption, for eggs are a rich protein food. An egg a day for every adult and child is a dietary standard which can be met during a season of egg abundance.

Macaroni with Eggs.

[Serves four.]

2 tablespoons bacon drippings or other fat
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 teaspoons minced onion
4 hard cooked eggs, quartered
2 cups cooked macaroni
Salt, pepper
Fine bread crumbs, margarine

Melt fat, blend in flour, add milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until sauce thickens and is smooth. Add mustard, onion, eggs, macaroni, and seasonings to taste. Place in greased baking dish; top with fine, dry crumbs; dot with margarine, and bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes. If you have cheese on hand, add ⅓ cup of it, grated, to the crumb topping.

Eggy pies which call for whipping cream nowadays are made with whipped evaporated milk, with a commercial preparation for making cream whip, or with our war time milk-like cream plus gelatin.

Whipping Light Cream.

Here's a good way to make that light cream whip. Add 1½ teaspoons plain gelatin to ¼ cup milk, let stand 5 minutes, then heat over boiling water until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat, add 1 cup light cream, and mix. Place container in bowl of ice and water and whip with rotary or electric beater until mixture begins to hold shape around sides of bowl. Stir gently with spoon until smooth.

Eggnog Pie.

1 tablespoon plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 cup milk
3 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 or 3 tablespoons rum
¼ teaspoon salt
Whipped cream, slightly sweetened
Grated nutmeg or toasted chopped almonds

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat milk in top of double boiler. Beat egg yolks until thick and light, adding sugar gradually, and beating until sugar is well blended. Pour hot milk over egg yolks and return to double boiler. Cook to custard consistency, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add softened gelatin, vanilla, and rum. Chill until thick. Whip until fluffy and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which salt has been added. Turn into baked shell. Chill until firm. Spread sweetened whipped cream over top and sprinkle with nutmeg or almonds.

New Resort Play Clothes Bare, Bright

By Rea Seeger.

Resort play clothes collections are not for prudish or scornful shoppers. The new creations are bare and bright; the sun suits, swim suits, and many of the beach outfits try to shock the few people left in the world who sniff at considerable expanse of epidermis. What there is of material is giddily bright and cunningly draped a la sarong, even the abbreviated shorts.

Enterprising designers also have combined two colors and two kinds of materials in some of the swim suits. For instance, gleaming black satin for the back of the shorts, gaudily printed rayon jersey for the side draped front section. This print also is used for the microscopic bra and the detachable side fastened and draped skirt.

Cotton comes into the picture in a blaze of color and clever prints. Stripes are better and sometimes wider than ever before. Floral prints are all over sun suits, play clothes, shorts, shirts, and jackets, with the gayest and brightest used for very feminine swim clothes, trimmed with ruffles and other typically feminine frou-frou, usually seen on the more feminine house dresses.

Shirting in white or pastel colors, with self patterns in tiny decorative brocade effects, makes simple sunshine dresses. Cutout motifs, filled in with white net, add a definitely dressup accent to otherwise simple, white pique or white broadcloth dresses. All are made with extremely short sleeves, simple gathered short skirts, and with bodices simply designed and finished with flattering necklines.

Terry cloth jackets, or short coats, this year are made of towels so they are sturdy but expensive. Terry cloth yardage wasn't available, but some bright designer remembered what could be wangled out of bath towels. Trimmed with red or navy blue cotton braid, these coats achieve great distinction, will wear appreciably longer than the coats of thinner terry cloth material, and, altho expensive, are well worth every penny asked. These are not to be confused with the quality of the old timers, for these new terry cloth numbers are fabulously thick and handsome coats that will outlast a couple of seasons.

Shorts and shirts go on forever. This time you'll find regular shirtwaist models with long, cuffed sleeves, as well as the brief sleeved affairs, both cut with the masculine tailored details, such as collar, cuffs, pocket flaps, yokes, and the tucked center panel for neat, small pearl buttons. Colors are screamingly brilliant, and the combinations of color are equally exuberant. You'll choose either dazzling all-whites or the bold strong shades—not a single pastel is in sight.

One of the newest color combinations is the effective duet of navy blue with white: white play suits with navy blue flannel jackets; white dresses trimmed with bands of navy blue; half and half creations of white with navy, and so on. Its one of the newest of combinations available and looks smart against sun tans.

Sketched are four of the newest creations featured in a resort collection of play clothes and to be found in a swank Chicago shop. For further information call Superior 0200.

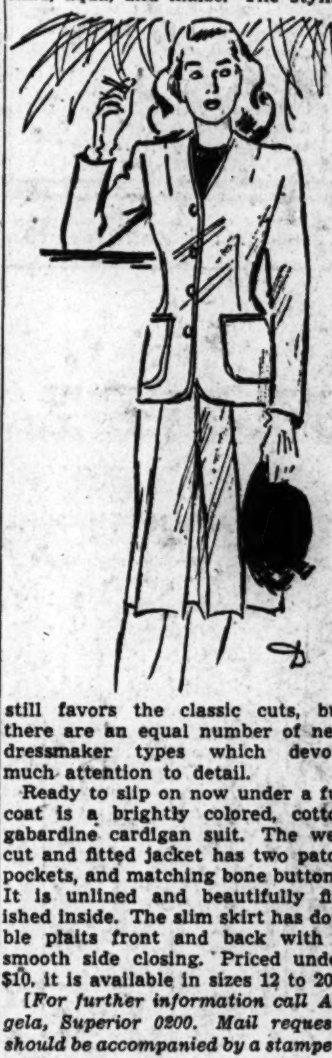
Gabardine is one of the best loved materials for spring suits or for those worn under fur coats these below zero days. They have graduated from the neutral shades, in which they were first introduced, to luscious colors of melon, fuschia, lime, aqua, and maize. The styling still favors the classic cuts, but there are an equal number of new dressmaker types which devote much attention to detail.



Ready to slip on now under a fur coat is a brightly colored, cotton gabardine cardigan suit. The well cut and fitted jacket has two patch pockets, and matching bone buttons. It is unlined and beautifully finished inside. The slim skirt has double plaits front and back with a smooth side closing. Priced under $10, it is available in sizes 12 to 20.

Science asserts: faces may be more youthful again

What would you give for a younger, more attractive skin of face and throat? Well, science asserts that, for most women, this is possible with ENDOCREME. This is because scientific ENDOCREME acts to improve the skin itself, not merely its superficial "look" . . . . improve it to a degree hitherto thought impossible. ENDOCREME, with its 7-year record of success, contains that great discovery, ACTIVOL. This ACTIVOL is the laboratory counterpart to Mother Nature's own skin-vitalizing substance. This natural substance grows less with age and ENDOCREME, absorbed under the skin's surface to rebuild cells and tissue, compensates for this loss. Thus, coarse, dry, seamy, ageing skins tend to become fresher, firmer, smoother, lovelier, more youthful again. How better can you spend your cosmetic dollars? Try ENDOCREME. Many report big improvement in only 30 days. Toiletries . . 1st . . State

Lady of the House

Revised Edition.

As I came on thru her house into the kitchen, I was startled to see Aunt Ella, a thick old cookbook balanced precariously on her gray head, taking measured steps that seemed to require setting one foot precisely before the other, toes pointing slightly down and out. I'd seen movie stars and models do it better, but this was good.

She waggled her hand at me for silence, and I thought she must be stalking a sneak thief—or at least a mouse. When she emerged from the broom closet with brush and dust cloth, the awful truth slapped me right down in the old Boston rocker. Aunt Ella was taking a "charm course!" Concerned about carriage and posture, at her age! Practicing drawing room entrance while doing her housework!

"Aunt Ella, you aren't . . ."

"Why not?" she interrupted. "Thought it'd be a good way to begin the new year. With things in the mess they are, they may need me and I ought to be fit."

With a severe scowl, "Look at the way you're sagging in that rocker, Maria! Don't you know what that does to your glamor? Here, let me show you how to sit with poise and how to rise from a chair with elegance."

"Why, Aunt Ella, when I have to rise from a chair, I just get up."

The "humph" she gave me shook the book off her head. Aunt Ella hasn't the least notion of how much charm she already has, yet I'm looking forward to—

From the world's great cities, Florence Denison [Glen Ellyn] chooses—

Chicago.

Of all the cities I have seen
To me, Chicago, you are Queen.
New York and London may be fine,
And Paris may be just divine;
But O Chicago, you are mine!

In every mood you are to me
A poem and a symphony.
I've seen your skies so bright and blue—
I've seen them gray and murky, too.
But still I am in love with you.

I've felt your winds tear at my clothes;
Your crowds have trampled on my toes.
In queues I've stood at gate and door;
Your sins, I count them by the score—
And yet you never are a bore.

Of all the cities I have seen,
To me, Chicago, you are Queen.

And Clara Seuel Schreiber likes—

Sunday Afternoon in the Loop.

Chicago's loop has smoothed its face
And smiles at you with quiet grace:
On Sunday afternoons, you know,
All sounds are pianissimo;
The surface cars pass with a hush
And on the L there's no mad rush;
The beautiful department stores
Have safely locked their many doors;
The jostling crowds have gone their way
To worship or to rest or play;
There's scarce an auto in the street,
And few pedestrians you meet;
Complacent pigeons flutter down
To see what's good to eat in town;
Coquettish rays of sunlight flirt
With tiny specks of golden dirt;
Old Michigan turns loose a gust
That fills the street with swirling dust—
Tomorrow, oh! tomorrow—yes,
Those Loop crowds will come back, I guess.

WELCH'S ORANGE MARMALADE

Our homes form the backdrop against which we play whatever role life has assigned us. And like actresses on the stage, it's often the little gestures we make that are longest remembered. Try serving that wonderful new marmalade I've been raving about, for instance . . . see what "applause" your audience gives you! It's WELCH'S Orange Marmalade . . . good enough to eat right by itself! You see, it's made from FRESH oranges (no citrus substitutes, thank you!) . . . and it's an ideal blending of jelly-ish smoothness and tender slices of orange peel, neither sharp nor bitter, but delicious in FRESH-orange flavor! Ask your Grocer for WELCH'S Orange Marmalade—made especially to the American taste!

Unfortunately, there DO come days when your face runs up little flags of inner distress. Whether these signals come from worry, late hours, or just plain weariness, you'll need expert help—especially those times you want to look lovely on short notice. And that's right where EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S White Clay Pack comes in! It's an easy-to-apply cream mask that spreads on over face and throat . . . then you leave it on until a tightening, stimulating action is felt, as the mask dries. Rinse off after 8 minutes and see how "perked-up" you feel. Then look in the mirror and you'll be amazed at how much clearer and fresher your skin appears. That's because EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S White Clay Pack has helped deflake the tired, dried and faded top-cells of your skin so as to reveal the under-skin with all its natural, clear, blushing freshness. Ask for EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S White Clay Pack at Cosmetic Counters!

Speaking of Reducing . . .

Don't ever forget that one indispensable bread that's so delicious to the taste and so kind to the "figger"! RY-KRISP, of course . . . with only 23 calories in each crisp, golden slice! RY-KRISP is wonderful in helping you keep "toned-up," too . . . for the blending of two kinds of rye, salt and water supplies just about all the energy-releasing and nerve-steadying Vitamin B1 of whole rye, and gives the system bulk needed for regularity. Ask your Grocer for RY-KRISP . . . wonderful for parties, welcome at ALL meals . . . and practically a MUST in wheat allergy diets.

DON'T shake your fists at the scales and then resign yourself to the sad, sad story they tell!! DO investigate how to get slimmer without added exercise, laxatives or drugs!! The principle is simple and effective . . . eat delicious AYDS Candy before meals according to directions. The AYDS Reducing Plan cuts down your appetite for rich, high-caloried foods so it's simple to follow the AYDS diet plans enclosed free in each box. In clinical tests conducted by doctors, more than 100 people lost 14 to 15 pounds average in a few weeks with this AYDS Vitamin Candy Reducing Plan! Cost of AYDS (vitamin fortified) is $2.25 for a month's supply . . . and your money back if you don't get results from the first box! Economy triple size only $5.50 . . . at Netcher's, Boston Store, the Fair, Mandel's and leading Drug Counters.

Your "understanding" is one of the most important cogwheels in this business of efficiency and charm . . . for what woman can "walk in beauty" if she has painful, tired and dragging feet? That's why I want to emphasize what DR. SCHOLL'S LuPADS can do for you in the way of comforting support right where most feet need it . . . at the Metatarsal Arch! LuPADS loop over the forepart of each foot so as to cushion the metatarsal arches with little spongerubber pads. These give relief to pains, cramps at the BALL of the foot, callouses and burning sensations. Best thing about DR. SCHOLL'S LuPADS is that they're feather-light and won't show even in the lightest of dress slippers. Cost is $1 at Drug, Shoe or Dept. Stores . . . or write direct to DR. SCHOLL, 213 W. Schiller St., Chicago, Ill., stating shoe size.

Luxury-Bathing at Little Cost!

Want to feel as clean as a cherub . . . and delightfully relaxed? I've just discovered a wonderful way to put myself right back on top of the world after a long, wearisome day . . . a warm bath with WRISLEY'S Bath Crystals and Water Softener! Try them . . . you'll "feel" what I mean . . . weariness gone . . . skin left soft and smooth as a baby's, and if the water's hard, there's none of that unpleasant "soap curd" to spoil the feeling of sheer "luxury." They're so economical, too . . . bet you'll stock the closet shelf to the ceiling so that EVERY member of the family can take up WRISLEY-bathing, for these delightfully fragrant crystals come in large cloth bags at a cost low enough to allow GENEROUS-using. Let each member of the family pick a favorite from Apple Blossom, Gardenia, Carnation, Bouquet or Pine. As an added tip . . . use WRISLEY'S BATH CRYSTALS to wash out lingerie and stockings. They'll last longer and have an "aura" of fragrance about them!

Resolve to Be Ideal Parent to the Children

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Did you, when you read our resolutions for the New Year, printed in a recent paper as "A Mothers' and Fathers' Litany," perhaps say to yourself with a little sense of discouragement, "O, dear, that's like hitching your wagon to a star?"

It is, I suppose, like "hitching your wagon to a star" when you aim high in your aspirations and ideals. But it is more interesting and thrilling to do so, even if it becomes hard to hold on as you get occasional bumps from the figurative air pockets of the upper spiritual air. Surely the view and the vision, and the accomplishment that follows are worth the work and the seemingly greater difficulties.

So, even tho the verses of our parents' litany may seem to aim at high ideals of near perfection; may seem, if you're having a "low" moment, to be unattainable, they aren't really so. If you'll read them again, or if you recall them, you'll see that they are actually only a description of the honest, intelligent, and loving attitudes of mind and heart which all human beings want to maintain toward each other, child or grownup.

So when the various "verses" of the litany express a high philosophy that may seem unattainable, it really is a simple, natural one, which, put into practice, makes life easier, as well as happier.

If we run over some of the aspirations put into words, that becomes clear:

There's respect—something that cannot be one sided between parents and their children.

There's praise—we know it's needed, and as easy as blame to bestow, if we'll stop, think, and use it.

There's keeping one's word, and being loyal in public to one's children. Simply part of the day's work of living.

Then there's cheerfulness and laughter—really no effort, if we don't let ourselves grow humdrum and "bogged down" by chores.

Patience, why, of course. We're patient learning a new stitch in knitting; it's just as easy and lots more repaying to be so with our sunny small Abby, or our tall Philip with the changing voice.

And take self-control, for whom can we put our best foot foremost more rewardingly than for our boys and girls? Heaven protect the children of a mother or father who is a "lion at home and a lamb abroad."

So we go on down the line of resolutions for 1945, and find them simple and reasonable. For what more simple [only we need to be reminded] than such aims as: Making time to be their friend; teaching them the wise use of freedom; letting them see that you love them [often we don't]; guiding them [not driving] and making allowances for them, and being, in general, their Rock of Gibraltar? Each day, in little things and big, these resolves become part of the tapestry of your days and your children's.

So go over again, with this relaxed and happy feeling, each resolution that I [as a parent myself] have tried to visualize and express, and I'm sure you'll see that these stars to which you are going to hitch your wagon are not so very far away, and cast a friendly, guiding light.

You'll see then that the aims of the parents' litany, instead of assuming the aspect of a struggle to become a painfully righteous and dutiful parent, take on a natural and easy guise.

Thru the Looking Glass

A thin film of protection between your skin and this cold, cold world is more easily achieved than you might think—and well worth trying if you're the dry skinned woman.

A couple of years ago one of the great beauty houses launched a wonderful product for winter use, a lotion that's creamy in texture, but not at all greasy on the skin. and that serves perfectly in protecting the skin of body, hands, and face from the drying wintry blasts. It helps keep the skin smooth, helps prevent chapping, and makes it posposible for the bath itchers to stop itching!

We always have bee fond of this product for two reasons: The first, its efficiency. Smoothed on the skin before you go out of doors, or after the bath, it is absorbed almost instantly. While it's a creamy emulsion it is not at all messy or greasy on the skin. The second reason it comes close to the head of our personal hit parade is inexpensiveness.

This is excellent for elbows and that area of the legs just above the galoshes which always gets rough and chapped when the first cold winds arrive. It does nicely for hands, too, and can even be used as a make-up base.

But its greatest usefulness for the woman—or the man—whose skin in the winter time is so dry that it itches or burns is after the bath. Some people with very delicate skins should use it twice a day, morning and night. This is simply because it won't mess linen or clothing.

After dinner, Mrs. Henry W. Bernhardt will give a book talk on A. J. Cronin's new novel, "The Green Years."

Presiding at the meeting will be Miss Eva Julstrom. Other officers of the club are Miss Henrietta Denker, who serves as vice president, and Mrs. Rose Heilig, secretary and treasurer. Miss Bernice Balk is book chairman in charge of a new book exchange which the group has set up. Each member of the club contributes one volume to the book pool for circulation within the group.
